VILLA TROOPS DRIVE ENEMY IN HARD FIGHT

Floyd Gibbons Describes Scenes During Struggle in Mexico.

WOMEN PLAY BIG PART

Floyd P. Gibbons in the following dispatch received from Gen. Villa's headquarters describes the opening fight in which the Villa forces are driving back those of Gen. Obregon. In conflict with this message, the Carranza junta in Washington yesterday gave out a message from Obregon, saying Villa is in full retreat and had passed through Salamanca with five trains loaded with wounded.

Irapuato, Mexico, April 10.—[Special.]—Gen. Francisco Villa is engaged in battle with the forces of his former friend and fellow soldier, Gen. Alvaro Obregon, the man whom he now considers a traitor to Mexico and the arch enemy of the country. The fight has been in progress for four days about the town of Celaya, thirty miles from here. The loss of life has been heavy on both sides.

Villa's artillery has been raining shrapnel into the town with terrific effect. The Carranzistas, intrenched behind moats and barb wire barriers, have been able, with their machine guns and rifle fire, to stop the fierce cavalry onslaughts which were directed against the fortifications.

About 40,000 men are engaged in the battle. Villa has 15,000, with reinforcements arriving daily. Obregon is reported to have left between 20,000 and 25,000 in the city when he departed for Queretaro. Although Villa has not taken the city his army feels victorious because, with inferior numbers, they have stopped Obregon's advance to the north, which had apparently been planned to take advantage of Villa's activity in the Tampico campaign.

Sudden Attack a Surprise.

Villa's sudden departure with such a large force from Monterey came as a surprise to the Carranzistas, who were advancing without opposition in that part of the country.

The night before he left Monterey I was fortunate enough to be a guest at a dinner given in his honor at the United States consulate. He invited me to accompany him on this campaign against Obregon.

Monday night Villa left his private train here, and with his bodyguard moved fifteen miles southeast to Salamanca. The trip was made on a train of cattle cars, the horses inside, the men and officers on top. Villa occupied the small red caboose, which was the first private car he captured in the revolution.

Brave Dangers of Wreck.

Without lights the train was rushed through the darkness on account of marauding bands of the enemy which had been reported in the vicinity. At the same time the danger of a wreck through destroyed track or bridges or the explosion of a mine under the train was ever present.

It was after midnight when we reached Salamanca. On the station platform, in the public square, and up every street leading from the station infantrymen were sleeping on the ground, their guns beside them. The cavalry was encamped around the town in the direction of the enemy.

At 4 o'clock the bugles began sounding in every quarter of the town. By 7 the entire army was on the move toward Celaya, fifteen miles away. Unable to obtain a horse, I attached myself to Gen. Manuel Banda, who was in command of the military trains that were ordered to follow the advance immediately. Preceded by a work train containing materials for the repair of destroyed track and bridges, we reached the station of Sarabia and learned that Villa, at the head of his cavalry, had encountered the Carranzistas there.

Scene of First Encounter.

There were ten wounded Villistas in a ranch house by the tracks. The men ran up from the trains following and poured into the ranch house

147,977—SMASHING THOMPSON PLURALITY

William Hale Thompson, Republican, was elected mayor of Chicago by a plurality of 147,977 over Robert M. Sweitzer, Democrat, the official figures of last Tuesday's election disclosed yesterday by the canvass. The figures are:

Robert M. Sweitzer, Dem..251,061
William H. Thompson, Rep.399,038

Mr. Thompson's official plurality is 8,353 more than was given him by the police returns on the morning after the election. It is nearly twice the highest previous plurality for a candidate for mayor—79,150, given Mayor Harrison the first time he made the race.

Mayor to Have Branch Offices to See People

Thompson Plans Conferences with Citizens in Four Parts of City.

Four branch offices for the mayor will be established by William Hale Thompson as soon after his inauguration as he can make the arrangements. There will be one each on the north, northwest, west, and south sides of the city.

These offices are to be open for a stated period each week, and at that time the mayor will be there to meet people who may have matters pertaining to the municipal government to take up with him. Under no circumstances will he listen to appeals for patronage at those offices.

Will Go to the People.

"I believe my success at the recent election was due largely to the fact that I stood for ideas in which the mass of the people believed," said Mr. Thompson while talking of the branch office plan. "I think also the success of my administration will depend to some extent on how close I keep it to the people.

"It will be impossible to see all who wish to talk over city problems at the city hall, so I will try to go to the people by maintaining branch offices. I am willing to listen to all practical suggestions, but will have no time for theories or fads."

Sergel Stops Advance Pay.

Charles H. Sergel, city treasurer-elect, and John Siman, city clerk-elect, will make some changes in the management of those offices. For instance, Mr. Sergel says there will be no advance payment of salaries to aldermen or to anybody else while he is city treasurer. That has been done for years, although it is contrary to law, and Mr. Sergel says the law is to be his guide.

Mr. Sergel expects, further, to give the city an object lesson in the matter of interest on public funds. He has promised that all interest will be returned to the treasury, that his books will be open to inspection by citizens at any time, and he believes the amount of interest he will be able to turn back will be a revelation.

Mr. Siman, Too.

One of the first questions Mr. Siman will try to answer will be the filing of nomination petitions. This has been a cause of bitter contention among politicians since the enactment of the primary law. One plan he has under consideration is to have all petitions sent in by mail, and then to appoint a committee representing all political parties which shall supervise the drawing of the petitions from the mail bag.

Mr. Sergel and Mr. Siman are to accompany Mr. Thompson on his river trip tomorrow night. During their absence they probably will work out a system for handling the city's business which will be satisfactory to all of them.

Prosperity Day Plan.

Inauguration day, April 26, will be a gala occasion if the plans on foot are carried out. It is to be known as Prosperity day. Railroads already have been interested and they are expected to bring many hundreds of visitors from outside the city to take part in the celebration. It is the aim to have all business houses and residences decorated, that the city may have a holiday appearance. Plans are being made for a big parade. Lieut. E. C. Racey will be grand marshal.

Friends of Herman Schuettler, assistant superintendent of police, are urging his appointment as the head of the police department. Mr. Schuettler is in a receptive mood. In other years he refused to be considered, but after thirty-three years' service he is willing to round out his career with a term in the superintendent's office.

THOMPSON MAKES FIRST PULPIT SPEECH TONIGHT.

Mayor Elect Will Address Members of South Park Avenue Methodist Church.

Mayor-elect Thompson will make his debut as a pulpit orator tonight. The place will be the South Park Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, of which the Rev. John P. Brushingham is pastor. The text has not been announced.

SEES HARVEST OF DEATH AND CROPS AT ONCE

R. R. McCormick Thinks Thrasher Near Trenches Strangest Sight of War.

SHELL WORK MYSTERY

(This is the first of a series of articles by Robert R. McCormick on his observations in France, Belgium, and en route to Russia. Another story will appear tomorrow.)

BY ROBERT R. M'CORMICK.
[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, March 30.—I visited the English army at a time when very little fighting was going on. If I had been there in the midst of a battle even the boundless hospitality of my host could not have found means to show me around.

If a fight had been on I should not have been able to borrow the marvelous French glass mounted on a tripod in that station where English and French lines meet and from which more of the battle line in Flanders can be seen than from any other point.

Certainly, I could not have spent an hour watching the French and German trenches where they are within 100 yards of each other. I was almost a mile to the rear, but this marvelous instrument brought me on top of them.

I could see Frenchmen crouching behind their sandbags just as well as if I had been there, and so much more comfortably. The place had been shelled very heavily. I photographed one of the shell holes; it was about six feet deep and fifteen feet across.

Armored Train Busy in Woods.

It was peaceful on the hilltop, but behind us the armored train was in action in a wood where I had been a half hour before. The German reply was accurate. Shrapnel burst in the air properly ranged. High explosive shells were bursting on the ground. On our extreme right the German line ran close in front of a cluster of farm buildings, from among which came puffs of smoke and steam.

I looked through the glass. There in plain sight, within point blank range of the French trenches, was a thrashing machine at work. If that was not the strangest sight of war, I do not know what was.

French farmers were being compelled to thrash their crops for the conqueror even under the guns of their countrymen. No German could have lived in that spot, but the French would not fire on their own people. Food may be in great demand in Germany, but as a practical matter the little acquired in this way cannot be worth the rage it lights in the French army.

We were on the extreme right of the British line. Leaving our motor as we came within sight of the German artillery observation stations, we had walked smack into two little French "75's" cocked up on end to act as aero guns.

Peeps Through Range Finder.

I had seen pictures and read descriptions of the great howitzers of the Germans, but this was my first experience of Jack the Giant Killer. I can give no better description than to say that if I had not been told what they were, I would have taken them for signal cannons.

With them was a range finder that I was permitted to look through. Naturally, I sighted it at a fixed object. It happened to be a farm some way off. I had just distinguished some chickens, and was thinking about lunch, when I was told I had seen enough. My interest in chickens was taken for something more scientific.

We took a peep into the bombproof houses of the cannoneers, quite like the dugouts trappers make along their lines and quite as comfortable as a number of the houses of newly arrived immigrants.

We turned away and suddenly found ourselves in the midst of a battery of guns of larger size.

We were discussing the extraordinary way in which they were concealed when an aeroplane came sailing over. I turned to see the "75" shoot at it, but no one stirred. They recognized an ally.

From the observation station a mile walk took us to a battery of English sixty pounders.

Shell Action Mystery to Novice.

We arrived at a cheerful moment. This very morning it had fired a shot which destroyed a German piece. The youngster who was in charge of the battery was almost demonstrative with joy. He told the story with an attempt at the

RUSSIA RIPE FOR YANKEE TRADER

Offers Vast Market Once Controlled by Germans; Sazonoff Gives Hint.

BY ROBERT R. M'CORMICK.
(Special Cable to Chicago Tribune)

PETROGRAD, April 10.—M. Sazonoff, the Russian minister of foreign affairs, in a conversation with me today, said emphatically:

"Russia wants just two things of America, the first and most important being a permanent maintenance of the close and cordial relations between the two nations; the second, an enormous quantity of all kinds of manufactured articles.

"Before the war Germany supplied from its workshops the greater part of Russia's demand, and as for commodities it could not itself supply, acted as the middleman, exacting large profits.

"German merchants readily adapted themselves to Russian customs and had an added advantage of national good will.

WILL BUY ELSEWHERE.

"After this war Russia will prefer to buy elsewhere all the goods it used to buy in Germany upon comparatively equal terms.

"Now especially is the time for American manufacturers to send agents to learn the Russian ways in order to be in a position to fill the enormous demand on the part of the civil population when the war ends.

"The Russian government will lend cordial aid to all American firms wishing to trade in Russia.

"Even before the war Russia had established a line of steamers trading directly from Libau with New York. It will encourage more such Russian companies and will also encourage American companies trading to Russian ports."

WORLD'S LARGEST PURCHASER.

Since the Russian government is the largest single purchaser in the world, American producers can see what an opportunity is offered them.

Here is offered not only a market formerly monopolized by Germany but an added market, due to the abolition of the vodka traffic.

From what I have seen I am convinced that even now there is enough demand in Russia to take up the slack in the American trade.

However, in order to get this trade, American business men must learn to adapt themselves to Russian trade conditions, which are radically different from ours.

"THIS SALOON IS OPEN." DEFI TO JUDGE LANDIS.

South Chicago Barkeeper Says He'll Keep Place Running Despite Court's Anti-Sunday Order.

John Callahan, proprietor of the Gayety buffet at 9207 Commercial avenue, South Chicago, stridently announces his intention of disobeying Federal Judge Landis' "Sunday closing order."

In a double barreled defi Callahan yesterday informed regular and potential customers that his saloon will be open today. In the window of the place he displayed a large sign:

THIS SALOON IS OPEN.
COME ON IN.

The sign wasn't enough, to Callahan's way of thinking, so he inserted an advertisement in a local newspaper.

"My saloon will not close at midnight on Saturday," ran the advertisement. "I will keep open on Sunday, too."

The saloonkeeper said he had consulted his lawyer and was prepared to make a test of Judge Landis' powers.

"The Tosetti Brewing company has no interest in this place," he asserted. "I sublease and the stock and fixtures are mine. I can't afford to close Sundays, and I'm not going to."

Real estate news will be found on pages 23 and 24 of the Want Ad section.

MISS BESLY WED WHILE VISITING

Granddaughter of the Painter Healy Marries; Surprises Mother.

Miss Louise Besly, the 19 year old daughter of Mrs. Kathleen M. H. Besly of Hinsdale, went to Denver in February to visit relatives. Among the young people she met while there was Thomas W. Osborne. On Friday the two young people went over to Littleton, where Miss Besly became Mrs. Thomas W. Osborne. Some of their young Denver friends went with them and witnessed the marriage.

Granddaughter of Artist.

The bride is a granddaughter of the late G. P. A. Healy, the eminent portrait painter, and is a member of one of the best known Chicago families. She was in Italy last winter devoting herself to the study of singing.

Two months ago Mrs. Besly sent the young woman to Denver for a visit with Mrs. De Mare, her aunt. Some weeks later Mrs. De Mare died. The young Chicago visitor remained in Denver, the guest of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stein. She was extremely popular with the younger social set of Denver. During the winter she saw much of young Osborne, who is an employé of the Stein Investment company, of which her cousin is the head.

Was to Return Soon.

Mrs. Besly had planned to introduce her daughter to Chicago society next fall. The young woman was expected to return soon to Hinsdale, accompanied by her cousin, Miss Jeanne De Mare.

On Friday, however, young Osborne persuaded Miss Besly to marry him, and, accompanied by a small party of friends, they went to Littleton, where the ceremony was performed in the courthouse. The unexpected and surprising news was wired to Mrs. Besly yesterday by Mrs. Stein.

"We had not planned to announce Louise's engagement yet," said Mrs. Besly last night.

Both Sides Gain by Violation of U. S. Neutrality

German as Well as British Ships Received Illegal Supplies.

BIG INQUIRY STARTED

Washington, D. C., April 10.—[Special.]—That definite and startling disclosures are coming soon in regard to the services given belligerent warships off the United States coasts, in violation of United States neutrality, is being predicted here.

It is asserted that while much that has been uncovered in New York recently is the result of a deliberate scheme having for its purpose embarrassing the United States and the British governments, there also is evidence, which will soon be generally known, that violations of United States neutrality have actually been occurring.

U. S. Officials Are Lax?

The statement is being circulated here that officers of the United States are more or less involved in the violations that have occurred. It is charged that there has been a laxness with respect to the neutrality regulations in quarters where such laxness would count for the most benefit to the parties concerned.

The result has been, it is said, that British warships have obtained not only small supplies, but also information from New York and other points on the north Atlantic coast.

Inquiry Started by Peters.

Andrew J. Peters, assistant secretary of the treasury, is interesting himself in these reports and went to New York this week to look into them.

At both the British and German embassies denials were made of any knowledge of violations of United States neutrality. It is now being asserted that German ships have enjoyed the benefits of services from American ports in violation of the rules of this government.

In one apparently well informed quarter this is assigned as the reason why the German ambassador has not taken up the situation directly with the department of state, lest an investigation reveal the fact that there have been violations in the interests of the Germans, as well as the British.

PASTOR STARTS TO WED 'EM, —O, MY, WHERE'S LICENSE?

C. H. Inkster, Forgetful Groom-to-Be, Rushes to County Clerk Sweitzer's Office Too Late.

The Rev. T. P. Frost, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Evanston, drew solemnly up before the couple in the Hotel La Salle last evening. Impressively he opened the sacred tome. He had begun to lift his hand up over their heads, when he leaned over toward the groom-to-be and whispered.

"You have not given me your license to marry. I must have it before I pronounce you man and wife."

Charles H. Inkster of Melvin, Ill., flushed. He looked with growing confusion at Miss Grace M. Worthington of Melvin, his bride-to-be. Through the open doors the wedding dinner could be seen steaming on the table. Flowers sent by many friends, several of whom were present, filled the room.

Charles H. Inkster gasped: "I forgot it; but, wait; I'll get one right away."

Hatless, his clawhammer flying behind him, he dashed to the county building. Closed. Out through the Chicago streets in a taxi to County Clerk Sweitzer's home. The license was obtained. Back at the hotel the guests had scattered and the bride had retired. But the wedding will take place today noon at Hotel La Salle, and no mistake.

MISS HELEN FIELD GILLETTE BRIDE OF A CHICAGO MAN.

M. D. Richards Weds Grandniece of Late Marshall Field at Hudson, N. Y.

Hudson, N. Y., April 10.—[Special.]—The wedding of Miss Helen Field Gillette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gillette of this city, and Marcus D. Richards, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Richards, 5729 Woodlawn avenue, Chicago, took place at the Presbyterian church here tonight. The Rev. Dr. Yiesley, the pastor, performed the ceremony, assisted by Harry A. Garfield, president of Williams college. The maid of honor was Miss Geraldine Osborne of Franklin, Pa., and the matron of honor was Mrs. Edward King of Newark, a cousin of the bride.

A reception followed the wedding at the home of the bride's parents. Among those present were Mrs. Henry Dibblee of Chicago and Mrs. Lyman Jones of Williamsburg, sisters of the late Marshall Field of Chicago, of whom the bride is a grandniece.

BOAT AIDING BELGIUM SUNK; 30 SAVED, 2 DIE

Attacked in North Sea and Destroyed Without Any Warning, Dutch Say.

SAILED FROM GOTHAM.

BULLETIN.
(By the Associated Press.)

AMSTERDAM, via London, April 11, 6 a. m.—The Harpalyce was torpedoed seven miles off Noordhinder. The Dutch steamer Elizabeth was first to the rescue, and altogether twenty-eight of the crew were rescued by that vessel.

Two others are believed to have been saved by the American steamer Ruby. Some of the survivors were badly wounded. The captain and first engineer are thought to have been drowned.

Survivors say they heard nothing but an explosion. The vessel sank in five minutes and there was no time to lower boats.

The captain of the Elizabeth declares he clearly saw the periscope of a submarine.

(By the Associated Press.)

ROTTERDAM, April 10.—The British steamer Harpalyce, the first relief boat of New York state and under charter to the commission for relief in Belgium, has either been torpedoed or sunk by a mine in the North sea.

The Dutch steamer Elizabeth, on its voyage from Rotterdam for New York, picked up twenty-two of the crew of the Harpalyce seven miles northeast of Noordhinder lightship and brought them back to Rotterdam. Among the rescued were the second mate and the second engineer, the latter in a wounded condition.

The Dutch steamer Constance Catherina picked up five men and took them to Nieuwe Waterweg. The steamer carried a crew of fifty-three men, twenty-six of whom, it is feared, have been drowned.

Immunity from Attack Assured.

The Harpalyce under its charter to the Belgian relief commission had a permit securing immunity from attack.

The Harpalyce, which was of 5,691 tons, was a comparatively new steamer owned by J. & C. Harrison of London. It sailed from New York on March 7 with more than 11,000 individual gifts for the relief of the Belgians and arrived at Roterdam on March 30.

It is presumed that the Harpalyce's cargo had been unloaded and that it was on the return voyage. The vessel was commanded by Capt. Frank Wamm, who, prior to his departure from New York, declared that he was not worried about mines or submarines.

FLEW BRITISH FLAG.

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—New York officers of the American relief commission said tonight that the steamer Harpalyce probably was sailing under the British flag, and not the Belgian relief flag which would give it immunity from attack by the Germans, and was on its return trip from Rotterdam.

The charter of the Harpalyce was not renewed after its arrival at Rotterdam, according to information received here, and it surrendered its relief flags after discharging the cargo.

EIGHT TRAWLERS MISSING.

GRIMSBY, England, April 11, 3 a. m.—Eight Grimsby steam trawlers overdue in the North sea were today given up as lost in shipping circles. It is believed all have been sunk by German submarines. Each carried a crew of from nine to thirteen men.

The missing trawlers are the Rio, Rapio, Reto, Sterling, Furet, Mercia, Horatio, and Argentia, vessels of from 100 to 400 tons. All were operating through regions traversed by the submarines and reported thickly strewn with German mines.

Two More Ships Are Sunk.

LONDON, April 10.—The steamer Guernsey sank off Cape La Hague yesterday, according to a Lloyds dispatch from Cherbourg tonight. No details were given.

The French bark Chateaubriand, bound from London for New York, was torpedoed and sunk off the Isle of Wight Thursday noon, according to a dispatch received here today. Capt. Grondin and its crew of twenty-four men landed at the French watering place of Le Treport.

RUSSIANS TAKE CHIEF POSITION IN CARPATHIANS

Teutons Driven from Strongest Height Between Lupkow and Uzsok Passes.

PETROGRAD, April 10.—The Austro-German armies, battling desperately to defend Hungary from invasion, have been driven back further along the whole front in the Carpathians, according to the Russian war office. The Russian forces, which have made themselves masters of the principal chain of mountains from Dukla pass to Uzsok pass, are continuing their advance and have driven the German forces from Hill 992, the strongest defense point between the two principal routes into Hungary.

The Russian column which entered Hungary through the Dukla pass also has pressed the Austrians back in the Ondawa river valley and is pushing toward Mezolaborcz in a flanking movement which is intended to make untenable the positions of the Austro-German forces defending the Lupkow and Uzsok routes into Hungary.

Russian Official Statement.

The following official statement was given out tonight:

"In the Carpathians, in the direction of Mezolaborcz, we took the offensive from positions near Czabolocz and dislodged the enemy from Wirawa. At Yoliamichova we captured Height 909, which means that the enemy has been driven back along the whole extent of the principal chain of the Carpathians in the region of our offensive.

"In the direction of Rostoki the enemy received considerable reinforcements on Thursday and made violent counter attacks. We repulsed them and captured 1,000 prisoners, including twenty officers. Our offensive from the line Nijnia-Destuszca-Volosate-Bukowecz toward the south continues, notwithstanding the excessively difficult local conditions.

"Forcing their way through snow more than seven feet deep, our troops at several points approached within four miles of the Uzsok valley. Near Rosochacz and Rozanka the enemy made two attacks, which were blocked."

Austrians Lose 26,000?

GENEVA, April 10.—The Russians made important captures of artillery and war munitions in the recent fighting in the Carpathians, according to dispatches to Swiss newspapers. In the county of Saros alone they took two batteries of twelve inch mortars, four other batteries of different calibers, twenty quick firers, and 700 shells for the twelve inch guns.

Figures received here purporting to come from the Austrian general staff place at 26,000 the losses in the battle on the Dukla-Eperies front.

Austrian Official Statement.

VIENNA, April 10.—The Austrian war department today gave out the following official statement:

"In the wooded mountains to the east of Uzsok pass severe fighting opened yesterday. German troops captured a height to the north of Tucholka, which since April 5 had been hotly contested and stubbornly defended by the Russians. One colonel and more than 1,000 men were captured and fifteen machine guns were taken.

"Strong attacks against the German and our positions in Opor valley, in the district of Stryj, failed, with severe Russian losses. Yesterday we captured 2,150 prisoners."

TALKS ON LAWS OF NATIONS.

University Professor Asserts Edicts of Germany and Britain Not Binding on Neutrals.

International law alone will furnish a way to avoid wars in the future, according to Prof. Kirchwey of Columbia University Law school and editor of the American Journal of International law, who lectured before the John Marshall Law school last evening on "America and the War." He said that no nation can of itself establish a principle of international law, nor will the violation of any principle invalidate it. Therefore neither the proclamation of a war zone by Germany nor the embargo on neutral ports by England is binding on nonbelligerent nations, he asserted.

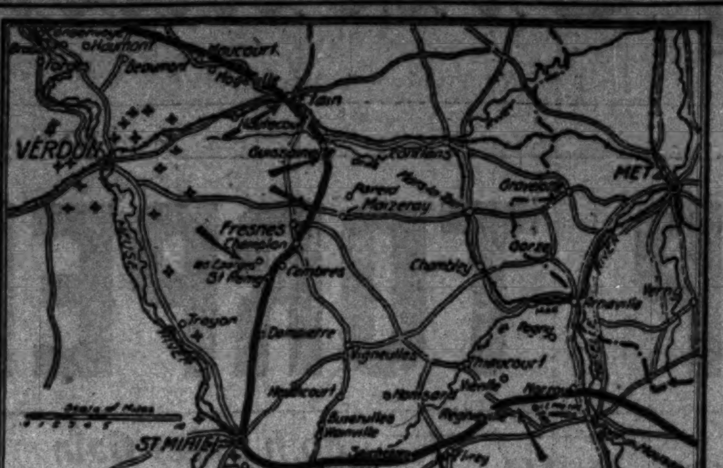
Where French Are Launching Big Attack Between Meuse and Moselle



The German salient on the heights of the Meuse at St. Mihiel has been a thorn in the side of the French since last fall, when the kaiser's forces succeeded in piercing the Verdun-Toul line and reducing Fort de Romaines. All efforts to dislodge the Germans have failed. Their presence at this advanced point has checked the French offensive toward Metz for months. Before an invasion of Germany is possible it will be necessary for Gen. Joffre to straighten out this sag in the right center of his battle line. A tremendous force has been gathered between the Meuse and the Moselle by the French to crush this German advance and sweep the Woevre district of the enemy.

DEATH AND CROPS DOUBLE HARVEST

English habit of indifference, but his voice was off key with delight.

Fortunately for us he was about to fire again to make sure that another gun had not been put in the same place on the theory the English would not look for it there. He fired two shots, but the telephone reported no results. I did not hear the sing of the shells, and I am not sure I heard them explode, as there was a good deal of firing going on, and I could not distinguish one report from another.

This whole matter of the noise of shells is a mystery to me. Some people can tell from the noise of a shell whether it is coming or going. I cannot. Except when they passed overhead I doubt if I heard them at all. Certainly I never heard the great obus at Arras until it burst in the next yard within fifty feet. I heard that.

Following the fireworks we lunched on some cake we had bought at a little country store not far from the armored train. More delicious morsels were never bought in Paris. They were of every flavor and of every shape. I mention this to show that the presence of war does not affect pastry cooks and that all of war is not hell.

Some Homeopathic Excitement.

We were now to see the real front, and in a homeopathic way to share the excitement of war. After motoring some fifteen miles we left the car under cover of a hedge and walked to another observation station.

As there are more houses than trees in this country I need not fear betraying its whereabouts when I say it was in a house. I am sure I am betraying no secret, because the enemy had struck it just before we arrived. The instruments had been removed and repairs were being made.

We were about to start for another, going by the name of "doll's house," when we learned that the Germans had preceded us to the extent of hitting it sixteen times. Finally we located the station in use and again looked over that "no man's country" between the lines. From where we stood the English trenches were distant from 300 to 500 yards in an irregular arc, which ran off in tangents to the distance. The German lines were about as far again.

Shortly after our arrival shells began to drop and explode. I got a very fair idea of the moral effect of high explosives. There is no defense against it. If it is heading your way it gets you; that's all. Walls and trenches will keep bullets and shrapnel out. You have protection. Against high explosive you have only the safety of chance.

Drives the Indians Wild.

Against a fire like this one would expect the fatalistic Indians to be the best. They are not. It drives them wild. French and English officers both told me that only thoroughly trained troops can stand it.

From the observation station we walked to a building in which were housed a hundred or so Indian troops. Whether from a feeling of loneliness or desire for warmth, religion, or custom, they were jammed in like rabbits in a warren.

The rifles and accoutrements were hung on rails overhead, and they sang together an Indian song which seemed to have as many parts as singers.

A Moment Among the Big Guns.

The day was passing. We were miles from home and the roads were soon to fill with troops advancing to relieve the men in the trenches.

But our delightful experiences were not yet over. As we tramped back to our car we came upon a battery of howitzers in action.

At the request of the officer conducting us we were allowed among the guns to gaze with bulging eyes as they were loaded, to stick fingers in our ears like children on the Fourth of July as they were fired, and like children to watch delightedly the shell start on its mission of death, mount into the heavens, and suddenly disappear.

The commander was at a telephone in the center and as word of each shot was received from the observation station would bellow through a megaphone: "Number one, one degree left, twenty feet short," and so on.

Firing at Unseen Foe Queer Work

It is strange artillery work, firing by the dial and never seeing the enemy. In a long war it must be tedious. But the tedium cannot last indefinitely, for sooner or later a sharp eyed enemy in a tower or farmhouse or possibly an airman will see the flash of a gun.

Back in the motor we find the cushions particularly comfortable. Night falls as we are on the road, and the patrols, not content with the pass of our driver, push candle lit lanterns into the limousine and look us over.

One especially particular picket asks me in French who I am in that uniform and I answer truthfully in my mother tongue that he is the living image of J. Raglan Patchmore. He is satisfied and we pass.

AUSTRIA READY TO ACCEDE TO DEMANDS MADE BY ITALY.

Report Emperor Resigned to Restoring Italian Provinces—Rome Considers Situation Seriously.

ROME, April 10.—The report that Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria is now resigned to making concessions to Italy to avoid conflict for the first time tonight received most serious consideration in diplomatic circles.

Rumors have been widely circulated and published in the Italian newspapers for a fortnight. But it was learned here tonight that a report of Austria's willingness to surrender part of the territory desired by Italy has been confirmed by authoritative sources in Vienna.

The Italian foreign office, as in the past, flatly refused to comment on the Vienna report. Officialdom has consistently refused to comment on any phase of the Austro-Italian situation or to admit that negotiations are in progress.

COTTON ADVANCES A DOLLAR

High Jump in Price Results from Active and Excited Market in New York.

New York, April 10.—Cotton went up a dollar a bale in an active and excited market in the first hour of trading today. Top figures touched $2.50 a bale above the low level of yesterday morning, and a new high record was made for the year and the movement. Values today soared to $15 a bale more than the low prices of last December.

FRENCH REPORT ASSERTS ENEMY LOST 30,000 MEN

Gives Details of Great Victory Claimed by Allies on Plateau of Les Eparges.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

PARIS, April 10.—The French ministry of war tonight made public a statement in which the magnitude and importance of the victory over the Germans on the plateau of Les Eparges is explained.

"The whole position is in our power," the statement says, "and statements of prisoners emphasize the importance of our success.

"The Germans since the end of February had in this part of the front the entire Twenty-third division of reserves. Then, toward the end of March, when that division was exhausted, the Tenth active division of the Fifth army corps, composed of the best troops of their army, was brought up. It is this division which has just lost the veritable fortress constructed on the spur of Les Eparges.

German Loss of 30,000.

"The troops had frequently been ordered to hold on at all costs; they were told that the position was of the greatest importance, and their general said that in order to keep it he would sacrifice the division or the army corps of 100,000 men if necessary.

"The losses suffered by the Germans at Les Eparges during the last two months amount to 30,000 men."

The statement adds that the French still hold and have organized their position on the plateau. No counter attacks were attempted by the enemy today, it is declared.

Stake of Battle Large.

The French, with the capture of Les Eparges, have obtained one of the main objects of their advance to the southeastward from Verdun. The position at Les Eparges dominates the plains of the Woevre.

Progress from Verdun means heavier pressure on the northern flank of the Germans holding St. Mihiel, while the southern flank is threatened by the French advance between Pont-a-Mousson and the Meuse.

It is evident that the French are not only attempting to capture St. Mihiel, which always has been a danger point since its wedge was driven into the line of the allies, but are at the same time seeking to aid Russia by preventing the withdrawal of German corps for the relief of the hard pressed Austrian and German forces in the Carpathians.

Win Trenches at Montmare.

At other points in this sector of the long battle front fierce fighting is in progress as the result of the French to strike at the great fortress of Metz.

"In the forest of Montmare we have carried another line of trenches and repulsed a counter-attack," the ministry of war says. "To the north of Regnieville we have consolidated and slightly extended our position.

"In Lorraine half a company, which last night had rushed forward as far as the village of Bezange la Grande, situated between our lines and the German lines, was surrounded by superior forces and captured."

German Official Statement.

BERLIN, April 10.—The official war office statement of today follows:

"In Champagne, north of Beausejour our troops evacuated trenches taken on April 4, which were destroyed yesterday by French heavy artillery. French attacks in this district were repulsed.

"Battles between the Meuse and the Moselle continued with the same fierceness. Near the villages of Fromesey and Gussainville, east of Verdun, which the French reported had been taken by them, no fighting has taken place up to the present. These villages are situated far in front of our positions.

"Between the Orne and the heights of the Meuse the French suffered a heavy defeat yesterday. All their attacks broke down under our fire. In the Combres hill they obtained a temporary foothold in a certain section of our outer line trenches, but were partly driven back again by a night attack. These battles continue.

Hold Ground at St. Mihiel.

"Attacks against our positions north of St. Mihiel were without success. Minor advances on the front at Ailly and Apremont were repulsed. Engagements at Flirey were of a less lively character, probably on account of the heavy losses suffered by the enemy on April 8. Two machine guns were captured by us.

"On the front at Regnieville and in the forest of Le Pretre all French attacks were repulsed. On the western border of Le Pretre forest the enemy finally lost that part of our positions which they penetrated at the end of March.

"A repeated attempt to wrest from us the village of Bezange La Grande, southwest of Chateau Salines, was paid for by the French with the loss of a company which was completely routed, while two officers and 101 men remained prisoners in our hands."

BRITAIN HOPES TO RECRUIT MILLION MEN IN FORTNIGHT.

Campaign Will Begin in London Today in All Public Parks—Backed by War Office.

LONDON, April 10.—It is estimated that another million British recruits will be added to the army as the result of the big fifteen days' recruiting boost, which begins tomorrow with the backing of the war office.

Recruiting meetings will be held in all public parks and open spaces at noon and in the evenings in every district in the city having 3,000 inhabitants or over.

FRENCH CONCEAL WAR TOLL?

Berlin Says German Authorities Have Begun Publication of Enemy's Full Casualty Lists.

BERLIN, April 10.—The Overseas News agency says:

"The Gazette Des Arbenties, which is published in the French language by German army headquarters, contains a proclamation for the enlightenment of the French population.

"The French government's reports conceal the truth in regard to the heavy losses in killed, wounded, and war prisoners. Therefore the German authorities have begun the publication of full lists of French war prisoners, followed by lists of those French soldiers who have been buried by the Germans. The first list contains 725 names.

RED BOOK ON WAR CRIMES.

Austria Publishes Volume of Official Documents Accusing Russians and Serbs.

BERLIN, April 10.—The foreign office at Vienna has published a red book, containing nearly 250 official documents concerning violations of international laws by hostile governments since the beginning of the war. These reports disclose astounding cruelties by Russian invaders and Serbian irregulars.

GERMAN LOSSES 2,000,000?

French War Office Reports Number of Enemy Killed, Incapacitated or Captured Thus Far.

PARIS, April 10.—Two million Germans have been killed, made prisoners, or so badly wounded that they will be unable to return to the battle line since the beginning of the war, according to a report made to the French war office tonight.

RENEWS CHARGE OF ATROCITIES

Louvain Professor in Chicago Tells of Women and Babies Shot.

AGED MEN ARE KILLED.

Renewed allegations of atrocities committed by the German armies in Belgium were made yesterday by Prof. Van der Essen of the University of Louvain, now lecturing at the University of Chicago. He spoke on Belgium in the war before the Prince of Wales chapter of the Daughters of the British Empire in the Auditorium hotel.

"I have recently received from Belgium," he said, "data concerning atrocities committed by German soldiers in the ruthless slaughter of men, women, children, and nursing babies.

Turn Maxims on Aged Men.

"In Dinant, my correspondent declares, twenty-five old men, ranging from 64 to 75 years, and many women over 60 years old, some being 80 years of age, were stood up against a wall and shot down with machine guns by German soldiers in revenge for victories of the French army against the kaiser's forces.

"I have data showing where forty boys and babies were shot down by these machine guns, ranging from one of 10 years to a baby only 3 weeks old, many of them being 20 months or 30 months old.

Eleven Women Shot.

"At Tamines 348 civilians were shot down, among them being eleven women and twenty-one boys ranging from 15 to 19 years of age.

"We do not receive the true statements here of what is going on over there, and probably never shall; but the condition is terrible and should be the best reason possible for universal peace forever."

New Edison
DIAMOND POINT
Disc Phonographs
(YOU NEED NO NEEDLES)

This wonderful instrument, compared to all other "talking machines," is an advance as great as that of the ocean liner over the diminutive sail boat.

Mr. Edison's invention is a revelation in sound reproduction. The new Edison through the Diamond Point Reproducer does more than merely "reproduce"—it positively duplicates to the very last degree the exact shading and quality as well as volume of all vocal tones, and instrumental tones, and does it without a scratch—or a blur; does it so faithfully that if you close your eyes you can easily imagine that the living artist is present.

Special Offer

You can easily get an Edison now. Pay nothing on the instrument for thirty days. Buy only a few records now—and thereafter pay a little each month. Our new plan permits all who are considering the purchase of a phonograph to obtain this perfect musical instrument and to enjoy its exquisite music without feeling the expense.

POPE PUTS HOPE FOR EARLY PEACE IN POWER OF U. S.

Sends Message to America to Pray and Work to End Misery in Stricken Nations.

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND.
[Special Staff Correspondent of the New York World.]

[Copyright: 1915: By the Press Publishing Co.]

ROME, April 6, via The Hague, April 8.—[Delayed.]—"Send the American people and the American press, through your newspaper, my greetings and my blessing, and convey to them my one message, which is:

Work unceasingly and disinterestedly for peace, to the end that this terrible carnage and all its attendant horrors and miseries may soon cease.

Through this your country and your press will be rendering service to God, to the world, to humanity, the thought and memory of which will live through ages to come.

If your country avoids everything that might prolong this struggle of nation against nation, in which the blood of hundreds of thousands is being shed and misery untold inflicted, then can America, by its greatness and its influence, contribute much towards the rapid ending of this terrible war.

Pray and work untiringly, unceasingly, and unitedly for peace. This my Easter message to America.

Epoch in Church History.

That is the message which Pope Benedict XV. gave me for America in a special audience and interview at the vatican today.

This special interview is the first of its kind granted by a pope since the days of Leo XIII. and only the second such audience granted by the holy father—with permission to quote it—in the modern history of the church.

The importance of the pope's utterances is enhanced immensely by the fact that he has remained silent on the war. His holiness continued:

"The entire world is looking to America to take the initiative towards peace. Will the American people see and grasp this propitious moment; will America fulfill the world's wish and hope?

"I pray for peace, my daily prayers, all my efforts are for peace, for an end to this terrible war."

Places Hope in America.

The holy father's finely chiseled, sensitive features, his expressive countenance, reflected intensely his thoughts and the sincerity of his words.

"I place my entire hopes for an early peace upon the American people and upon the influence and power it has in the entire world," he said earnestly.

"Just, impartial, and at all times neutral in its attitude and efforts to bring war to an end, America, when the favorable moment comes for the initial steps for a peace suggestion, may be certain of the utmost support of the holy see. So I have already let your president know through one of his highest friends."

Asks Aid of U. S. Press.

As I thanked the holy father for the exceptional honor to me personally and to the American press in receiving me he said:

"I am pleased to receive a representative of the American press, for which I have a high regard. I appreciate and value its potency to do good. The press of the world is a potent factor, a tremendous power that can do much toward helping prepare the way for prayer. Especially in your country does it exert a tremendous influence upon the public mind and upon public opinion.

"Will you convey to the American press my ardent wish and hope that it may use its great power and influence in the interest of God and humanity by urging the end of war and advocating the cause of peace unceasingly, disinterestedly, with an impartial spirit of fairness to all sides."

Pope Leads Work for Peace.

From what I heard and saw during the two days I passed at the vatican talking to cardinals and monsignors some of the foreign ministers to the vatican are convinced that the pope is working harder for peace than probably any one other man in the world.

My impression is that as a statesman and diplomat his holiness could give lessons to a large part of the world of diplomacy and statesmanship. A quizzical smile often plays around his mouth. We talked in an informal manner for fifteen or twenty minutes. Several times he answered my questions with raised eyebrows and eloquent movements of his hands.

"You would like to know what the attitude of the holy see is toward this war and toward peace," he exclaimed, raising his hands. "The position of the holy see is that this terrible war should be brought to an end and that peace be restored as quickly as possible, and that this attainment should be striven for with all the moral means and influence at its command."

The pope took the initiative in asking Germany if it would agree to two days' cessation of fighting in the west to permit burial of the dead. The prompt answer came from the kaiser yesterday—Easter Sunday—consenting, saying:

"Advise the British and French commanders, through their respective governments, that they should send parliamentarians to the headquarters of the German commanders with a view of arranging details and conditions defining the places where the fighting should cease for two days."

BRITAIN CALLS ON CANADA TO SEND MORE SOLDIERS.

Lord Kitchener Orders Second Expeditionary Force to Fight for the Colors.

Ottawa, Ont., April 10.—Lord Kitchener has called on Canada for a second expeditionary force.

The news was given to parliament tonight by Premier Sir Robert Borden, who said that the call had been expected for some time.

The announcement of Lord Kitchener's call was received with cheers from both parties in the house. Premier Borden told parliament that in the dominion and abroad on the pay roll of Canada 101,560 men are bearing arms or performing military service.

ROOSEVELT ASKS AID FOR SERBIA

Letter to Chairman of Relief Committee Tells of Great Needs.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 10.—[Special.]—Lack of understanding of the situation in Serbia has allowed that little nation to suffer more severely than any other country in Europe.

This is the declaration of former President Roosevelt in a letter to Dr. Breck Trowbridge, chairman of the Serbian agricultural relief committee of America, given out today.

Letter of Col. Roosevelt.

Col. Roosevelt's letter, written from Oyster Bay, is as follows:

"My Dear Trowbridge: In my judgment, there is no other one of the combatant nations so much in need as Serbia is of the kind of help your committee is giving. So far Serbia has had much less outside help than the other combatants; yet its need is far greater and that need can be more satisfactorily met by the heartfelt generosity of Americans than is the case in any other country, except possibly Belgium; and the attention of the whole world has been attracted to Belgium, whereas outsiders, and especially we in America, have disregarded the sufferings of Serbia in a way that would amount to callousness were it not due merely to lack of understanding.

Must Combat Epidemics.

"As regards most of the combatant nations there is nothing whatever to do except to help their own people grapple with their own difficulties whenever and in the way that these people wish; but Serbia has suffered infinitely more and has had infinitely smaller resources on which to draw in order to meet the suffering. There is the most urgent necessity to check the epidemics in Serbia and to alleviate the frightful misery that these epidemics due to the war have caused.

"Your committee is trying to provide not only for immediately grappling with typhus, cholera, and other diseases, which have been almost as fatal as the black death once was in Europe, but is also endeavoring to provide seeds and agricultural implements, of which there is the most desperate need, in order that the peasants may be returned to their farms from the infected concentration camps, and may be able during the coming season to raise crops, the lack of which will bring starvation to hundreds of thousands. THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

POLISH EDITOR HELD 'DEAD' FOR CRITICIZING ALLIANCE?

Stanislaus Dangel, on Trial for Views Disliked by Order, Reported to Have Been Ousted.

Stanislaus Dangel is dead, so far as the Polish National alliance is concerned, it was unofficially announced last night. As a punishment for printing alleged untruths in his paper, published in Cleveland, he was granted the full death benefit of $900 and his name was erased from the books of the order.

This news came from Dr. J. J. Jankowski, 1711 West Forty-seventh street, who is close to Mr. Dangel. It was denied, however, at the office of the alliance, where the trial was held.

The issue was the degree of freedom retained by a member of the organization in criticising its conduct. Dangel has strong socialistic tendencies. The officers of the alliance decry political ties, it was explained at the main office of the alliance, 1406 West Division street. Dangel is inclined to favor the German cause, and the tendency of the association is the other way. This led to continued criticism of the management of the alliance by Dangel. The criticism was resented.

Serb Honor for Lady Paget.

NISH, Serbia, April 10.—In recognition of the devotion of Lady Ralph Paget, the municipality of Uskab has decided to rename the finest street in that city after her. Lady Paget has been in Serbia working with the Red Cross for some time. She became ill, but is now convalescent. Her death was at one time erroneously reported.

FIND SLAIN WOMAN'S BODY UNDER STONE PILE IN BRONX

New York Police Confronted by Mysterious Tragedy—Hairs on Comb a Clew.

New York, April 10.—In the finding of the body of a woman under a small pile of stones in a vacant lot in Rosedale avenue, the Bronx, late today, the local police were confronted with one of the most mysterious murder cases in recent years.

An autopsy tonight revealed that the woman, who was about to become a mother, had been killed by blows on the skull from an ax. She was foreign born and wore a wedding ring.

Short dark hairs, which detectives thought were those of a man, were on a comb found near the body, and also inside a torn glove taken from the woman's hand.

Opposes Teaching Theory of Government That Has Tendency to Make Students Disloyal to U. S.

Marinette, Wis., April 10.—[Special.]—Referring to charges made by certain professors at the University of Wisconsin that he is attempting to interfere with academic freedom, Gov. Philipp spoke as follows at the banquet given by the Marinette Development club tonight.

"We condemn in unmeasured terms the teaching with approval of any political system or theory of government that has a tendency to make them disloyal to our form of government. If that demand is an interference with academic freedom, then let us interfere."

LORD KITCHENER EDITOR'S TARGET

London Times Accuses Him of Part in War Blunders Blamed on Asquith.

LONDON, April 10.—For the first time since the war began, open criticism in responsible British quarters of Lord Kitchener has been made during the week.

The London Times, after accusing the Asquith government of muddling and not rising to the emergency of the hour, names Lord Kitchener as sharing in the responsibility. The Times intimates that the war minister, who has been practically dictator of Great Britain for eight months, wants to run everything himself. He is censured for trying to organize the new army and to control the production of war supplies at the same time.

Lord Kitchener's centralist tendencies have previously been pointed out by British critics in under the surface ways since the war began, but no open fault has been found with his lordship's constitutional inability to delegate authority to others.

The present incident not only shows a growing impatience among Britishers at the slight progress of the war but also indicates how the pressure of British public opinion has modified the early dominance of the censorship.

Cotton Cargo in Prize Court.

LONDON, April 10.—The cargo of cotton on the American steamship Navajo, from Galveston for Bremen, was ordered to a prize court today under the order in council cutting off all trade to and from Germany. This is the first cargo avowedly detained under this order. The Navajo has been held at Kirkwall since April 7.

SAYS WILSON GREW ANGRY WHEN TOLD OF WAR DANGER.

Turns Away Army and Navy Officers Who Warned Him Year Ago, Representative Gardner Charges.

Washington, D. C., April 10.—Representative Gardner of Massachusetts gave a dinner here tonight to the reserve army of the United States. Eight of the sixteen reservists attended. The proceedings were intended to express the views of the diners on the state of the national defenses.

"The loss of life on the F-4," Mr. Gardner said, "is due to Secretary Daniels' neglect of our submarines."

Mr. Gardner related an incident, which he said occurred a year ago when "in the minds of many people there was serious danger of international trouble in the Pacific ocean." A joint board of army and navy officers, he said went to President Wilson with recommendations that certain precautions be taken immediately.

"The president gasped with anger at the effrontery of these distinguished officers," said Representative Gardner, "and peremptorily forbade the board to meet again. If this statement of mine is denied I challenge the president to permit a public investigation."

GOLF KEEPS WILSON FIT.

President Sends English Body Thanks for Set of Clubs Sent to Him.

LONDON, April 10.—The American Luncheon club has received a letter from President Wilson acknowledging the gift of a set of golf clubs made for him by James Braid, the British open champion, and sent by the club.

"I keep myself going by playing golf," President Wilson wrote, "and the clubs have been of the greatest service and pleasure to me. I really sometimes begin to think I am getting out of the duffer class."

FREES ARMY MAN WHO SLEW WIFE TO SAVE HONOR

French Officer Held Blameless by Court Martial; Woman Refused to Leave Camp.

PARIS, April 10.—Capt. Jean Herail, an English officer in the French cavalry, was acquitted today by a court martial which tried him for killing his wife at Compiegne last November because she persisted in following the army in order to be near him.

Previous to the shooting orders had been issued by the military authorities prohibiting officers and soldiers from receiving their wives during the campaign.

It was brought out today that Capt. Herail became mentally unbalanced through worry over the possible results of his wife's refusal to obey this law and leave him.

Wife Refused to Leave Him.

Seldom has a more pathetic scene been witnessed in a Paris court than that of today when Capt. Herail took the stand in his own defense. He told of the mutual love, which prompted his wife to refuse to be separated from him while he was at the front, and of his own loyal life.

"You do not realize how great was the love I had for my wife," he said brokenly. "When I believed I would be cashiered because of her determined refusal to return home, although I implored her time and again, I became mad, absolutely mad, and was driven to the last extremity."

Here the captain broke down and sobbed bitterly for five minutes, and many of the women and uniformed officers in the courtroom were so affected by the gray haired soldier's agitation that they, too, wept.

Capt. Herail went into many details of his happy married life, his testimony lasting for an hour. Eight times he was overcome and wept.

Twenty-two Years in Army.

Col. Moineville, commanding Capt. Herail's regiment, the Eleventh hussars, testified regarding the orders which had been communicated to officers forbidding wives from visiting their husbands at the front. He spoke of the defendant's excellent military service during twenty-two years in the regular army.

Maj. Bouches told the court of reading the colonel's final order to Capt. Herail that his wife must leave him or he would be courtmartialed for disobedience. When he had heard this order read Capt. Herail went into the next room, where his wife was.

Maj. Bouches then heard a shot and, rushing into the room, found Mme. Herail lying before the fireplace. The major summoned the police of Compiegne to take charge of the case.

WILSON DECIDES ALASKA ROUTE FOR RAILROAD

Line Will Run from Seward to Fairbanks and Touch Matanuska Coal Fields.

Washington, D. C., April 10.—The Seward-Fairbanks route has been selected for the government railway in Alaska, Secretary Lane announced late today.

The property of the Alaska Northern Railway company from Seward over the first stage of the journey has been purchased for $1,150,000.

The government system, the statement adds, will include a thirty-eight mile branch to tap the Matanuska coal fields. W. C. Edes is designated as chairman of the Alaskan engineering commission, which will build the road by the president's order.

The estimated cost of the entire system is given at $26,800,000. Congress provided not to exceed $35,000,000.

Secretary Lane said construction work would be begun at once, and that probably forty miles of the extension of the Alaska Northern from Ship Creek would be completed this year.

Outline of the Route.

"The route adopted is known as the Susitna route," the statement says, "and extends from Seward on Resurrection bay to Fairbanks on the Tanana river, a distance of 471 miles. This route includes the existing Alaska Northern railroad, which runs from Seward through the Kenai peninsula for a distance of seventy-one miles to Turnagain Arm. This route is to be bought from its present owners by the government for $1,150,000, $500,000 of which will be paid on July 1, 1915, and the rest July 1, 1916.

"From Turnagain Arm the route is to be extended through the Susitna valley and across Broad pass to the Tanana river and from there on to Fairbanks.

"A side line is to run from Matanuska Junction into the Matanuska coal field, a distance of thirty-eight miles. The road is to be built with its present base at Ship Creek, on Cook's inlet, and from this point it is expected that the Matanuska coal will be shipped during the greater portion of the year.

Good Bargain in Road.

"The Alaska Northern has been purchased for a price less than its physical valuation, as estimated by the Alaskan engineering commission and by the engineers of the interstate commerce commission.

"The estimated cost of construction of the entire line from Seward to Fairbanks, including the Matanuska branch, is $26,800,000."

All reports looked to the eventual extension of the system to Yukon from Fairbanks, and also discussed additional branch lines to tap other productive localities.

What the government thinks of Alaska is indicated by the allowed expenditure of $35,000,000 for a railway, or almost five times the $7,200,000 which the United States paid Russia for Alaska.

ROCK ISLAND MINORITY PETITION DENIED BY COURT.

Counsel for "Amster Committee" Sees Chance Only for One Director—Name Candidates.

Judge Carpenter of the federal court yesterday denied the petition of the minority stockholders of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad for an injunction restraining the holding of the annual meeting and the election of four directors on Monday noon. He found the state constitution does not prohibit the classification of directors and that the "Sheldon committee," representing the majority stockholders, had not taken any unfair advantage.

Following the decision Attorney Jacob Newman of counsel for the "Amster committee" of the minority stockholders asserted that under the ruling his clients, who held 130,000 shares, or 30 per cent of the capital issue, could only hope to elect one director at Monday's election by cumulating their votes. If the classification of the directors had been prohibited the minority holders would have been able to dictate at least two directors of the entire thirteen.

The committee has already announced that it will support the following men for directors: T. S. Williams, president of the Brooklyn Transit; William J. Matheson, director of the Continental Insurance company; W. Emlin Roosevelt of Roosevelt & Son, and Charles Hayden, senior partner of Hayden, Stone & Co.

Henry U. Mudge, president of the Rock Island railroad, said J. J. Mitchell, Robert Walker, and E. S. Moore would retire from the directorate in addition to Daniel G. Reid, who resigned recently.

GIRL OF 15, CLOTHES SHABBY, CAN'T GET JOB; PLANS TO DIE

Her Peculiar Actions Attract Police, Who Take Poison from Her—"Hasn't Chance," She Writes.

A policeman in the South Chicago station of the Pennsylvania railroad yesterday noticed a girl acting peculiarly on the platform. After questioning her he searched her clothing. In it he found a bottle containing carbolic acid and a note which read:

"A girl who hasn't good clothes and is the daughter of a poor person hasn't a chance in the world."

The girl is Agnes Petersen, 15 years old, 10029 Escanaba avenue. At the South Chicago police station she admitted she had planned to commit suicide. She said her father is ill and has not worked for several months.

"I can't get work because of my shabby clothes," she said.

The finder, Mr. Crane says, will receive a liberal reward.

COLORADO BILLS THAT MAY OUST LINDSEY PASSED

Senate Sends Measure to Governor; Judge Believes Executive Will Use Veto.

Denver, Colo., April 10.—[Special.]—Two bills abolishing Denver's Juvenile court and practically ousting Judge Ben B. Lindsey, its nation-wide famed child jurist, were passed on their third reading in the state senate today and go to Gov. Carlson for his signature or veto.

Say Governor Will Sign.

Although Judge Lindsey and his friends have long claimed to have the promise of Gov. Carlson to veto the measures in the event of their passage, the anti-Lindsey forces claim tonight that the governor will either sign the measures or allow them to become laws within thirty days without any action on his part.

The legislature failed to pass the two other so-called anti-Lindsey measures, but their backers now candidly confess that the two bills failing to secure passage were merely blinds or billets to be knocked down and were not really essential to secure the removal of Lindsey, which was their chief object.

Lindsey Not Worried.

Judge Lindsey when told of the senate's action said:

"The passage of the bills does not worry me at all. They were put through by the senate at the eleventh hour as it were, to gratify the personal dislike of Sabin, their author, toward me.

"Sabin, as chairman of the judiciary committee and Republican floor leader, had threatened to interfere with the measures of other members unless his anti-Lindsey bills were passed. The bills as they stand are innocuous and I have no doubt regarding their ultimate fate at the hands of Gov. Carlson."

If the governor does approve the measures, Judge Lindsey might have recourse to a state referendum.

BLUE OLD AGE SLATED TO GO

Endowment Fund of $10,000,000 to Cheer Up Retired Ministers.

"VETERANS OF CROSS."

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Blue Monday among ministers long has been banished as out of date. A blue old age now has got to go.

This is the decree of the board of conference claimants of the Methodist Episcopal church, which will hold a national convention in Chicago at the Hotel La Salle April 26-29.

The principal feature of the convention will be the promotion of a plan to raise $10,000,000 for an endowment, the interest of which will go to the fund for the support of retired ministers, their widows, and dependent children.

Veterans of Fellowship.

Another means of driving away the blues is the organization of a society called the "Veterans of the Cross Fellowship," to which every retired minister is eligible.

The founder of the society is the Rev. V. A. Cooper of Roxbury, Vt., and he will be at the convention to hold a campfire with all of the veterans.

Like the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, these veterans of the cross will swap stories of their experiences in the ministry.

The Veterans of the Cross Fellowship has officers, insignia, special service to be used at the funerals of their comrades, and a plan by which all absent or sick members are to be visited or written to.

Not Charity, but Honor.

One of the cardinal principles of the fellowship as expressed in its constitution is to advocate that retired ministers are not simply to be classed as necessitous cases appealing to the church for charity but as veterans of the church deserving of honorable recognition for service rendered.

The insignia of the society is a crown above a cross surmounted by the initials V. C. F., meaning Veterans of the Cross Fellowship.

When a comrade dies the insignia is to be placed on his coffin, together with a bouquet of flowers and the words repeated:

Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.

In promoting the national convention the Rev. Joseph B. Hingeley, corresponding secretary of the board of conference claimants, declared the church will get better service out of all its ministers if they can be free from anxiety concerning support in old age.

The clutch collar used on the Chevrolet model is one of the greatest refinements made in automobile construction in the last ten years. This is a patented device used exclusively on the Chevrolet car. It cannot be found on any other car at any price. The collar is a cored bronze casting, holding about a cupful of oil. Through the shell at proper distances special wood plugs are inserted, extending into the oil receptacle, through which plugs the oil exudes, or sweats, delivering the oil to the center of the clutch hub. The centrifugal motion then carries it to the outside, preventing friction, heating and cutting. The collar carries sufficient oil for about two months' use and can easily be refilled through a cover in the top of the casting.

EIGHT HOUR LAW FOR GIRLS URGED BY JANE ADDAMS

Long Days in Shops and Factories Impair Health, Witnesses Tell Legislators.

Jane Addams of Hull House, friend of working girls, told members of the legislative subcommittee which is investigating conditions in Chicago preparatory to action on the McCormick eight hour bill of the effect of incessant work in factories on girls.

From close companionship with thousands of these girls who come to Hull House for relaxation, Miss Addams said that long hours in the factory, working against machines, make girls into women prematurely, drives the color of health from their faces, and takes all the happiness of later years from them.

Tells Effect of Overwork.

Miss Addams was called as a witness by the supporters of the eight hour bill for women. She followed several other witnesses.

"The subject which I desire to discuss here this morning," she said, "is the general effect of overwork on girls.

"It is not a new thing for girls to work long hours. But in doing housework there is a variety—the woman turns from one thing to another—that makes it much easier. That kind of work is much different than some monotonous work at a machine, where the brain of the girl does not get a chance to work.

"The saddest part of it all is to see these girls losing their health and spirits and figures after a few years of this work. I have seen them. They have lost youth, color, and spirits which they never can regain.

Not Best of Mothers.

"They are dressed as well as the other girls—the girls of the leisure class—and in many cases are better educated. But after they have worked for several years and settle down to become mothers they are not the mothers that we would have them be. Their children are not the children that we want to build up this nation.

"This is not a new scheme—this plan of shortening the hours of labor for women. In Europe eight countries held a meeting and decided to work their women at nights. Germany regulates the hours of its women and men. In the rubber industry men are permitted to work only four hours a day. The work is dangerous to the health of these men and that is why the state takes a hand in regulating the hours.

Business Men, Step Aside!

"There is no doubt that the business man is in the saddle in this country. But he should step aside for a little while and permit social legislation which will protect the health of the women. There are other interests besides business interests. The state and society and the health of the women and the children who are to be born must be considered."

Miss Addams asked Dudley Taylor, attorney for the Associated Employers of Illinois, if he desired to cross examine her.

"We are all acquainted with your notable work, Miss Addams," Attorney Taylor replied. "We know that you are doing good. I do not desire to ask you any questions."

How Health Is Impaired.

Dr. Henry B. Favill was called by Miss Agnes Nestor, president of the Women's Trade Union league, who presented the evidence in favor of the bill, as an expert on the health of girls who have worked in factories.

"All of us are living under conditions never intended by nature," Dr. Favill said. "We all work on the theory: How much can I do, not how much ought I to do to be good for me. It is difficult to discuss a measure of this kind from the health standpoint because the effects are different.

"The hours for women are too long. I have seen these girls in hospitals and at their residences where they have gone after they have been worn out."

The Pace That Kills.

"Don't you think the law should be limited to the occupations in which it is found that eight hours is enough for a girl to work?" Attorney Taylor asked.

"There are some occupations that need such regulations more than others. The danger lies in the incessant, continuous doing of one thing. That's the pace that kills. It seems to me that almost all factory occupations ought to be limited to eight hours for women."

"Would not the inspection of the employés by physicians serve better than a blanket law covering everything?" Attorney Taylor asked.

"It would be too expensive and there are not enough qualified physicians to do the work. There are men working today in counting houses that look in the best of health. Yet a competent physician will tell you that they will die within two years."

Representative McCormick, who introduced the bill, entered the room when Dr. Favill was testifying.

"What do you think of the seventy hour week or the ten hour day?" Mr. McCormick asked.

"Those hours are too long for many professions. They should have half of Saturday off in addition to Sunday to properly recuperate."

"What is the effect on a girl's brain who feeds a press ten hours every day?" Representative Hicks asked. "Does it injure her?"

"That, to my mind, is the worst kind of work for women," Dr. Favill said.

Elizabeth Maloney, secretary of the waitresses' union, opened the hearing by reading a compilation of statistics showing that 49 per cent of the women of Illinois who work in factories work more than 9.25 hours a day.

Injury to Girl's Mind.

Miss Mary McInerney of the Bindery Girls' union told of conditions in that trade.

"I know of several plants where a girl is required to make 25,000 impressions with a foot press in ten hours," she said. "That monotonous work is what injures the minds of the girls. In other departments of book binderies the girls must move their arms so the motion squeezes their lungs. Many girls in that department are now taking cures for tuberculosis.

"The children of these girls are weak. None of their children ever will be strong enough to work in binderies."

The subcommittee will complete the hearing tomorrow, when the employers will testify in rebuttal. Then they will leave for Peoria, Chairman Leech announced.

WOMAN'S AUTO HURTS MAN.

Mrs. Deborah Kaufman Drives Machine Into Wagon and Teamster Is Injured.

Cornelius Hunt of 3522 West Harrison street, a teamster, was injured severely yesterday when thrown from his wagon by an automobile owned and driven by Mrs. Deborah Kaufman, 3938 Grand boulevard, a widow.

Falls Over Janitor; Hurt.

James Houlihan of 220 St. James court was hurt by falling over a kneeling janitor in the city hall yesterday, according to his report to the police.

POEM-WON WIFE FAILS TO STAY BY HENRY KELLOGG

Granted Divorce After Verses of Publisher Are Read in Courtroom.

Newspaper men do not, as a rule, run to poetry.

With Henry N. Kellogg, however, it is different. Mr. Kellogg has risen to high rank in the American Newspaper Publishers' association.

Given Unsought Publicity.

For the most part Mr. Kellogg's poems have been written for strictly private circulation, but a number of them made a bid for wider publicity yesterday in the Superior court. Mrs. Mazie Ayers Kellogg, for the last few months a dweller in the Hotel Sherman, introduced them in her suit for divorce.

After Judge Sullivan had heard the verses he granted her a decree.

How He Felt.

Mrs. Kellogg's lawyer read the following:

Darkness is over us, clouds black and dread
Shut out the sunshine of life now, my dear.
But though hearts are heavy we must hope still.
Let's never give up, but work with a will
To overcome what is so heart-rending now
And drive out the anguish that pales cheek and brow.

My darling, you've drunk very deep of woe;
We cannot tell why, but we know it's so.
Still, don't be down hearted, sweet little wife,
There's surely much happiness left in life.
Let's seek till we find it, nor ne'er think defeat;
Let's battle and struggle and never retreat.

Mrs. Kellogg, who complained that her husband, when he married her, was unsuited for married life, introduced other poems more intimate in tone. One began: "My lofe, my life, my all!"

MARVIN POPPLE SEEKS DIVORCE

Says Wife, Defrauded by Former Convict, Hit Him with Hair Brush.

ESCAPADE IN HAVANA.

Marvin L. Popple filed suit for divorce in the Superior court yesterday, alleging extreme and repeated cruelty.

Mrs. Popple attracted attention recently when she swore out a warrant for the arrest of Jules Waterbury, a former convict, known under many aliases, with whom she became acquainted in Havana and whom she charged with having fleeced her out of $300.

Separated Jan. 23.

The bill says they were married in Seattle, Wash., on May 26, 1911, and separated on Jan. 23, 1915. They have no children.

The bill charges that Feb. 17, 1915, Mrs. Popple, without provocation, struck Mr. Popple a "violent blow over the head with a hair brush."

Popple's Statement on Arrest.

At the time Mrs. Popple swore out the warrant for the arrest of Waterbury, Mr. Popple said Mrs. Popple left Chicago for Florida to visit a relative and recuperate her health. On the train, he said, she met a party of persons from New York, who persuaded her to accompany them to Havana.

There Mrs. Popple made the acquaintance of Waterbury, who posed as the son of a former governor and had entrée to clubs and hotels. He said she had taken a more extensive trip than she had intended and found herself short in funds. Waterbury suggested, he said, that she get a loan from an express company on her diamond ring. He took the ring and gave her money for her transportation. She and the party from New York then returned to Chicago. Later, Mr. Popple said, Waterbury told Mrs. Popple that the ring was at the offices of the express company in Chicago. It wasn't.

Do Your Painting and Decorating Now

To the Public who pay the bills:

The union painters and decorators of the city of Chicago would like to call your attention to the numerous misstatements as to our position in the present difficulty existing in our city. Our side of the proposition has never been published, so that an understanding of the real facts of the disagreement between ourselves and our employers might be had by the people who pay the bills.

At the present time we are not asking for any increase in pay, but are actually asking to be allowed to go back to work at a decrease, as we have reduced our scale of double time for night work to time and one half.

Our aim has been to see that owners and builders who pay for work should receive what they pay for, both in material and workmanship, but the employers raised serious objection to our supervision of all specifications, as it would deprive them of the chance to "skin" work as they saw fit, thereby not only simply CHEATING the person having work done, but depriving the men of work which is being PAID FOR and goes to the contractor as extra profit FOR WHICH NO SERVICE HAS BEEN GIVEN OR MATERIAL USED.

They also object to clauses in our agreement which have been state laws for several years.

The painters and decorators of Chicago have their homes and families here and are at all times working to further the interests of our city in all ways. We are making a fight for the large owner of property as well as the small one, and also for goods manufactured in Chicago, and as we think any one who employs many men and builds to give employment should at least be protected to the extent of his investment.

The statements made by various painting contractors as to the number of our men out of employment or locked out are, to say the least, misleading, as we can assure the public our men are nearly all employed by contractors who have signed our agreement and are ready and willing to do any work you may wish to have done.

The only reason why the contractors affiliated with the Decorators and Painters' club and refuse to sign up is that they want the journeyman painters to recognize the so-called Uniform Agreement. This agreement was unanimously rejected by a referendum vote of all Local Unions as being in violation of the laws of the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L.

Any one who is unable for some reason to get union painters to do his work will be supplied with a list of reliable union contractors in his neighborhood if he will call Franklin 2849.

The Light Six
As It Will Be

7-Passenger Phaeton
3-Passenger Roadster

528 Last Week

Hudson dealers last week called on the factory for 528 cars. It won't be long before prompt deliveries cease. Local buyers who want spring delivery must see the Hudson now. Last spring and summer it took weeks to get this car.

The First Choice car in every class fails to meet spring demands. There is never enough of them. Thousands of men, on this account, are forced to a second choice.

Last year we had as high as 4,000 unfilled orders. We shipped over 1,000 cars by express to men weary of waiting. This year our output is trebled, but the demand for Light Sixes has increased ten-fold. And the Hudson is still the first choice.

This ad is run by local dealers, who wish to save delays for local buyers.

Why This Demand?

The Light Six dominates today in the field above $1,100. A four-cylinder class car is out of the question. So are heavy Sixes. The Light Six has become the accepted standard type. It is likely to always remain so.

Why Hudson Leads

Hudson is the original Light Six. It introduced this type.

Its famous designer—Howard E. Coffin—first worked out the many problems connected with this construction. Special steels had to be employed. A new-type motor was essential. Aluminum displaced cast iron. A thousand parts to be re-designed.

Hudson engineers worked four years on this car. Every part has been refined to the limit. The result shows in beauty, finish, luxury and equipment. It shows in the matchless lightness—2,870 pounds.

And Hudson has been tried out. Over 12,000 cars are now running. Half of them have run two seasons. They have covered together at least 30 million miles without revealing error, weakness or shortcoming.

That is why the first choice is the Hudson. It shows itself the class car. It looks the finished product. Every question about it has been answered on the road—answered over 12,000 times.

You are bound to prefer it. In these respects, no rival compares with it. If this is true, you should know it before our local allotment is gone.

Fresh air to sleep in—and no disadvantages

The sleeping porch gives us a chance to sleep in the open air. But the usual sleeping porch has its drawbacks—big ones.

If the bed is left outside continually it gets damp—all through—and cold and dirty; also in the daytime the porch looks like a hospital ward and you have no use of it.

To avoid these difficulties many people make up and unmake their beds every night and morning or cramp themselves with makeshift cots which they carry out and in.

A Murphy-ized Sleeping Porch has none of these drawbacks.

When your porch is equipped with a Murphy Bed you have at night a real bed to sleep in—a warm, dry, clean bed, as luxurious as a bed can be.

And by day your bed is out of sight—out of the dust and dampness—and your porch is free for daytime use.

The Murphy Bed is perfectly concealed—yet it is not a folding bed nor a piece of sham furniture.

Write for description of the bed and plans for a really modern—Murphy-ized—sleeping porch.

Bran Cup Cakes

Cream a tablespoon of butter and a cup of sugar. Add a well beaten egg and a cup of Pillsbury's Best Flour (sifted with 2 teaspoons baking powder and half teaspoon salt) alternately with half cup of hot water. Stir in a cup of Pillsbury's Health Bran with another half cup of hot water. Beat well, bake in muffin tins.

Nothing you can place on your table—no matter how expensive—can approach these dainty, fragrant, mealy cakes in wholesome deliciousness.

Pillsbury's Health Bran

Pillsbury

TROOPS OF VILLA PURSUE ENEMIES IN RUNNING FIGHT

Gibbons Describes Scenes During Terrific Struggle in Northern Mexico.

looking at each other in search of a familiar face. We moved to allow the hospital train to pick up the wounded.

Beyond Srabia we came upon the scene of the first encounter. It was a hundred acre field to the south of the tracks and bounded by two irrigation ditches, twelve feet deep and dry.

There were twenty bodies stretched out on the field. A dozen or more dead horses and broken telegraph wires dangling from the poles completed the scene.

The train stopped while the linemen began repairing the wires. A large bay horse with a broken hip from a bullet was sitting on his haunches in the center of the field and whinnying. It was the only sign of life on the field. To relieve the wounded animal of its suffering Bands picked up a rifle and, standing in the door of his car, sent a bullet through the animal's head.

Again the women poured out of the trains and rushed from one body to another. A woman held in her fingers a saint's medal attached to a red wet cord. She had removed it from the neck of her dead man.

Proof of Running Fight.

As the train advanced more evidences of the running fight were to be seen. Every hundred feet along the road there was a body. Here was a horse with a broken leg lying on its side, and a few feet further was the body of the rider.

Cannon fire could be heard ahead as Banda stopped his train at the station of Guaje for telegraph orders. More than twenty bodies were lying in front of the station and in the road on either side. Two crumpled bodies at the base of a corral wall told of a surrender and an execution.

The pursuers had left five men guarding the station, which was otherwise deserted. The guards held out their left arms showing the purple calico bands which had been distributed in the morning as mark of recognition by the Villastas. Their alacrity in displaying the symbol was explained later when they told us that six of their own men who had neglected to wear the band had been shot and instantly killed by mistake as they emerged from a house in the town.

Cannon Fire Is Constant.

It was growing dusk when the train stopped beside the hacienda Crespo on the outskirts of Celaya. The sinking sun through lateral bars of red and purple was tinting the white domes of the churches in the town.

There had been fighting to an hour before around the hacienda. The bodies of horses and men were lying on the ground about the large stone ranch house. The general said the trains would remain there for the night. The cannon fire from the town sounded like the boom of ice cracking on a lake on an extra cold day. The staccato of the machine guns resembled the noise of a battery of energetic carpet beaters.

With Maj. R. R. Roque Sosa, the English speaking chief of Gen. Banda's staff, I started walking down the track in the dark in the direction of the firing. A battery of Villa's field pieces was busy near a farmhouse a mile south of the track.

Flash of Shrapnel Explosion.

The flash of the exploding shrapnel could be seen over the town. We passed the work train and left the track for the better walking we expected to encounter on the road beside it. After stumbling over the bodies of dead horses and stepping on soft flesh, we returned to the track. We stepped aside to give way to a bulky form that was plodding along slowly in the darkness. It was a soldier carrying a wounded boy on his back. He asked to be directed to the hospital train.

Further on four men were resting beside the track. Between them was a litter made of rifles, on which lay a colonel shot through the breast. Sosa sent two of the men back to the front and we took their places at the litter.

That night we slept on boxes of ammunition in Gen. Banda's box car. By daybreak the rattle of the fire had increased to a roar. Automobiles began to pull up in the road beside the car.

Shells Rushed to Front.

Their smoke and dust begrimed drivers cried out for ammunition. Soldiers and trainmen pitched in and transferred box after box of cartridges to the waiting cars, which as soon as loaded swirled away in the cloud of dust. At intervals cannon limbers and caissons would dash up, drawn on the gallop by six mules.

Packing cases would be ripped open and the shells removed to the ammunition boxes. The mounts would lash the mules, the animals would strain at the lugs, and the lumbering vehicles would jangle away to the waiting battery.

I walked through the courtyard of the hacienda house a hundred yards from the track. Dead men and horses on the ground were in sufficient number to show that the advance of the day before had been stoutly contested at this place.

An officer and two guards stood at the door of the large concrete granary. I learned from him that the hacienda had long been deserted. He did not know the owners, but said that the army needed the grain for the horses and would leave a receipt for it.

Squatting by the farm machinery under the farm sheds, women were busy baking tortillas over the coals of small fires. At one end an officer had set up his table and his servants were serving him tortillas from flour instead of corn.

There was now a stream of wounded returning from the firing line. Soldiers came by carrying blankets containing inert masses from which blood dripped into the dust. They were left in the grass beside the hospital cars to await their turn on the operating tables.

There was little groaning. These Villa's children know well how to suffer in silence.

Death of Gen. Estrada.

Four men approached the car bearing a stretcher on which was a figure covered with a blanket. It was the body of Gen. Agustin Estrada, who had been killed while inspecting his troops on the firing line. Gen. Villa has ordered that Gen. Estrada's body be taken back to Salamanca immediately.

Lieut. Col. Dario Silva, one of Gen. Villa's secretaries, approached. "There is hot fighting ahead," he said; "the Carranzistas have turned water into the deep irrigation ditches and are behind them the horses drown in the water; it is a hard position to charge; they have large forces in the city. The train is full of wounded now; it is leaving with Gen. Estrada's body. I'm going back to Gen. Villa. Adios." He wheeled his horse and galloped away.

I rode back on the engine of the hospital train. Just outside of Salamanca, when the train slowed down, the women who had been left behind rushed out and pulled open the doors, looking for familiar faces among the wounded men who were stretched out in the bunks or lying on the floor. Those wounded and able to talk were besieged with questions about the fight, about the dear ones, about their wounds.

Women Weep and Seek News.

They sought to answer all question of the anxious ones. "For the love of the Virgin, señor, tell me that my man José is safe!" cried one woman. Others plied similar questions concerning sons and husbands and sweethearts.

There were tears and sobs and sometimes curses when the answers were received. Some of the women cried for the dead, some for their sisters that were crying, and others cried for the excitement of the moment as they handed oranges and water and eggs in to the soldiers.

"The dogs, the dogs; they have shot all of mine!" an old wrinkled woman shouted to the accompaniment of oaths. I asked an English speaking Indian trainman how many sons the woman had lost. "Not sons," he said, "they were her—what you call them?—her boarders. She cooked for five of them and they are all wounded and on the way to the hospital now."

Orders Cavalry to Withdraw.

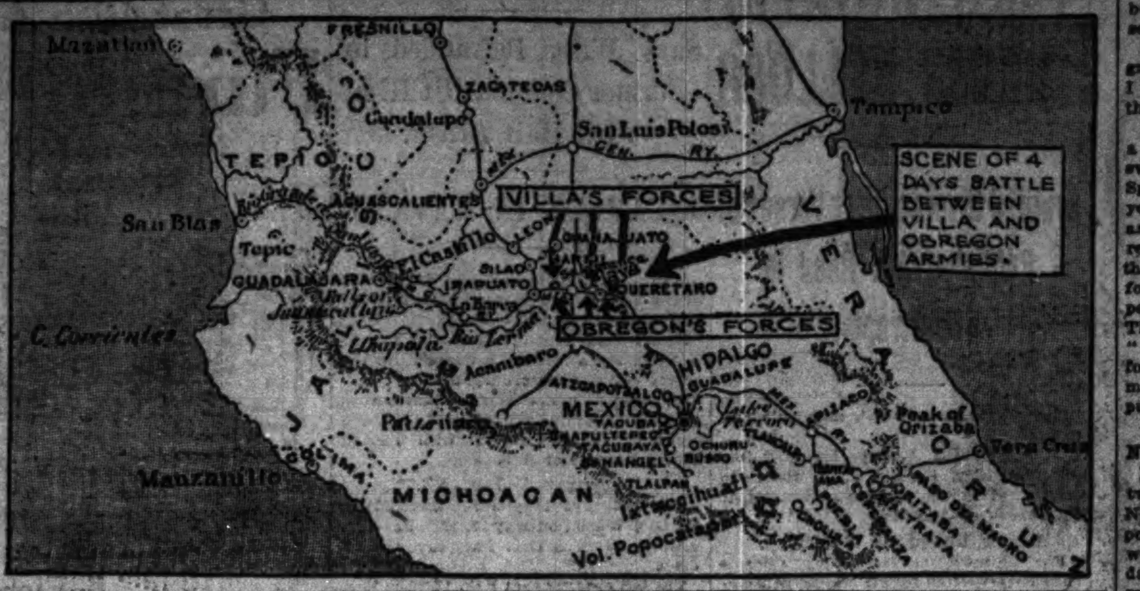
That night Villa ordered his cavalry withdrawn. The men had been fighting two days with but little food and no rest. The horses were worn out. The infantry and artillery were left to maintain the positions gained by the besiegers.

About 8 o'clock Villa himself arrived in Salamanca. His gray suit was grayer still from the dust of the road. Dust tinged were his black eyebrows, his mustache, and his hair. He was wearing his hat over his eyes in characteristic fashion and he had a white handkerchief about his neck.

For fifteen minutes he consulted with his chiefs in the telegraph office and then left with his staff for Irapauto. I accompanied. He returned to direct the organization of reinforcements which have been arriving here daily and are being sent to the front.

Today, while writing this in the telegraph car adjoining that of the generals, I looked up to see him watching me at the machine.

"Como le va, mi amigo?" he asked with a smile. "Muy bien, mi general," I answered by way of displaying my entire Spanish vocabulary. Through one of his young telegraphers, Capt. Nevares, he asked me what I thought of the fight. I replied that I was greatly impressed with the fighting spirit of his men. He spoke four or five words in Spanish and then paused and looked upward in thought. Then I heard the words, "Cuatro dias." "He says that he will take Celaya within four days," said the interpreter. "Tomorrow we expect to advance for that purpose."



Scene of Four Day Battle in Mexico Between Villa and Obregon Forces.

NUEVO LAREDO FIGHT OPENS.

Laredo, Tex., April 10.—The battle between Villa troops advancing upon Nuevo Laredo, the Mexican town opposite here, and the Carranza defenders, who went to meet them, began early today at Sanches, not more than twenty miles southwest of here.

At 10 o'clock urgent calls for reinforcements were received in Nuevo Laredo from the Carranza troops and 200 cavalrymen, virtually all the troops remaining in the city, were hurried toward Sanches.

Early this afternoon reports said the Carranza troops were being driven toward Nuevo Laredo. The Villa troops have the advantage by superior artillery.

Tampico Attack Near?

Washington, D. C., April 10.—Foreigners were reported in grave danger in Tampico tonight. Famine prevailed. The Villa forces threatened an attack and the Carranzista protection was inadequate.

The American consul appealed to Admiral Caperton to assume charge. The admiral was off the harbor on the cruiser Washington. The light draft warships Petrel and Sacramento were in the river just below the town.

It was said it might be necessary to take foreigners off.

Villistas and Carranzistas both continued to claim victory. The state department had no idea which to believe.

Oppose Entry of Huerta.

The Villa-Zapata agency here gave out a statement today stating that it would "in due course address itself to the government of the United States, indicating its view of the presence of Gen. Huerta on American territory, it being the purpose of Gen. Huerta and the Cientifico element, according to information in the possession of the provisional government, to initiate a hostile movement along the frontier, in violation of the neutrality laws, for the purpose of attempting to procure their restoration to power in Mexico."

Unofficially it was stated that the Villa agency would protest against the admission of Huerta. The representations, it was said, would be made to Secretary Bryan by Enrique C. Llorente, confidential agent of the Villa-Zapata forces.

GARRISON RAPS AT PACIFICISTS; DEFENSES WEAK

Secretary of War Urges Adequate Preparation; Calls Militarism Bugaboo.

New York, April 10.—Striking at pacificists and admitting that the present military preparedness in the United States falls far short of needs, Secretary of War Garrison, speaking tonight before the third annual banquet of the Democratic Club of Westchester County, pleaded for a concerted movement by the people for more adequate war preparation.

"Abhorrence of war and love of peace are thoroughly consistent with wise military precautions," he asserted. "There is no issue in this country and there can be none betwen militarism and pacificism. No one who is taken seriously is even suggesting militarism; and no one who suggests that peace is to be obtained through feebleness should be listened to.

Urges Proper Military Policy.

"What we are striving for, and what every wise, patriotic citizen should join in attaining, is a proper military policy. We have a standing army of less than 100,000 men, militia organized in the various states amounting to less than 120,000 men, and no other trained forces whatever.

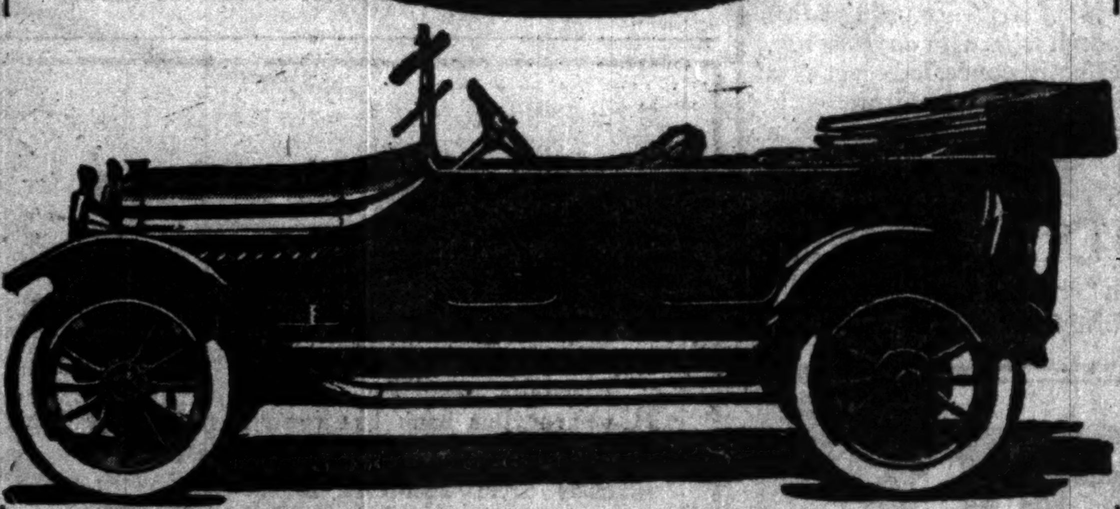
"Of the standing army a large portion are engaged in the seacoast forts, and therefore are stationary; others are in the oversea possessions, so that the mobile force in this country is less than 35,000 men. Of the organized militia, it is not expected by those who know that anything like their full numbers would respond to the call for national service. The exact question for decision, therefore, is: On what principles shall we provide for the expansion of our military forces so as to be ably prepared to meet emergencies?

Need Larger Standing Army.

"No one seriously proposes that this should be done by having a standing army of such considerable size as to meet that need. But that we need more of a standing army than we now have is a fact patent to every one who considers the subject."

Mr. Garrison said the present was an exceptionally opportune time to consider the subject because of the present struggle in Europe and because there is now no hint of any aggressive intention on the part of any nation against the United States.

1916 EMPIRE $975



ANNOUNCING OUR NEW MODEL

Months ahead of all others in its announcement, a full year ahead in the value it offers, comes the 1916 Empire—Model 33 touring car. New models have no significance if numbers alone are changed—the Empire Model 33 is an advanced car throughout, the result of exhaustive experimental work and a year's testing. We had not intended announcing this new model for months to come, but the demand of Empire dealers and customers took every one of our 1915 models before March 1—took every car we had to offer. This tremendous demand for the Empire gives the car buyer the opportunity of securing this wonderful 1916 model this spring.

In this latest Empire are combined many new features. There is that attention to detail of body design and general finish heretofore considered impossible in a car selling for less than $1,400. Size, power, quality and equipment considered separately or collectively, give the Empire Model 33 rank above all cars of its class. It retains the sturdiness, ability, economy and easy riding qualities that have made the Empire famous—and this now to an even greater degree. Note carefully these refinements.

Bigger in every way than any previous Empire—the wheel base is 112 inches. No other car selling for $975.00 has such length. This long wheel base with longer, especially designed springs, makes the Empire the easiest riding car in the American field.

Larger four-cylinder motor developing 35 horsepower, increasing again the reserve power for which the Empire cars are noted. Weight well below 2,500 pounds, assuring economy of fuel and tires.

Left-side drive with center control—greatest convenience for driver and passengers.

Streamline flush side body of extra roominess. The standard body color is Brewster green. New type upholstery of genuine leather affords maximum comfort.

Full floating single bearing rear axle—this construction takes all weight from the driving shafts and absolutely prevents oil reaching brakes.

Five-bow one-man top—accurately described by its name. Five-bow tops, with inside quickly operated curtains, have heretofore been limited to cars selling for several hundred dollars more than the Empire.

Remy electric starting and lighting fully guaranteed for one year—this starting installation requires no intermediate gears or clutches. Silent and positive in operation. No other car to our knowledge carries a manufacturer's one-year warranty on electric equipment.

Extra large, rounded top honey-comb radiator—cells of expanding type to prevent bursting in case of freezing.

Combination headlights—powerful searchlights for country driving with small dim lights for city use.

Low center of gravity because of the dropped frame—car holds road at all speeds—prevents skidding and lessens tire wear.

Study these points carefully. Do you know of any car at less than $1,400 which combines such points of excellence? And they are but a few of the many Empire extra-value features. As dealers for the Empire product in this territory we invite you to call and inspect this beautiful, sturdy 1916 model, and by demonstration prove to you the capabilities of this advanced car.

Best Piano Values

WE have made it our study for fifty years to present to the public the best values to be had in pianos. It is impossible in a brief advertisement even to touch upon many things which constitute value in a piano.

However, technical points of all kinds will be found to be adequately covered in our various catalogs and Piano Design Books. These are free upon request.

One of the points in piano buying to be borne in mind is that the pianos which we show are nearly all exclusive with us and therefore can be obtained nowhere else in Chicago.

There is no other piano that has the tone quality, the refinement and durability equal to the Steinway.

The Lyon & Healy Piano is unexcelled at its price in purity and richness of tone and in beauty of design.

In Player-Pianos the advantage of purchasing here is fully as marked, for the Pianola-Piano is the only instrument which contains those fundamental expression devices, viz.: the Metrostyle and the Themodist.

A leisurely visit of inspection is cordially suggested. You are free to make comparisons on our floors and you will find that we have a much greater interest in giving satisfaction of the most enduring kind to the public rather than in closing any one particular sale.

STEINWAY PIANOS

Our present stock contains magnificent examples of these World-Standard instruments.

The small Grand in Mahogany at $750 is a revelation.

The new Steinway Upright at $500 is also wonderfully attractive and is creating a great deal of interest.

LYON & HEALY PIANOS

When we say the Style "K" Lyon & Healy Piano at $350 is the best piano value in America for the money, we state a fact which is backed by our reputation gained by fifty years of fair dealing in Chicago.

This piano is the latest creation of our great new factory at Healy Station, Chicago.

PIANOLA-PIANOS

These instruments enable any one, without study, to play the piano in the most artistic manner. Also, they are simply unrivaled for the rendition of popular music and dance music of all kinds. There are many models, several of them selling for little more than the price of plain pianos.

Come to our Daily Concert (second floor), which commences at 11:30 A. M.

SLIGHTLY USED PIANOS

At the present time we are offering a number of remarkable values in slightly used Pianos and Player-Pianos. Nearly all prominent makes are represented.

The collection is especially rich in Steinways, Lyon & Healys, Pianolas, Washburns, Lelands, etc., etc.

A number of these pianos are practically as good as new and such instruments afford a real opportunity to make a substantial saving.

We also have second hand pianos guaranteed in good order from $90 up.

Another bargain deserving special mention is a collection of Built-for-Export Pianos. These instruments have been reduced in price $115 from the regular quotation.

Persons at a distance should send for our list of bargains. Freight on a piano is usually only about $5.

Free Moving

If you should move May 1, we would then move free a piano purchased now.

YANKEE BRIDE BRAVES BULLETS OF MEXICANS

Mrs. McNab Jonas Writes of Battle and "Execution" of Her Husband.

A year ago Mrs. M. F. McNab-Jonas left Chicago for her honeymoon in Mexico. She told a TRIBUNE reporter she wasn't a bit afraid of bullets. Yesterday her mother, Mrs. Charles H. Ritter of 4738 Magnolia avenue, received a letter which proved the bride's statement was no idle fancy.

The young couple were in Mexico City when the letter was written on Feb. 16. They had fled from a ranch near the capital and a town called Mexcoac. But they didn't flee until Mr. McNab-Jonas twice had been stood against a tree while three drunken soldiers shot at him and until the ranch house had been the center of a battlefield for three days.

The Battle Begins.

The first day's fighting occurred while the overseer, Señor Vega, was away from the ranch. It came unexpectedly, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The Carranzistas used the walls of the ranch house for protection while they fired at the Zapatistas, whom they hoped to drive back toward the mountains.

"I slammed the heavy shutters in the kitchen, locked the big front door, and we sat in the corner of the ante-kitchen, where the theater wall makes a double protection, until about 7 o'clock, when all seemed quiet again. None of the bullets came through, though they made a terrible noise when they hit the house," writes Mrs. McNab-Jonas.

"About 6:30 I heard some shouts and screams and then a continual moaning over in the direction of the hen houses. We had our supper and were just going upstairs when I heard a pounding on the door. We both went down and there stood thirty or forty peons.

Five Men Shot.

"Most of the hands had gone to the second cellar below the house during the battle, but four of them, with their wives and babies and a stranger, were trapped in the cottages and the henhouses. The Carranzistas caught them, declared they were Zapatistas, ordered them out, and shot the five men as they ran."

The next day the fighting continued, fiercer than ever, for the Zapatistas brought a cannon, mounted on a flat car, into play. The battle lasted until late into the night. The next day all the peons, save one old man, had fled, and the young American couple stole off to Mexico City to obtain protection papers from the British consul. They returned the same day, just after the fight was renewed.

They hastened up the long hill to their quarters, fearing for the safety of their overseer. They sent a peon over the fence, and just as he approached the front door three drunken Carranzistas, pushing the overseer, Vega, ahead of them, came out.

A Decided Pleasure.

"Vega explained we were foreigners, but the Indians didn't care," she narrates. "We had the pleasure of seeing three guns in the hands of three drunken Yaquis Indians leveled at us. You know, they shoot from the hip. Finally Mac [her husband] got hot and jumped over the fence to talk to them. The peons asked if I wanted to follow him; but I said, 'No; I'll stay here with you.'

"Well, I built a fire and put on a turkey. When they had done eating they told Mac and Vega to pick out the trees they preferred to stand against when they were shot. It was a sickening sight. I went into the kitchen to keep the fire going, when I heard a shot, then another shot and a groan. I went to the door, where I stood for a few seconds. I was determined that if they shot Mac I was going out for my bullet also. I opened the door, walked out on the steps, turned to where the crowd stood—and none was harmed. The groan was from a frightened peon."

Her husband came into the house to reassure her, when more shots were heard and a peon came running into the house to announce that the bandits wanted another shot at the two men.

"Once more I saw Mac and Vega stood up to be shot," she says. "In a few minutes Mac came in, and then Vega, and they said we had better vamoose, and go quickly. We did."

CONTRACTORS OBTAIN LABOR IN OTHER CITIES

All Trades Prepare for Lockout Scheduled to Begin Late This Week.

Preparations for a prolonged labor war are being made by the contractors and several labor unions in the building trades. With a lockout of 16,000 carpenters assured on Thursday, the contractors' organizations have been scouting in other cities for a large number of men to bring into Chicago to do the work for which contracts have been let.

Nonunion plasterers are being brought in to take the places of plasterers locked out a few days ago. Nonunion lathers are putting the lath on numerous buildings, and the boss painters of the city are planning to put nonunion painters to work next week.

A large fund is in the treasury of the Building Construction Employers' association to meet the expenses of a prolonged strife with the building trades which refuse to sign the uniform agreement.

The unions have been levying heavy assessments during the last month to carry the expense of strike benefits when the lockouts are enforced.

The painters have been collecting $1.60 a day from all the union painters who are working. The carpenters are collecting assessments, and it is said that with the fund of the national organization they will have almost $250,000 to start the strike. The workmen receive no strike benefit the first two weeks of strikes or lockouts. Then they are to receive $5 a week.

MODERN BOY SHY ON STANDARD SET BY BOYS OF 1885

Experts on Youth of Today Find Retrograde Movement Going On.

The boy of today is retrograding. He is not the equal of the boy of a generation ago.

This is the conclusion reached by a number of leading students in boy problems, men in charge of boys' schools, authorities upon child study, business men, heads of employment departments of large mercantile houses, probation officers, boy scout leaders, and summer camp directors. Questions were put to them by H. D. Abells, principal of the Morgan Park academy, and the information was presented to the North Central Academic association, which held its annual convention yesterday at the Hotel La Salle.

Out of 705 answers received by Mr. Abells, there were 248 points of improvement, 107 the same as a generation ago, and 350 points for retrogression.

Here Is Where Boy Stands.

Here is where the boy stands, according to the majority of boy experts, answering the individual questions:

Retrograding.	Progressing.
Arithmetic,	Physique,
Spelling,	School attendance,
Penmanship,	General information,
Gambling,	Use of liquors,
Honesty,	Initiative,
Use of tobacco,	Obscene stories,
"Swiping,"	Personal appearance,
Habits of industry,	Interest in politics,
Thoroughness,	Personal ambition,
Habit of saving,	Interest in art.
Extravagance,
Obedience,
Respect for parents,
Respect for law,
Bearing responsibility,
Respect for women
Amusements,
Purpose,
Time spent in meditation,
Religious feeling,
Reading.

The answers in regard to "purity of life" were exactly divided for retrogression and improvement.

"Few persons who answered the questions," said Mr. Abells, "believe the boy of today has the respect for his parents and the law, as had the boy of a generation ago. The answers on these topics bring out the following statements: 'Most people feel the present day home is breaking down because of lack of restraint and discipline.' 'The old boy was more obedient. He was more respectful to elders and to the law. The effects of lessening corporal punishment have been bad.'

"One man said: 'It has never been taught in the home or school. The average boy is not respectful to elders, and, as for respect for law and order, he has none.' Another says: 'Lack of the qualities of obedience and respect for elders and law constitutes a serious menace in our national life. Lessening of corporal punishment has been disastrous.' One answer was: 'The rod ought to be banished from the school. But its banishment from the home is one of the saddest and most serious facts in our modern life.'"

Morals of Boys.

"In seeking opinions of these men regarding the attitude of boys toward women, vulgar language, wholesomeness of recreation, and purity in morals, I received these statements:

"'Today it is the tango, while a dozen years ago it was a kissing game and measuring six yards of tape.'

"'To sit down and play authors would mean to the average young person something like being in prison.'

"One man who has seventy boys on his hands Sundays in a home school said that the average boy has no religious experience, and that the 'quiet hour' is an intolerable bore to him. One man said that the modern boy reads a great deal, though perhaps not so many yellow back novels, but that he is absorbed in the problem novel of the day, which is more vicious than the dime novel."

CHICAGO RESULT BRINGS OUT RUSH OF REPUBLICANS

Candidates for Governor and Other Offices Hasten to Make Selves Known.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., April 10.—[Special.]—Illinois Republicans look upon the 1916 result as an absolute "cinch." The governorship campaign is in full swing and definite arrangements are in the making in behalf of Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman as the Illinois candidate for the Republican nomination for the presidency. The Chicago mayoralty result was so surprising and so overwhelming that the crop of candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination is thriving.

State Treasurer Andrew Russel, practically is an announced candidate.

Mayor E. N. Woodruff of Peoria, reëlected by an overwhelming majority last Tuesday, is ready to announce his candidacy.

Senator Richard J. Barr of Joliet, backed by what is held to be a substantial downstate strength, is likely to be in the primary running.

Former Speaker Charles Adkins of Bement will be a candidate, with the backing of Congressman William B. McKinley and Congressman Joseph G. Cannon.

Doyle and Oglesby Willing.

Former Secretary of State Cornelius Doyle is a receptive candidate and former Lieut. Gov. John G. Oglesby may go after the governorship. Speaker David E. Shanahan is in the potential stage as yet. A successful close to his term as speaker is almost certain to develop him as a candidate for governor.

No time has been lost by Col. Frank L. Smith of Dwight and by Col. Frank O. Lowden, who are just as good as announced. Col. Lowden's friends, particularly in southern Illinois, have been active since the Chicago result became known.

They have been spurred on by the tremendous Republican victory in the city of St. Louis. The Republicans elected a complete board of twenty-eight aldermen with a Republican president of the council. The political effect in Egypt of this St. Louis Republican victory is held to be of first rate importance.

Col. Smith's campaigners are scurrying over Egypt, which, as usual, will be six months ahead of the rest of the state in political development. The old Deneen lieutenants are expecting at any moment to get the word directly that Col. Smith is considered the most available candidate from the standpoint of the Cook county organization as represented by the Deneen-West folks.

Sherman Boom in Swing.

Senator Sherman received the unanimous indorsement of the Cairo district Republican Supreme court convention for the presidency. He has been indorsed by practically the Republican conventions that have been held in central and northern Illinois. His friends in Springfield are sanguine that his name will go on the direct presidential preference ballot in Illinois without an opponent and that the fifty-eight votes of Illinois next April will be Sherman's without a fight.

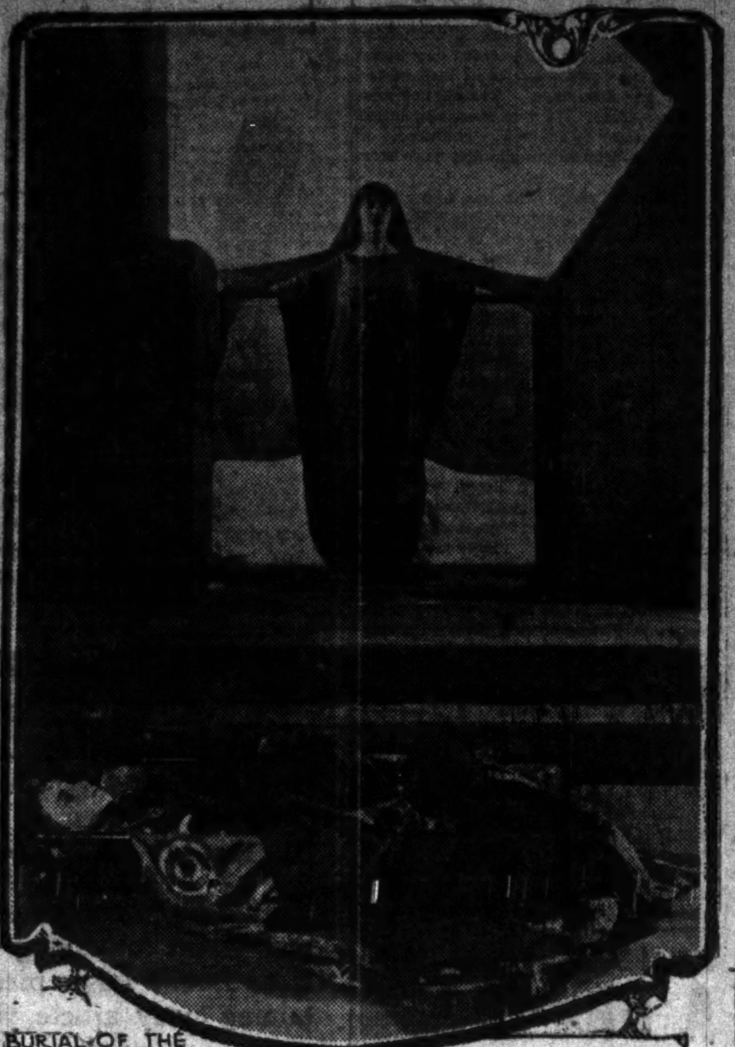
The plans of the Sherman managers have not been perfected, but it is believed that the arrangements will be made to start him as candidate in each of the sixteen district primary states next spring and that proper steps will be undertaken to get delegates for him in the states which will elect 1916 delegates under the old time methods which prevailed prior to the Chicago convention of 1912.

The Kendall county Republican central committee meeting at Yorkville today indorsed the candidacy of Sherman for president and Lowden for governor.

Unidentified Woman Hurt.

An unidentified woman, well dressed and about 45 years old, was probably fatally injured last night when she fell while attempting to alight from a moving South Deering car at Ninety-sixth street and Commercial avenue.

"Trojan Women."



BURIAL OF THE CHILD PRINCE ASTYANAX THROWN FROM THE WALLS OF TROY

The first performance of Euripides' "Trojan Women" by the players who are to present it as a peace sermon in cities and towns throughout the United States, under the auspices of the Woman's Peace Party of America, will be given this afternoon at the Blackstone theater.

Every seat has been taken, and the occasion will be twofold—a "send-off" for the players and a public farewell to Miss Jane Addams, who leaves this evening, with several other Chicago women, to join the delegation on the "peace ship" which is being sent to Holland. Miss Addams will make a brief address.

"Trojan Women" tells a tragic story of despair before the walls of the ancient city of Troy, which has been captured and sacked by the Greeks. The men are dead—only the women are left, and their lamentations over the horrors of war provide the theme of the play.

CANBY SEES BOOM TIMES BUT POINTS OUT DANGERS.

Board of Trade Head Warns Against Business Perils When War Demand Is Over.

Asserting that the signs of the times all point to a great business revival, Charles H. Canby, president of the Chicago board of trade, in an interview yesterday, warned against "overenthusiastic optimism." He declared that, despite unmistakable signs of vast business expansion, there must come an adjustment after peace is declared. Then will be the time, he asserted, when economists and business men must be particularly careful to guard against the almost certain precipitate falling off in the tremendous European demand which has thrown the balance of trade Americaward.

"There is little doubt that the post-bellum European farmer will not be able for some time to produce normal wheat crops," said Mr. Canby. "This will be due to lack of horses, implements, personal stamina, and the waste brought on by war. These facts bespeak continued export demand for American wheat.

"There probably will be 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 of acres seeded in wheat, corn, and oats in states south of the Ohio river in excess of last year. Estimates show that approximately 62,000,000 acres of spring and winter wheat will be planted. Winter wheat is not up to the 1914 condition, but it is above the ten year average. Abundant moisture has heightened prospects of bumper crops in the northwestern states. April reports place the estimate of the winter crop at 692,000,000 bushels. The spring crop ought to approximate 275,000,000 bushels with average weather.

"I am encouraged to hope the record crop of last year will be exceeded by perhaps 50,000,000 to 75,000,000 bushels."

KARL T. F. BITTER, SCULPTOR, DIES FROM AUTO INJURIES.

Well Known Artist Struck in Broadway, New York—Pushed Wife from Machine's Path.

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—Karl T. F. Bitter, the sculptor, died this morning at 6:30 o'clock at the New York hospital as a result of injuries he sustained late last night when he and his wife were run down by an automobile in Broadway, in front of the Metropolitan opera house. In attempting to push his wife to safety the sculptor was run over by the car and dragged twenty feet. Mrs. Bitter was struck only a glancing blow.

LUCEY IN THREAT TO ELIMINATE LAWYER 'SNAPS'

Will Demand His Office Conduct State Cases; Attorney General Scores Potts.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., April 10.—[Special.]—Twenty or more "soft snap" attorney jobs—now held by lawyers who represent as many state boards, departments, and commissions, are near elimination.

Attorney General Lucey indicated today that he is prepared to insist that all of the legal business of the state can and will be administered through the attorney general's office.

His first open effort will be made Tuesday before the senate appropriations committee, when he will endeavor to cut off the special lawyers who have been retained by Insurance Superintendent Potts to make a fight upon the so-called "fire insurance trust."

Takes Fling at Potts.

The attorney general was stirred to strong statement by the report published in Chicago this morning to the effect that he had given an opinion which separated Insurance Superintendent Potts automatically from his job without further delay.

Mr. Lucey said the report was untrue; that he had not given any such opinion, and finished up with this declaration regarding Mr. Potts:

"I think he is fighting windmills. He acts to me as if he was not well balanced and certainly does not give evidence of good judgment."

At the attorney general's office the information was secured that any citizen may file an injunction proceeding which would act eventually in terminating the official careers of attorneys who are drawing down all the way from $1,500 to $5,000 annually.

If supported in the Supreme court, such a proceeding, it was suggested, would end some of the jobs which have been recognized as the most effective political patronage as far back as the Yates administration and up to and including the present Dunne administration.

"Snaps" Attorney's Seek.

In the list are the attorney for the public utilities commission, headed by Everett Jennings, the special attorney for the insurance department (the present incumbent is Archibald A. McKinley, brother of the speaker of the last house); the attorney for the state board of health, the attorney for the barbers' board, the live stock board, and practically of each board or department that has been able to get by with a special legislative appropriation for this kind of service.

All of the surface indications point to an outbreak then of the subsurface strife which has split Democratic state officialdom ever since the inauguration.

Attorney General Lucey denies he has taken the initiative against Potts in any effort to compromise the Potts bill for the regulation of fire insurance companies.

The following signed statement, made to THE TRIBUNE by Attorney General Lucey, indicates the tenseness of the situation within Democratic official circles:

"There was no ruling made relative to Mr. Potts from this department. There was a ruling relative to Mr. O'Connell, but there is a difference in the two appointments. Mr. Potts was appointed in vacation, and his is an appointment subject to confirmation by the senate. Mr. O'Connell was nominated while the senate was in session, and in his case it was not an appointment, but a nomination, and is subject to confirmation by the senate. What happens in case Mr. Potts is not confirmed is a question which has not been considered.

Cites Friction with Potts.

"Relative to any dispute between Mr. Potts and this department about starting lawsuits, the facts are briefly these: About a year ago Mr. Potts retained special counsel, and without the knowledge of this department, which is charged with the duty of conducting the law business of the state, and without the knowledge of the regular counsel assigned to his department, started certain suits against a large number of insurance companies, alleging that they were a trust, etc.

"I do not care what suits he institutes against the insurance companies or any other companies. In my opinion he has an equal right to start public policy suits against the railroad companies, as he has insurance companies, but, notwithstanding that fact, nobody has interfered with him, at least nobody from this department.

"I think he is fighting windmills. He acts to me as if he was not well balanced, and certainly does not give evidence of good judgment."

Wall Paper Draperies

If there is one item of home decoration upon which we can speak with full certainty, it is Wall Paper.

Our new designs and colorings are more attractive than the initial display shown in any previous exhibition.

The prevailing penchant for gray and white and black and white in stripe and foliage designs has the preponderance of two to one in the number of new designs now shown.

Various expressions accorded these new ideas presage a genuine success for the revival of individuality in decoration.

You need a Stewart Warning Signal on your Car

Take no chances with inferior warning signals. Buy the quickest-acting, surest, high-grade, warning signal on record—the handsome, dependable, hand-operated Stewart Warning Signal.

You need the long, loud, penetrating blast of the Stewart Warning Signal for country driving, also its sharp but inoffensive tone for city use, to guard you and your family and warn others.

Insist on the Stewart because of its adjustable swivel-bracket (found on no other signal), which directs full warning blast straight ahead. Insist on the Stewart because of its long, vertical plunger for direct downward stroke—the easiest and quickest to operate. You can instantly touch or fully depress, our plunger by hand, or hit it with your arm or elbow without taking your hand from the steering wheel.

You can sound your Stewart, and get the road and be out of danger, long before you could reach a plunger built horizontally or at an angle, as on some signals. With the Stewart Warning Signal you don't have to move your elbow way back and go through two operations, to sound your warning.

The Stewart Warning Signal can be placed conveniently, inside or out, on any car and operated by hand, elbow, knee or foot.

A $5 bill now for the first time gets you the best warning signal ever made at any price—the Stewart Warning Signal. The stampede for the high-grade Stewart is fast making bulb-horns, buzzer-horns and motor-driven horns obsolete.

It adds to the appearance of every car. Highly finished black enamel and nickel. (Or black and brass for Ford cars.) Also models for motorcycles and auto-trucks.

Cadillac Standard of the World

Safest Car in the World—The Eight Cylinder Cadillac

Safety—How rare is the man who gives any thought to this when he buys a car! Most people think one automobile is as safe as another and you will find little to read in advertisements or elsewhere about safety so far as it concerns the construction of an automobile.

A friend of ours has owned eleven cars in nine years. He always drives his own car and has been known as rather a dare-devil driver—rounding corners in a hurry and dashing up to the curb for quick stops. Now he has been driving an Eight Cylinder Cadillac for some months and he wrote us a mighty interesting letter about safety.

He says he finds himself taking things easy—starting up without the usual rip and roar—going slowly around corners—avoiding chances that he used to take—seemingly driving slower and yet making better time.

The secret of it is the unequaled flexibility of the Cadillac Eight Cylinder V-Type motor—the wide range of speed without gear changing. Most cars will not run under six or seven miles an hour on direct drive. And from this minimum speed they pick up very slowly. Below ten miles an hour most drivers usually change gears to intermediate so as to get under way faster.

But gear changing is a nuisance. Men and women both like to avoid it. So they keep the car rolling at a good speed—take chances—go around corners almost on two wheels—all this to save the trouble of gear changing—all this so they will not be reminded of their car's lack of flexibility.

The driver of an Eight Cylinder Cadillac cares not a whit if he must slow down. His car will run as slowly as two miles an hour on high gear and the slightest pressure on the foot throttle will cause the car to dash ahead to a speed of thirty miles an hour in a few seconds. The Cadillac owner knows no nervous tension. He can afford to take things easy—to play safe at all times. Unless he stops the car dead he need not think of gears. A half inch movement of his foot controls the car at all speeds.

Safety will have a new meaning to you when you first drive your Eight Cylinder Cadillac. You will realize the chances you have taken in days gone by. You will find yourself driving calmly and feeling rested after driving, because the nervous tension is not needed. You will find your tires lasting longer and you will find pedestrians and your fellow motorists with a better opinion of you. And incidentally you will find yourself holding a mighty poor opinion of the obsolescent gear-changing type of car.

So fascinating is the Cadillac ease of control—so restful is this car that always does what you want it to do—that an hour's experience with the Cadillac will determine you to possess one. So wonderful is the appeal of this marvelous motor that we have sold more than twice as many cars as ever before at this time of year. When you will be able to get your Eight Cylinder Cadillac and not whether you want it—that's the question now. It is time to investigate and order if you want to be sure of the most delightful summer's motoring you have ever known.

Secretary—John T. Fitzgerald, attorney.

Treasurer—Patrick J. Byrne (reëlected), secretary to John A. Lynch, president of the National Bank of the Republic.

GIRLS FLEE SKYSCRAPER AS FIRE ATTACKS PRINTSHOP

Burning Paper and Ink Send Billows of Smoke from Upper Floors of Franklin Building.

Girls and men, employés of printing concerns occupying the thirteen story Franklin building at 720-732 South Dearborn street, fled to the street when fire started in the upper stories yesterday.

Black smoke billowed from the open windows of the upper three stories of the structure, occupied by the Franklin company, printers.

Firemen carried lines of hose and chemical apparatus into the building and up the stairs and extinguished the blaze with a loss of about $300. Burning ink and paper caused a dense black smoke which made blaze fighting difficult.

The fire started in a waste paper chute between the tenth and eleventh floors.

A Beautiful Residential Subdivision Now Being Offered at

Very Low Prices—Easy Terms

The first parcel of this great subdivision, bounded on the north by 57th St., on the east by Western Ave., on the south by 61st St., and on the west by Rockwell St., we are now offering to the public of Chicago for only 22 days—until midnight of Sunday, May 2nd—at the present prices. These prices are far below what they normally should be, considering the location, the improvements and the prices at which like property in other South Side districts not as well located is selling.

This is the greatest opportunity the people of Chicago will ever have to buy property so near the center of population—miles within the city limits—property accessible by fine transportation to such a great area and to so many hundreds of thousands of people. It is a big chance to buy property in the city of Chicago that possesses wonderful possibilities—property that will increase in demand and price rapidly.

We are offering this most excellent property to the thousands of people who work in the industries of the South and Southwest sides who want a comfortable home spot—a beautiful place in which to live and one that will be convenient to their work. We are offering this property to all of Chicago as a Real Estate Investment that will increase in value more rapidly than property in any other part of this great city. We are offering this property to the hundreds of thousands of people who have money in the savings bank which is earning only a small per cent; and we are prepared to show these people just why this is the best place for their savings money.

Get a map! It will convince you of the value of this property—it will show you its location and excellent transportation facilities. It will show you the car lines on 59th Street and Western Avenue, making the property accessible by street car (with 5c fare) to employes of the Crane Company, Clearing, Stock Yards District, the Central Manufacturing District, the Kenwood Manufacturing District, Dickinson Seed Company, the Long Distance Telephone Exchange, the Liquid Carbonic Co., the Grand Trunk Car Repair Shop, Pennsylvania Railroad (Corwith Yards), the Santa Fe Railroad Yards, the McCormick Harvester Company, Western Foundry Co., Chicago Metal Bearing Co., the Western Car and Foundry Co., Chicago Lawn, a great many Railway Equipment Companies and various large Lumber Interests. The many thousands of employes of these various industries demand a home spot like the one we are now placing on the market.

In this subdivision we combine beauty with accessibility to the many industries and business districts located in the South and Southwest sections of Chicago. Great arteries of travel and commerce are the main boundary lines of our subdivision. Within these boundaries is confined an exclusive residential section, with paved streets, a 15 ft. parkway planted with grass, trees and shrubs, each lot protected by building restrictions which will insure its future value. The improvements include an unusually deep drainage system, and service pipes for same beyond curb to lot line, 6 foot sidewalks, streets paved with asphalt-macadam, water and gas mains and a beautiful lighting system.

All improvements are in and paid for. Business lots 25x125 feet, residence lots 30x125 feet. There is not a lot in the whole subdivision more than two blocks from a car line with 5c fare to all parts of Chicago.

G. O. P. WILL GIVE MOOSE CHANCE AT JUDGESHIPS

C. M. Thomson and A. M. Kales Likely Candidates for Bench Honors.

Progressives will receive recognition in the makeup of the Republican judicial ticket to be submitted to the voters June 7. That assurance was given yesterday. Republicans feel the Progressives proved their loyalty to the city ticket last Tuesday and have earned a share of the judicial honors.

Reports are that Charles M. Thomson, former congressman from the Tenth district, and Albert M. Kales, who was Progressive nominee for Probate court judge last fall, may have nominations for Circuit court judgeships if they want them.

Friends of the incoming city administration feel kindly toward Mr. Thomson for the promptness with which he indorsed the city ticket during the campaign. Mr. Kales is considered excellent judicial timber, and, further, because of his residence in Winnetka, would represent the country districts.

Curran Also Mentioned.

John M. Curran, a former Progressive member of the legislature, has been talked of for a judgeship, but there is a barrier in his case which may be difficult to overcome in that his residence also is in Winnetka. It is not believed that two judgeship candidates will be taken from this suburb, and the feeling is Mr. Kales will have the call on the place if he wants it.

If the views expressed privately by Republican leaders reflect the opinion of the party generally there is little doubt Republicans will nominate candidates for all the judgeships. There are few who advocate a nonpartisan election.

G. O. P. Needs the Places.

Politics is the only reason given for this opposition to nonpartisanship. Republicans are shut out of everything—national, state, county, and sanitary district—and will have only a few appointments under the new city administration. There are so many of them clamoring for places it is said the leaders have been driven to the partisan judicial ticket idea for self-protection.

MISSING ON OVERLAND DRIVE

Chicagoan Who Left with Team for Michigan May Have Been Tramps' Victim.

George L. Butenuth, 30, of 1638 Hancock avenue, who left Chicago April 6 with a wagon and team of horses to drive to his farm near Lawton, Mich., has failed to arrive there.

The police yesterday were asked to investigate by a friend who says he fears Butenuth, who was a telephone lineman, has been killed by tramps and his outfit stolen.

His wife and three children have been on the farm all winter.

MISS THERESA GATELY

More than $700 was obtained for the work of the women's board of the Stevens memorial, which maintains a house of shelter for destitute women and children, by a card party in the ballroom of the Hotel La Salle yesterday afternoon. Previously the organization has conducted bazaars, but in future the card party will be made an annual affair.

Miss Theresa Gately is one of the young women who assisted in marking the score cards. The general chairman of the affair was Mrs. Charles Berrien Hall. She was assisted by Mrs. Edward Lewis Phelps.

LUCEY ATTACKS JUDGE'S ACT

Attorney General Sues to Stop Practice of Setting Aside Indeterminate Sentence.

Springfield, Ill., April 10.—In a motion filed in the Supreme court today for leave to file a petition in mandamus against Judge Charles M. Walker of the Chicago Criminal court, Attorney General P. J. Lucey aimed at the practice of criminal court judges in setting aside the indeterminate sentence act.

Judge Walker sentenced Frank Kruska on a charge of burglary after an agreement had been made with the state's attorney and Kruska's attorney that the convict should be released after one year. A motion to vacate judgment was entered at the time sentence was passed, and after Kruska had served a year a writ of habeas corpus was filed and the motion to vacate judgment was revived.

The attorney general declares the proceedings were illegal and asks the Supreme court to order the lower court to dismiss the pending proceedings and send Kruska back to the penitentiary.

Reinberg Asks Advice on Jail.

President Peter Reinberg of the county board yesterday invited public officials and public spirited citizens to meet with the county board tomorrow to consider the expediency of a new county jail. Questions of location, plans, and other matters that may arise in connection with its construction will be discussed.

WILSON NOT TO LET PROHIBITION BE PARTY ISSUE

President Holds Liquor Question Is Nonpolitical; Differs with Bryan.

Washington, D. C., April 10.—"I do not believe the party programs of the highest consequence to the political life of the state and of the nation ought to be thrust to one side and hopelessly embarrassed for long periods together by making a political issue of a great question which is essentially nonpolitical, nonpartisan, moral and social in its nature."—Woodrow Wilson to the Rev. Thomas B. Shannon of Newark, N. J., while governor of New Jersey.

The above extract from a letter by the president while governor of New Jersey was dug up here today in connection with Secretary Bryan's latest declaration making prohibition a national issue. It was written by the president when asked to go on record on local option. Every one who has talked to him during the last few days agrees that his sentiments are unchanged.

Will Ignore Liquor Issue.

Under no circumstances, in the opinion of men closest to him, will President Wilson indorse any movement designed to drag the liquor question into the day's political issues. They say another phrase of the letter shows this. In it the president wrote:

"I am a thorough believer in local self-government and believe that every self-governing community which constitutes a local unit should have the right to control the matter of the regulation of or the withholding licenses. The questions involved are social and moral and are not susceptible of being made parts of a party program. Wherever they have been made the subject of party contests they have thrown every other question, however important, into the background and have made constructive party action impossible for long years together."

Bryan and Daniels Alone.

It is stated that the only cabinet members who believed prohibition is to be made a national issue in the immediate future are Secretaries Bryan and Daniels, and Daniels' appointment as secretary of the navy was made on Bryan's personal recommendation. The president has found no fault with either's personal views, but believes prohibition a matter for individual states to decide.

By making the liquor question a national issue in the coming campaign, even though restricted to attempts to control the Democratic national committee, the way would be opened, the president is said to believe, for splitting the party wide open. It is understood if he is forced to take a definite position—dry leaders say they intend to "smoke him out"—he will simply reiterate the views already quoted.

PAIGE

"The Standard of Value and Quality"

Will You Be One of the 48?

Our Paige "Jubilee" celebration is two weeks old today. Only two weeks more remain, and—already—we have sold 102 Paiges of our Special Factory Allotment of 150 cars.

This is not mere "advertising talk." One hundred and two individual orders have been signed and the cash deposits are in our hands.

Think of it! Only 48 people in Chicago can now place orders for Paige "Sixes" with a guarantee of early delivery.

Paige success in Chicago is being duplicated all over the country. The factory in Detroit is working day and night to keep up with the demand. In three short months the Paige has become the fastest selling "Six" in the world. And, remember, the Touring Season has only just arrived.

A moment's reflection will convince you that there must be a reason for such overwhelming preference on the part of motor car buyers. Such immediate, nation wide success must be founded on substantial grounds of fact.

Come to our "Jubilee" exhibit and see the explanation for yourself. Be one of the 48 men in Chicago who can still secure an early delivery of this great Six "46." The record-breaking price is $1395.

GOODYEAR S-V TIRE

Truck Tires Free

If the Goodyear S-V Does Not Outwear Any Other

This is to settle Truck Tire claims in a quick and a final way. Arguments don't settle things, and comparisons are costly.

For three months—April, May and June—we shall put S-V Truck Tires on as many wheels as you wish under this guarantee.

This Amazing Warrant

Equip opposite wheels, at the same time, one with a Goodyear S-V, one with any other standard make tire of like rated size, bought in the open market.

If the Goodyear S-V fails to cost less per mile than the other, we will return you its full purchase price, making the S-V free.

Get this guarantee in writing when you buy the tires. It will cover the life of them. Then you will know, beyond argument or question, which Truck Tire is best.

A Million-Dollar Offer

Unless the Goodyear S-V does excel, that three-month offer might easily cost us a million dollars or over. But we know to a certainty that, barring accidents, the S-V will win these tests. And the world will know, when the tests are ended, that Goodyear experts have solved the Truck Tire problems.

Took 8 Years

It took us eight years to attain this finality in Truck Tires. We built 29 types before reaching this one, and we built 74 models of this S-V type.

Before making this offer, we tested 5,000 of the perfected tires and compared them with all other makes. That's how we know that you can't find a tire that will compare with S-V's in low cost per mile.

The S-V will win for these reasons: It gives you 20 per cent more available tread rubber. It gives you a shape which ends bulging, breaking or excessive grind. It gives you a compound which saves undue friction, taxing tire and power.

It gives you a tire which can't creep. It is pressed on at a minimum of 50,000 pounds, without an auxiliary fastening.

It gives you an inseparable tire. By a secret process, the tread, the backing and the rim are welded into lasting union.

GOODYEAR AKRON, OHIO
S-V Truck Tires

Accept this offer in fairness to yourself. It will show you a way to save many a dollar, or the S-V tires are free. Ask our local branch to tell you where these tires and this warrant can be had. (2355)

April 10, 1915.

Dear Sir or Madam:

In all sections of the United States we are witnessing a strong reaction against the prevailing methods by which motor car values are determined.

Everywhere men and women are beginning to assert their American privilege of thinking for themselves.

When buyers used to get all of their ideas about an automobile from a man with a car to sell, they were puzzled as to how to make due estimates of values.

But now there are nearly two million motor car owners in this country.

With this widespread growth of experience has come a complete change in terms of value.

Possession has served to convince many owners that the things they used to look for in a motor car are not the things they want.

Talk to any automobile dealer.

He will tell you that buyers' demands are vastly different from what they were a few years ago.

Men are no longer influenced by mere impressions.

Novelty has lost its glow.

Contending with unnecessary annoyances and the constant drain of expense has made motor car buyers more practical—taught them to face the facts—to measure value in terms of proven results.

For by nothing but results and the cost of the results can one determine value in an automobile. It is a test that fits all cases and that anyone can apply.

What will the car do for me?

What is its cost of operation?

These are the two questions on which the buyer satisfies himself first before he invests his money.

The facts are available. They can not be kept hidden when buyers really know what they want.

This critical attitude of the public, analyzing everything—accepting nothing on mere statements—studying the whole subject, after collecting all the facts, has made the Franklin car the fastest selling fine automobile in America.

CALLS PUBLICITY BEST GUARANTEE OF LABOR PEACE

Kruttschnitt Asserts Public Opinion Is Fair Arbitrator of All Disputes.

Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the executive committee of the Southern Pacific railroad, yesterday gave his views to the federal industrial relations commission on the best methods of maintaining industrial peace. He said publicity of all matters involved in a controversy is the one sure method.

Public opinion, he said, is what finally decides what is right and wrong in all great controversies between capital and labor. For that reason, he insisted, every phase of industrial disputes should be given the fullest measure of publicity.

Mr. Kruttschnitt, who came from New York to testify regarding the strike situation on the Harriman lines in 1911, was the chief witness of the day at the commission's hearing at the Hotel Sherman. He presented much data on the strike of shop crafts on the Union Pacific railroad.

Supports Markham Views.

His views regarding the causes of the strike corroborated those presented several days ago by Charles H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central railroad, covering the Illinois Central shop crafts strike in the same year.

The principal reason for opposing the demands of the men, Mr. Kruttschnitt said, was the proposition to establish the system federation plan of unionism for the entire Union Pacific system. This would involve, according to the testimony, a recognition of the right of "outsiders" to negotiate agreements for the employés.

Rebuttal testimony was presented, however, showing that only railroad employés on the system involved would be members of the employés' conference committees.

"As a man of large affairs, what would you suggest to this commission to recommend to congress for the alleviation of industrial unrest?" Commissioner O'Connell asked.

Keep Public Informed.

"I have observed that no strike succeeded with public opinion against it," Mr. Kruttschnitt answered. "The only view I have ever held, and as I grow older I am more fully convinced of it than ever, is that the public should be fully informed on exactly what the issues are. The judgment of the public will be almost always right."

"What machinery would you suggest to carry out your idea of publicity?"

"If you agree with the principle, the form of machinery is a comparatively easy matter. I do not suggest compulsory arbitration. That has been tried in New Zealand and proved a failure. Canada has some good publicity acts. There the public is placed in full possession of the facts."

"Do you think the creation of a voluntary commission, with boards to handle the various features of industrial disputes, would be a good thing?" Commissioner O'Connell asked.

Up to the Government.

"I do. It would be of incalculable benefit both to the employer and the employé. The government at present has full control of the revenues of the railroads. If it wishes to control that it also ought to investigate the necessity for higher wages and provide a means for raising the money to pay them."

"Do you think $60 a month is enough for an American citizen to live on and raise a family properly?" Chairman Walsh asked.

"Well, that's a loaded question," Mr. Kruttschnitt answered, smiling. "I can answer it best by saying that hundreds of thousands are living and educating their children on such wages."

Frank Comerford, attorney for the strikers on the Illinois Central, presented a mass of documents giving the strikers' views.

Chairman Walsh announced that the inquiry into conditions of work and wages of Pullman sleeping car conductors and porters will be resumed tomorrow. The question of whether the commission will serve a writ of attachment on Robert T. Lincoln will be considered.

Isabel Chandler Engaged; Found Romance in Yellowstone.

MISS ISABELLE CHANDLER

An interesting engagement announced yesterday was that of Miss Isabel Buckingham Chandler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Chandler, to Hobart Paul Young, son of Mrs. George W. Young of 4452 Ellis avenue.

The announcement was made at a luncheon given by Miss Chandler at her residence, 744 Rush street, for fifteen friends yesterday.

Miss Chandler is a cousin of Miss Rosalie Selfridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Gordon Selfridge of London, who came to America last June to visit at the home of her aunt.

The romance began while the young people were on a camping trip through Yellowstone park last summer. The trip was arranged for Miss Selfridge, her brother, Harry Gordon Selfridge Jr., and a younger sister, Miss Violet Selfridge. Miss Chandler was a debutante of three seasons ago, and has been one of the young women of Chicago active in the interests of Hull house, where she has studied lacemaking as an art.

SHIPPERS CLASH WITH RAILROADS ON CUMMINS ACT

Interpretation of the Liability Clause Argued Before Commissioner Clark.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 10.—[Special.]—Railroads and shippers clashed before Interstate Commerce Commissioner Clark today over the interpretation of the Cummins act to remove all restrictions from the liability of carriers for loss or damage to shipments.

Representatives of the railroads declared that it is their interpretation of the law that the 100 per cent rates based on shipments under the uniform bill of lading, whereby shippers agree to a restricted liability on the part of the railroads, must be abolished, and the present rates for unlimited liability, which are 10 per cent higher, must be substituted.

Most of the shippers' representatives declared that the only purpose of the Cummins amendment was to prohibit the railroads from limiting their liability under any guise whatsoever, and that there was no authority for them to raise rates or to apply the maximum rate now applied to shipments under unlimited liability contracts.

Commissioner Seeks Light.

Commissioner Clark, after listening to hours of argument, said that he would like to have "some astute analyst" point out just what the Cummins act forbids the carriers from doing and show, if possible, whether the law simply prohibits the limitation of liability provision in the uniform bill of lading from being exercised, leaving the balance of the provisions of the bill operative, or whether the whole form of the bill of lading and the basis of rates established on it become void.

Commissioner Clark also announced that he would like to have some further light on the use of the word "character" as descriptive of commodities in the Cummins act.

Plans to Raise Rates.

Officials of the southern railroads announced at the opening of the hearing that they proposed to increase rates approximately 5 per cent under the Cummins law, and gave as an excuse that they needed additional revenues. Shippers took exception to this announcement of policy.

Henry C. Barlow, director of traffic of the Chicago Association of Commerce, told the commisson that the financial necessity of the southern lines was not an issue in this case. He said that it was unfair to try to impose additional burdens on class commodities in order to pay for additional losses that would be sustained by the carriers on live stock shipments under the Cummins act.

Charges Wife Shot at Him.

Stanley Lestsky, owner of a saloon at 2800 West Twenty-third street, swore out a warrant in the Desplaines street court yesterday for the arrest of his wife, Josephine, on a charge of assault, alleging that she entered the saloon and fired several shots at him with a revolver.

OFFICE OF TAX ASSESSOR.
Miami, Fla., March 22, 1915.
HON. W. V. KNOTT,
Comptroller, State of Florida,
Tallahassee, Fla.

Dear Sir:—This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with the lands owned in Dade County by the Brigham Realty and Inv. Co., and that I consider a fair, conservative estimate of the real estate value of the lots comprising the subdivision of the north one-half of the southwest quarter of Section 8, Township 54 south, Range 41 east, Tallahassee Meridian, 80 acres, to be $450.00 per lot, or total of $108,000, based on present selling price of similar adjoining properties.

Yours truly,
J. F. JANDON,
Tax Assessor, Dade County.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 22nd day of March, A. D. 1915.

D. C. HOOVER,
Notary Public, State of Florida.
My commission expires May 22, 1917.

MIAMI BOARD OF TRADE.
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to certify I am personally acquainted with Mr. A. H. Brigham of the Brigham Realty and Investment Co., of the city of Miami, and am also thoroughly acquainted with the lands of the Co., and the development of said lands, in the City of Miami.

The firm of which I am a member has had several years of business dealings with the above named gentleman and have found him to be a man of his word and honest in all his dealings.

We consider his holdings in the city of Miami very valuable and know that he is engaged in development work, which if he can carry it on as planned, will result in a very successful business venture.

We believe that he has sufficient resources at his command to back up any reasonable proposition which he has to offer.

G. D. BROSSIER,
President.

MIAMI BANK & TRUST CO.
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

We take pleasure in stating that we have known the Brigham Realty and Investment Company for a number of years, and during this period their business relations with this bank have been entirely satisfactory. We know that they are holders of extensive properties in this community, and we believe that purchasers or others dealing with them will find their dealings to be absolutely secure and upon a conservative basis.

Mr. Brigham, Treasurer and Manager, is well and favorably known among business men of Miami, and that he has the confidence of the general public is evidenced by the fact that he was recently elected a member of the Board of Education of Dade County, in the face of strong opposition.

We heartily commend him and do not believe that he would undertake any obligation that he was not in a position to carry out.

Very truly yours,
R. M. PRICE,
President.

MONEY IS HIGHER TODAY THAN FOR YEARS. DON'T SACRIFICE THIS GREAT OPPORTUNITY TO MAKE YOUR MONEY YIELD BIG INTEREST. STUDY THIS OFFERING OF A WELL SECURED FIRST MORTGAGE GOLD BOND PAYING 8%.

Why Buy Florida Bonds?

BECAUSE: The legal rate of interest in Florida is 8%, and 10% may be contracted for; while 6% is the legal rate in Illinois, and no more than 7% may be contracted for.

BECAUSE: These safe, well secured bonds yield more than you can get from a savings bank in Illinois. Your money will produce as much in one year invested in these bonds as it would in two years and eight months in a savings bank. Eight per cent is two and two-third times as much as 3%.

BECAUSE: These high grade, first mortgage gold bonds yield 8% as against a yield of 5% or 6% on Chicago real estate or Illinois farm mortgage bonds.

Are They Safe?

The amount of this bond issue is $25,000.

It is to be used in erecting an electric light plant and water works on the property. The property back of the bonds is now conservatively estimated as being worth $200,000.

This is a margin of security ample to protect bond holders.

This margin will be increased and the property made much more valuable by the improvements to be built with the proceeds of this bond issue.

The sale of these bonds has been authorized by the state officials of Florida under the rigid "blue sky" law recently passed to prevent the marketing of unsafe securities. Authorization printed in adjoining column.

Why Miami Can Afford to Pay 8%

Miami is one of the fastest growing cities in the United States. This is proved by tax valuations increasing 440% in five years, population increasing 25% in one year, bank deposits increasing 42% in six months, postoffice receipts gaining 27% in one year, etc.

Miami, being a young community, must go to older cities for money to finance this development. And since the legislature recognizes that capital must be well paid to come from a distance, rates of interest are permitted which are forbidden as usurious in settled, developed communities like Illinois.

That the development of Miami is certain to continue and enable those who pay 8% to do so and make a large profit in addition is proved by the character of the men who have faith in Miami and have interested themselves in its development. Read this list of Miami investors:

William Jennings Bryan; Dr. C. E. Welch, manufacturer of grape juice; H. G. Chandler, manufacturer of Coca Cola; Philander C. Knox, ex-secretary of state; Dr. J. H. Kellogg of Battle Creek; Carl G. Fisher, "Presto-o-Lite" king; Courtland Van Camp, one of the "pork and beans" men; Walter E. Flanders, president Maxwell Motor Co.; James Deering and Charles Deering of the International Harvester Co.; W. L. Douglas, shoe manufacturer and former governor of Massachusetts; E. W. Mellins, the "Mellins Food" man.

The Bond

This Bond is a First Mortgage Gold Bond, secured by trust deed of The Brigham Realty and Investment Company, to the Chicago Title and Trust Co., and is also guaranteed by A. H. Brigham, thus placing all his individual assets in addition to all the assets of the corporation back of the bond. Bonds are dated Dec. 24, 1914, and are payable Dec. 24, 1917. Interest payable semi-annually.

It has been the aim of the company to make this bond issue a popular one with the people of average means, so all of the bonds are of one denomination, namely $25.00. No limit, however, has been placed on the number any one person can procure.

They can also be paid for at the rate of $5.00 each down, $5.00 each monthly; and become an excellent opportunity from a savings standpoint. No better lesson could be given the boy or girl in business principle than the possession of one of these bonds, the clipping of the coupons, and the collection of interest every six months.

Don't Delay

IF YOU BUY AT ONCE YOU WILL RECEIVE THE ACCRUED INTEREST.

Send in the attached coupon at once and we will mail you free of charge and without obligation a map of Miami showing the location of the property secured by these bonds (less than 2 miles from the business district) and more detailed information about the proposition.

If you are looking for a speculation with a promise of extravagant returns, do not reply, as this is an INVESTMENT yielding fixed, certain, reasonable return. ACT NOW.

The Famous Jeffery "Four" Now $1150

Today we announce a new price on the famous Jeffery "Four" which upsets all standards of motor car selling in Chicago.

The same identical great Jeffery car which only a few months ago required a price of $1,550 we can sell to you after this date for $1,150. Here is a clear cash dividend for you of $400.

This car at the old price was unquestionably the greatest motor car value in Chicago. At the new price it simply upsets all ideas of motor car values.

Now there can be no excuse for any man failing to have Jeffery quality—the last possible reason for the purchase of a "cheap" car has been removed.

Why This Price Is Possible: Prices of any kind of merchandise, whether it be automobiles or safety razors, hats or incubators, are altered for one of two reasons—either because business is poor and the seller cuts his price to stimulate trade, or business is good and the seller lowers his price to the public because increased volume has lowered his cost of production and by making more goods he is enabled to sell them at a lower price without sacrifice of quality.

Business Is Good with Us: Never in all our history have we sold so many motor cars. The increase of our business over last year is more than fivefold. What is true with us is true throughout the country. In New York—in Boston—in Philadelphia—in San Francisco—wherever good motor cars are known, you will find the Jeffery supreme. The Jeffery plant at Kenosha is actually working three shifts of 8 hours each per day—twenty-four hours—and this condition has obtained for months. Costs have been cut, and with enormous production we can now sell you the same car at a price of $400 less than was possible a few months ago.

The Smallest Profit Margin Known to the Trade obtains on Jeffery cars, and, following our regular policy, you, the public, are given the full benefit of the savings Jeffery has effected.

The Foremost Four: The famous Jeffery Four needs no introduction to Chicago. Hundreds are in use upon Chicago streets. Any owner will tell you the story. This is the car that introduced economy to the user of high grade automobiles in America. This is the car which first introduced here the high speed, small bore, long stroke motor. This is the car that first introduced the idea of room—a big car—without costly and useless bulk.

You can speed this car to forty miles an hour, shut off the motor, and coast a good half mile. It will pick up from nothing to forty miles an hour in twenty seconds. It will travel, without vibration, twenty-five miles per hour on low, fifty on direct, and fifty-five on fourth. A pulling pressure of forty-five pounds will start the Jeffery rolling on the floor. Every feature of this car is the best the world knows. The electric starting and lighting system is the best produced—the most costly any maker can buy.

At $1,550 this car was the greatest bargain Chicago ever saw; at $1,150 it is simply a marvel. Remember, please, this car has been cheapened not at all at the new price—it is the same in every particular—you save, however, 20%.

Order Now—or you will have to wait. The Jeffery factory is working at absolute capacity. Orders will be filled in rotation, and the early buyer gets the first delivery. We can take care of a few of the first comers with the cars now on our floors, and our advice is to act at once—Chicago knows this car.

CENTAUR MOTOR CO., Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—Absolute satisfaction in every detail is the only term I could possibly use in describing my experience with the "Jeffery Four" purchased from you. From every point of view—style, finish, comfort, speed and stability—I consider the "Jeffery" at the head of the list. It is a safe bet that I would not trade my "Jeffery" for any three thousand dollar car on the road.

In six months' time it has cost me not one cent for repairs, although I use it hard every day.

Very truly yours,
Dr. C. W. M. (name on request).

SCHOOL LESSEES' ATTORNEY MEETS OWN ARGUMENTS

Board's Counsel Uses Former Counsel's Reply to Lower Rental Demand.

Angus Roy Shannon, attorney for the board of education, yesterday submitted the reply of the board to the statements on behalf of the lessees of school property on the west side of State street, between the North American building at Monroe street and the Chicago Trust and Savings Bank building at Madison street, exclusive of three lots.

Mr. Shannon said in his statement, which is seventy-eight pages long, that he would not reply to the arguments of Attorney Donald L. Merrill, the counsel for all the lessees but one. Instead, he submitted Mr. Merrill's answers to the same arguments for lower rentals which the latter made twenty years ago, when he was attorney for the board in the appraisements of the same lands under the same leases.

Argues No Reply.

"I shall make no reply to the arguments advanced by these lessees," he said, "but that their total worthlessness may be emblazoned forth, I present to you an annihilation of them by one who knows; one who reasoned clearly and spoke the truth fearlessly twenty years ago; one whose arguments then made are as applicable and forceful now as enduring truth and right always are.

"That one is Mr. Donald L. Merrill, the counsel here for all of these lessees but one."

Comparison of Valuations.

The valuations at which the board believes the land should be appraised and the corresponding appraisements ten years ago are as follows:

6 South State street, lot 5, $532,800, being $22,200 a front foot and $185 a square foot; 1905 appraisement $360,000.

16-18 South State street, lot 7, $475,200, being $19,800 a front foot, $165 a square foot; 1905 appraisement $312,000.

20 South State street, lot 8, $504,000, being $21,000 a front foot and $175 a square foot; 1905 appraisement $324,000.

24 South State street, lot 31, $504,000, being $21,000 a front foot and $175 a square foot; 1905 appraisement $324,000.

28 South State street, lot 32, $460,800, being $19,200 a front foot and $160 a square foot; 1905 appraisement $312,000.

32 South State street, lot 33, $446,400, being $18,600 a front foot and $155 a square foot; 1905 appraisement $300,000.

34 South State street, lot 34, $432,000, being $18,000 a front foot and $150 a square foot; 1905 appraisement $288,000.

The increase asked is a little over 50 per cent for the next ten years.

LOST LA SALLE NOTES FOUND

Jailer, Discovering Documents in Street, First Scents Robbery of Bankruptcy Evidence.

Three canceled promissory notes issued at the defunct La Salle Street Trust and Savings bank were found at West Austin avenue and North Clark street by Edward Kempf, storekeeper at the county jail. He, believing the state's attorney's office had been robbed of documents in the case, hurried to Assistant State's Attorney Charles C. Case Jr. It was discovered the notes had been lost while a messenger was returning them to William C. Niblack, receiver.

PROF. HENDERSON MEMORIAL AT THE AUDITORIUM TODAY.

Boxes Will Be Occupied by Public Officials—Gov. Dunne and Jane Addams to Speak.

Religious bodies and all branches of public and social service will attend the community memorial meeting for Prof. Charles R. Henderson in Auditorium theater this afternoon. No admission tickets will be necessary for admission, and a general invitation has been extended to the public.

The boxes will be occupied by public officials and those participating in the ceremony, while the stage will be given over to the speakers and the Capella choir of Northwestern university.

Gov. Dunne will preside. Miss Jane Addams has postponed her departure for New York and will be one of the speakers. Other speakers will be Dean Shailer Mathews, George E. Vincent of the University of Minnesota, Prof. Graham Taylor, and the Very Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan. Memorial resolutions will be presented by Nathan William McChesney, chairman of the citizens' committee that planned the meeting. Services will begin at 3 o'clock.

WILL EXPLORE COOK WILDS.

School Children Excursionists to Be Taken to Some of "Jungle" Districts in County.

School children will "explore" the few remaining wild sections of Cook county on future excursions. This was recommended yesterday by teachers. "Every school child in Chicago should see Stony Island and the old Indian villages about Desplaines and Forest Park," said Dr. Herman T. Lukens of the Francis N. Parker school.

"Beware of Star Boarder!"

"Star boarders cause a lot of trouble; be careful in the future," was the advice given by Judge La Buy yesterday to James Ciesiak of 8808 Commercial avenue. His wife, Mrs. Margaret Ciesiak, who admitted she attempted to elope with her boarder, John Wachowicz, was paroled for six months and the latter was fined $50.

Help your boys and girls to robust health

Get them a

Skudder Car

Every active boy wants some good way to "go fast"; without too much work.

Boys and girls everywhere are enthusiastic about the Skudder Car. It goes fast; as fast as they want it to go; and so easy the 4-year-old can run it.

Not a push car

The boy stands on the tilting board with both feet, working it up and down like a seesaw; that's what makes the car go. All he needs to do is throw his weight from one foot to the other—easiest possible motion—ideal for gradual, normal muscular development; no strain or tiresome work.

Strong and safe

The Skudder Car has an unbreakable steel frame; wire wheels, rubber tires, ball bearings. It is built on the highest bicycle standards, and being low-swung, close to the ground, is safe against accidents.

You're interested in the health of your children; you buy them good food and good clothes; don't forget that the right kind of exercise is equally important. The Skudder Car means to the child what the automobile means to you.

Money-back guarantee

We guarantee the Skudder Car to be satisfactory in every way. Get it at leading stores. Use it 10 days; if not satisfied, write to makers and get your money back. If your dealer doesn't have it, write us direct for circular.

ISH MYSTERY EEPENS AS MEN N CASE VANISH

ther Ex-Priest Nor "Mr. Rankin" Can Be Found to Explain Suicide's Life.

LAT RENTED BY 'PINKERTON.'

Two men were busily engaged yesterday in packing furniture in a luxuriously appointed six room apartment at 641 Waveland avenue. Several detectives were on guard to prevent the intrusion of visitors.

Until last Tuesday night, when her body was found on the floor of the gas filled kitchen, this apartment was the home of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Fitzgerald, formerly the wife of Col. E. M. Irish of Kalamazoo, Mich., and still further back the beautiful Betty Vannerson of Augusta, Ga.

While the workmen were packing, William J. Fitzgerald, who claimed the woman as his wife, arrived at the flat and ordered up a few bottles of beer for the packers. He seemed to be grief stricken.

Fails to Accompany Body.

Until Fitzgerald, who has been identified as the former Father Fitzpatrick, the unfrocked priest of St. Joseph's parish in Kalamazoo, appeared at the Waveland avenue apartment he was supposed to be aboard the same train on which the woman's body was speeding toward Atlanta, Ga., for burial.

He had paid his rent to the landlady at [illegible] East Forty-seventh street and had told her he was going to accompany the body south and would be back in four or five days.

"I'll have something more to tell you when I return," he told her.

The "something" may have had to do with the reason for the priest dropping or trying to drop out of sight for the time being. It may have had to do with the reason for the lease of the Waveland avenue apartment being held in the name of J. W. Rankin. At all events this much was learned of the part Rankin played in the life of the former southern beauty.

Rankin to Marry Her?

Last fall Rankin said he wanted to lease the Waveland avenue flat and applied to Baird & Warner, the agents. He represented himself as J. W. Rankin, head of the commercial department of the Pinkerton & Co. United States Detective agency at 30 North Dearborn street and a resident of the Hotel Sherman. This is the agency which Pinkerton Nationals have barred from United States mails.

When the agents learned the woman was to move into the apartment an objection was raised. The real estate agents investigated to see if Rankin was really the person he represented himself to be. They apparently were satisfied he was. It was understood, it was said, that he was to marry "Mrs. Irish," as she was known.

Where Are They Now?

Attempts to reach Rankin failed. Fitzgerald had just left the Waveland avenue apartment when a reporter arrived. Dispatches from Atlanta stated that the ex-priest did not accompany the body there. J. M. Vannerson, the woman's father, who is in the automobile business there, referred all inquiries to "Mr. Rankin" of Chicago.

A visit to the Kenrose apartments in Forty-seventh street, where Fitzgerald's personal effects are being held, revealed the fact that he was believed to be out of the city. He had worked as a "Pinkerton" detective, according to the landlady, but had said he was going to quit his job and open up a restaurant at Sixty-third street and Cottage Grove avenue. The packers at the Waveland avenue flat said Fitzgerald had just left to go to his Sixty-third street restaurant, where "he employed fifty people." The restaurant could not be located.

Then it was thought maybe Rankin and Fitzgerald were one and the same, or that possibly the ex-priest had been in the employ of Rankin. As both studiously avoided reporters neither theory could be corroborated.

Friends Cast Little Light.

Those who had known Mrs. Fitzgerald both here and in Kalamazoo were able to throw little light on the mystery save to establish the identity of Fitzgerald as the onetime priest.

Mrs. Robert H. Countiss of 4644 Lake Park avenue, who had met her in Kalamazoo as the wife of Col. Irish and obtained a position for her when she came to Chicago, knew little, she said, of her personal affairs.

"I was impressed with Mrs. Irish's breeding and culture," said Mrs. Countiss. "She was a woman of refinement and possessed a brilliant mind. I was instrumental in obtaining her a position with Mrs. Loraine Windsor, who conducts an interior decorating studio at [illegible] East Erie street. It was my impression that she received money from Col. Irish until a few months ago."

This money, it was said, was sent in weekly or monthly checks for $60.

Lacked Interest in Living.

Mrs. Windsor said "Mrs. Irish" worked for her for about three months and then became dissatisfied and left. At another time Mrs. Irish worked as a book agent under Mrs. Bertha A. Meanor of 6019 Harper avenue for the Wise Publishing company. Mrs. Meanor, who testified at the inquest last Wednesday, said she was not surprised at the way things turned out, as Mrs. Irish had often expressed an intention of taking her life.

"I don't know whether her mental condition was due to financial or mental troubles," said Mrs. Meanor, "but her mind, as far as being sane was concerned, was brilliant. She was wonderfully clever. I don't think it was despondency. It was rather a lack of interest in living."

Residents of the Kenrose apartments intimated, however, that the former priest was a heavy drinker and hinted that this was the cause of the woman's troubles. According to the landlady Mrs. Fitzgerald, as she was known on the south side, often threatened to "end it all if Jimmy [her pet name for Fitzgerald] did not stop drinking."

Letters to the woman at the Forty-seventh street address bearing Georgia postmarks were addressed sometimes to "Mrs Fitzpatrick" and sometimes to "Mrs. Fitzgerald." Evidently her relatives believed she had married the ex-priest.

At the inquest Fitzgerald testified that when his wife had attempted suicide last Monday he had asked her why she did it and she replied:

"What's the use of living? I hoped for a home and a baby. If there is a God he hasn't given me either."

"We will have a home some day of the very best and you have me, anyway," Fitzgerald testified he told her.

"No," she replied, he said, "you're slipping away from me, too. You couldn't keep your promise to come Sunday night."

"She was a little inclined to be despondent," Fitzgerald told Deputy Coroner Kennedy, "especially if things didn't go right. Once she said to me, 'Jimmy, let's turn on the gas.'"

MRS. M'LENNAN FACES SUIT BY GROCER TO COLLECT BILL

Woman in Natalby Restaurant Shooting Must Face Legal Fire in Court Tomorrow.

Mrs. Hugh McLennan has another disturbing incident in her life. This one has nothing to do with Miss Genevieve Irvine, Attorney Everett Jennings, and the shooting at Natalby's restaurant on Thursday.

But it is a homely, prosaic suit for an unpaid grocery bill that will call her before Judge J. J. Sullivan tomorrow.

The Harvey Grocery and Market company of 1925 East Seventy-first street is the plaintiff.

Mrs. McLennan again denied energetically she had dined with Everett Jennings or in any other way received his attentions.

Mr. Jennings, it was said, is averse to eating his meals alone. So Mrs. McLennan appeared at convenient times.

LAVERNE NOYES IN COURT TO CLEANSE HOTEL MORALS.

Capitalist Would Oust Landlord Stafford from Michigan Boulevard House for Way It Is Run.

La Verne W. Noyes, capitalist, yesterday filed a petition for an injunction restraining James W. Stafford from operating the Michigan Boulevard hotel at 2001 South Michigan avenue for immoral purposes.

The petition sets forth that Mr. Noyes, as owner, leased the premises to Stafford on Sept. 19, 1910, with the understanding that the building was to be used "as a first class reputable hotel and for no other purpose."

It is stated that this provision has been violated and that the premises have been used for "unlawful purposes."

WEDS SLAYER OF HER SON.

Mrs. Eleanor Black Becomes Mrs. W. E. Shipman—Prosecutor Acts as Best Man.

A wedding ceremony will be performed in the county jail tomorrow.

The bride will be Mrs. Eleanor Black. The bridegroom will be William E. Shipman, convicted slayer of Mrs. Black's 18 year old son, Albert. The best man will be Assistant State's Attorney W. W. Witty, who prosecuted Shipman.

Following the wedding Shipman will leave for Joliet penitentiary to begin serving a sentence of fourteen years' imprisonment.

Mrs. Black's children turned against her at the trial when she steadfastly stood by Shipman. The latter formerly was a roomer in the Black home in West Jackson boulevard and stabbed the woman's son to death during a quarrel.

WOMEN USELESS IF NOT CREATIVE

Miss Morgan Urges Rearing of Children; Otherwise Work for Humanity.

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—A Princeton biologist recently declared that single women have no place in the scheme of things; that they are a negligible quantity in the progress of mankind, an anomaly. A Paris editor has also directed his barbs against the bachelor maids, terming them a third sex.

A reporter today asked Miss Anne Morgan for her opinion on the subject of the success or failure of the single woman in the scheme of life.

"They are jolly well right, these scientists," Miss Morgan said, "though they try to gauge a woman by mere laboratory tests.

Creative Ability Demands Active.

"The woman is happiest, of course, whose creative ability expresses itself in a happy marriage, the making of a home, and the rearing of children. That is the normal life.

"But all do not achieve matrimony and that creative force has got to find expression in a different way.

"It has been the habit of old maids, the world over—haven't you noticed it?—to advocate matrimony, so I come out strongly in the lead of single women and emphasize the fact that every woman ought to marry and have children and keep house.

Woman's Work to Create.

"Great things have been and are being accomplished by single women in the world of science and art; in fact, in every field of endeavor today. It is the vital force finding expression through these different mediums.

"It is woman's work in the world to create and every woman is responsible for one of two things—her work for this generation or her work for the coming generation. There are women with a great love of humanity in their heart who do not feel they are sacrificing their lives by devoting themselves simply to the service of others.

Helps Young Folk to Meet.

"Young people need the opportunity of meeting each other. Propinquity is a great factor, you know, in the marriage game. That is why I enjoy giving the young people at vacation headquarters an opportunity to learn something of each other. Our dances attract the young men and women and give them an opportunity for a delightful friendship and maybe ultimately marriage. It is just because these things really are creative that they are so valuable.

"I always advise the young girls to marry when the right chap comes along."

HORRORS! A MAN! 65 CO-EDS FLEE

Dean Orders 'Em Out When a Baldheaded Fellow Is Found in Collegian Hall.

Sixty-five agitated Northwestern co-eds packed their effects hurriedly yesterday and deserted Collegian hall in a body.

Not until the last of the imperiled sixty-five had escaped from the dormitory was Mary Ross Potter, dean of women, able to enjoy a breath deep enough to be truly hygienic.

When the exodus was complete Dean Potter was close to a nervous breakdown, and small wonder.

A MAN.

A MAN has been found in Collegian! In violation of university rules, in defiance of campus convention, there he'd been living for a whole week—right among those poor unsuspecting girls.

Slyly the fellow had kept himself out of sight. His presence was sensed rather than known as a fact. The rumor reached Dean Potter. She investigated. It was true. The man was there, quite as much at home as if he had lived in Collegian all his life.

Straightway Dean Potter issued her order. Collegian had violated the rule against housing two sexes under one roof. All the co-eds resident there must leave. At once! Tomorrow might be too late!

Reporter Finds HIM.

A TRIBUNE reporter learned of the excitement about the Northwestern campus and sought the source. He was told of Dean Potter's order. An obsessing curiosity to find the potential heartbreaker seized him. He went to Collegian and found it as lonely as the palace of the sleeping beauty—only the tired princess was there no longer.

In a room on the third floor the reporter found the MAN. He was a gay fellow of 45, not much more than five feet high, but with a magnificent circumference that more than made up for his lack of stature. And he was crowned with a fascinating little bald spot.

"I say," said this gorgeous person, "looks like moving day, doesn't it? What's the rumpus, I wonder?"

The hero of the bald spot emitted three staccato gasps when the reporter enlightened him.

Son-in-Law on Job.

Then the story came out. Mrs. E. M. Bennett, who built Collegian two years ago as an investment, died last week. Her son-in-law, Sylvester Sparling, who has been running the house and had decided to fill vacant rooms with whomsoever applied for accommodation, be they man, woman, or child.

As a first step in filling the empty rooms he had persuaded Mrs. Bennett's son, Cy Bennett, to move into a couple of them with his wife and children.

And it was Cy Bennett, no less, from whose charms the sixty-five co-eds were ordered to flee.

'TWILIGHT SLEEP' TO COURT.

Attorney Views Film and Prepares Petition to Compel Permission to Present It.

A private exhibition of the banned film "Twilight Sleep" was given at the American Music hall yesterday afternoon for the benefit of Herman Frank, a lawyer. After seeing the picture Frank began work on the petition for a writ of mandamus, which he will present in court tomorrow. Frank says there is nothing in the film either "immoral, obscene, or likely to disturb the public peace." He contends that, therefore, Maj. Funkhouser cannot legally withhold a permit for its exhibition.

FARSON IS HIT BY TRUE BILLS IN MILLION FRAUD?

Colorado Irrigation Project Alleged to Be Involved by Indictments.

BOOKS ARE INVESTIGATED.

William Farson, young son of the late John Farson, until recently had an irrigation project in Colorado. Several weeks ago a federal inspector from Denver called at Mr. Farson's office in the First National Bank building.

"I'd like to look over the records concerning those Colorado bonds of yours," he said.

Mr. Farson threw open his vaults and let the inspector take what he wanted.

"I only ask your word as a gentleman and an officer that you will see to their return," he said.

Charge $1,000,000 Swindle?

Yesterday four indictments were presented to Judge Landis by the federal grand jury. Rumor in the federal building had it that they charge a $1,000,000 swindle, and that they have to do with the Laramie-Poudre Irrigation and Reservoir project in Colorado.

By court order, the indictments were suppressed to permit the serving of bench warrants by the postoffice department. A dozen or more witnesses, it was said, are missing. Inspector Stuart refused to give any information regarding the indictments and Judge Landis cautioned every one involved against revealing the names of those mentioned.

It was reported two of the men indicted live in Chicago and a third in Denver. One is said to have disappeared.

"I'm Not Telling"—Farson.

"I don't know anything about this for publication," said Mr. Farson, "but I know a lot more about it than I'm telling, and a lot more than most of the government men themselves, for that matter. Come around a little later, and I may have something to give out in the way of a long statement."

George W. Miller, Mr. Farson's attorney, went a little more into detail.

"I have known Mr. Farson's irrigation project was under investigation for some time back," he said, "but I should be surprised to learn it had led to an indictment.

"That Denver inspector took almost a trunkful of books and papers back to Colorado with him.

Attorney Defends Acts.

"There was nothing fraudulent in the promotion or financing of the project. It was not a private venture. Bonds in the sum of $5,000,000 were issued by the municipality of Greeley, Colo., organized by act of the Colorado legislature into an irrigation district similar to our drainage district here. The Farson firm entered into the transaction when John Farson Sr. signed a contract to sell part of the bonds shortly before his death.

"Work was actually started on the ditch, and it was progressing nicely until a tightening money market interfered. Then there were delays, some of the bondholders grew restless, and three or four civil suits were started against the Farsons. In one of them the judge started to instruct the jury to return a verdict in favor of Mr. Farson, and the plaintiff withdrew his charge.

Chicago Firm Not Involved.

"At present the Farson firm has nothing to do with the Greeley project. The municipality has undertaken to refinance the proposition and the sale of the bonds has been taken off the Chicago firm's hands.

"The only theory on which the government can proceed to obtain an indictment against Mr. Farson would be for a misrepresentation of conditions in literature sent through the mails. Inasmuch as most of this was printed and designed by the Colorado municipality, an interesting phase of the question will center about their position in the eyes of the law."

Inspector Stuart asked that a reporter for a newspaper which had printed a story in regard to the indictments be questioned to ascertain whether he should be held in contempt of court.

BIG MEN INDICTED.

Denver, Colo., April 10.—[Special.]—The Greeley-Poudre Irrigation District company issued approximately $2,000,000 of bonds that were being handled by several Chicago bond houses.

Local federal officials refuse to divulge the names of the Chicago financial concerns and Colorado irrigation men indicted in Chicago. Postoffice Inspector William McHenry did, however, confirm the Chicago story of the indictment in substance, saying:

"The men concerned in the Chicago deal are some of the biggest irrigation men in the state. They are men of such standing and of so many varied interests in Colorado that we do not apprehend their leaving the state or trying to escape the indictments."

Inspector McHenry also stated the bonds that had been sold by those concerned in the investigation were those of the Greeley-Poudre Irrigation company. He said there was nothing wrong with the project except it was not completed, whereas those concerned in the sale of the bonds had made misrepresentations through the mails, stating that the project was completed.

The Laramie-Poudre Irrigation and Reservoir company constructed a 12,000 foot tunnel through Green mountain to carry water from the Laramie river to Cache La Poudre basin to irrigate 150,000 acres in the Greeley district. The construction cost approximately $1,000,000. That part of the work was completed, but the work of the Greeley-Poudre company to construct the distributing system of laterals and ditches never has been finished.

Offers Value of Gems She Lost for Stolen Miniature of Mother.

MRS MICHAEL J BAILEY

MRS. MICHAEL J. BAILEY, turning from society affairs to persistent, disappointing excursions into Chicago's byways where pawnshops abound, has succeeded where detectives failed—except for a miniature in oil of her mother who died when Mrs. Bailey was a child. And it was in the search for this treasure that she turned yesterday to THE TRIBUNE for aid.

The Bailey home at 3612 Lake View avenue was ransacked on Nov. 10. Jewelry and silverware valued at $50, including a miniature locket, were taken. Detectives searched the pawnshops and failed. Then Mrs. Bailey, who is the wife of an official of Butler Bros., took up the quest herself. It was the diminutive portrait she must have back.

Friday she saw a want "ad" in THE TRIBUNE stating that John Townsend of 1554 South Wabash avenue bought and sold curios and antiques.

In the show window she recognized her locket and rushed inside. The miniature had been removed. There were other bits of her jewelry, which were traced, it is said, to Harry Edwards, a furniture salesman of 4052 Prairie avenue. In his home, it is said, a missing necklace was found. Edwards was brought to the curio shop, but escaped, probably carrying with him the key to the mystery of the missing miniature.

The value of the jewels, Mrs. Butler said, is the reward for the return of the bit of painting in oil.

FIGHT ON VICE UP TO WOMEN

Judge Goodnow, Assailing Segregation, Says Levee Is Mobilizing.

"Chicago faces another battle with segregated vice—and it is the women who must win it."

"Before education can even begin to attack the problem the double moral standard must be annihilated."

"Segregation does not segregate. Consider Berlin."

"To the man who favors segregation I put the question, Which of your daughters are you raising to be a prostitute?"

Step by step, point by point, Judge Charles N. Goodnow crumbled the arguments for segregation of vice in an address before the weekly meeting of the Chicago Political Equality league in the Congress hotel yesterday.

Vice Barons Mobilize.

He warned the women that the time is at hand when the vice barons of the old levee are massing their resources to bring back the old reign of license and special privilege under which they divided illicit gains amounting to millions each year.

"Don't let them," he pleaded. "It's your fight—the woman's fight. Segregation will bring in its wake legalized corruption, death to men, worse than death to women, police graft, and crime waves.

"The social problem is not alone the problem of the city. In the little town where I was born six of the schoolmates of one of my closest friends died of venereal diseases, and twelve of the girls who were known as the belles of the village are now living lives of shame in a nearby city.

Let Living Go to Ruin.

"In that same small town the woman's club has spent its entire efforts in improving the local cemetery for the last year. In other words, the club is looking after the home of the dead, while it is allowing the living to go to h—l.

"I have been for five years in close touch with Chicago's social problem. In my opinion segregation will never settle the problem, if indeed it can be settled. Education, in my estimation, is the city's only hope in eradicating this evil. And before education can even begin to attack the problem the double moral standard must be absolutely annihilated."

This statement was greeted by applause.

"When you place a segregated district under the control of the police you create police graft.

"If you segregate you must legislate. Then you have made vice a legitimate traffic and you have opened the gate for the legal procurer and the legal procuress."

CHURCH FIGHTS LAW FOR BOXING

Says It Draws Disorderly Crowd and Demoralizes by Gambling.

The Chicago Church Federation council has issued a statement of its reasons for opposing the bills now before the Illinois legislature providing for the legalizing of prize fighting. This statement is being sent to all members of the general assembly. The statement, sent out by the federation's executive secretary, William B. Millard, is in part as follows:

"Amateur boxing right now is as free as the air and as harmless as lawn tennis. The sport itself needs no legislation.

"When boxing is made a business, with big gate receipts, it develops a swarm of professional pugs, and is no longer boxing, but fighting.

Crowd of Disorderlies.

"Fighting and horseracing are alike in this respect—that it is impossible to conduct either without a crowd of the most disorderly and disreputable 'sports' and a demoralizing epidemic of gambling.

"It violates the fundamental principle of home rule. The proposed commission would stage a fight anywhere, regardless of the wishes of the local community. Hudson, Wis., has frequent prize fights pulled off, always with a deluge of 'sports,' gamblers, and criminals from St. Paul and Minneapolis, and the little town has no redress and no appeal.

"Approximately 100 men have been killed in the fight ring during the last fifteen years. Morally, at least, every legislator who votes for a fight bill in Illinois will be an accessory to the murders which are sure to be committed if the bill becomes law.

Goes Downhill Fast.

"The prize fighter himself usually goes down hill fast. After a few short years he is a has-been. He is then not fit for any reputable business. With a few honorable exceptions, prize fighters degenerate into bartenders, bouncers for disorderly houses, or plain criminals.

"The proviso that there shall be no decision rendered is a subterfuge which deceives no one who does not want to be deceived.

"The great religious bodies are opposed to legalized fighting. The Chicago Church Federation council, representing ten denominations, at its regular meeting on March 29, 1915, passed resolutions denouncing the proposed bill. The Catholics and Jews, unofficially but positively, through their highest representatives, also have declared their opposition."

SAYS KAISER PLANNED WAR YEARS AHEAD

Diary of "Count," Published in London, Tells of Many Talks.

"REVENGE" AS MOTIVE

BY JEANNETTE L. GILDER.

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—"The Berlin Court Under William II.," by Count Axel von Schwering, is a book that is going to attract wide attention. If it is all it claims to be, the book will make an international sensation. The London publishers are Cassell & Co.

The publishers vouch for the absolute authenticity of the book, the real name of whose author is known to Arthur Spurgeon, manager of the house of Cassell. Mr. Spurgeon is intimately acquainted in high political circles in England and it is said that it was through one of the most important and best known of England's political leaders that he came into possession of the manuscript of this book.

Name of Writer Assumed.

The name on the title page is not the real name of the author. The book is issued under an assumed name, for otherwise it would not have been possible, according to the publisher's note, to make public the bulk of the information which appears in its pages. This applies particularly to the diary of the episodes that led up to the war.

Count Axel von Schwering [and this is a pseudonym] claims the most intimate acquaintance with William II., not only in his court but in his private life. He has had long and intimate talks with him. He has disputed with him, which is a thing that it would take great intimacy to permit, and in the pages of this book he criticizes him as severely if not more severely than any outsider who has written about him in connection with the present war.

"Revenge of Great Magnitude."

When we begin Count von Schwering's diary we have the most exciting pages of this book. He tells us about meeting the emperor after the murder of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and records the interview with great particularity in his diary:

"He spoke coldly about the assassination of his friend, as if the event had not impressed him beyond what a fait divers would have done. Only once did he give way to emotion, and that was when I spoke about the grief which the old Emperor Francis Joseph must have felt when told that tragedy for the second time had robbed him of his heir.

"'Yes, he is to be pitied,' replied William II., 'and yet, God knows, he is not the one I pity most. There are others who will suffer through this death—others who will lose their all through it.'

"And to my remark that probably he was thinking of the children of the murdered archduke, he answered, to my astonishment, that he had never given them a thought. When I looked up at him inquiringly, he then said, slowly, that this murder would call for revenge and that revenge sometimes leads to catastrophe of unusual magnitude."

Von Moltke Expected War.

Count Axel goes on to relate an interview he had with his friend Moltke. Moltke, he says, avowed to him that the storm was coming at least. He was inclined to believe that Emperor William had been more in favor of war than he had professed to be. Moltke had no doubt whatever about German success.

The next important entry in the diary is made on board the imperial yacht, July, 1914. They were sitting on deck on a wonderfully mild night. The emperor sat on the captain's bridge smoking a big cigar and lying back in a rocking chair. His eyes were half closed. For a long time he did not speak. Then he called Count Axel to a seat behind him and at once plunged into the matter which lay uppermost in the thoughts of both of them.

"So Austria is moving, friend Axel," he said. "I wonder what the steps she has taken will bring about?"

"May I venture to say that your majesty was aware that it was going to take place?"

"I aware? You are mistaken, my friend. I knew nothing, and why should I? The matter does not concern me, after all, and I purposely did not go to Vienna so that they might not say I was in any way privy to it."

Said "Events Are Hurrying."

On July 25, 1914, Count von Schwering was again with the emperor, talking, on the royal yacht. A courier from Berlin came aboard with important letters. William II. did not retire to his cabin to read them, but opened them on the deck. As he read their contents his face changed considerably and assumed an earnest expression. He turned toward Count Axel and merely said:

"Events are hurrying; you can see now for yourself how they stand. One of the telegrams says that Serbia has accepted the Austrian ultimatum except on a few points which are of no importance whatever."

Count Axel continued: "I sighed with relief. The news seemed to be almost too good to be true.

"The emperor stood silent for some time gazing on the sea, as if meditating on some grave problem he could not quite solve to his own satisfaction. Then with a gesture of impatience he threw away the cigaret he had been smoking.

"'People will be fools,' he said. 'Why is it always so difficult to make them understand what is required of them without calling a spade a spade?' He followed this enigmatic remark with a quick order to up anchor and steam for Kiel."

"Might Have Caught Poincare."

Writing in his diary on July 27, Count Axel quotes his emperor as playfully remarking:

"'If only we were ten days older we might perhaps have taken little busybody, meddling Poincare, prisoner, together with his man-o-war.'

"'What does your majesty mean?' I said. 'We are not at war with France and there exists no reason why we should be.'

"'There exists no reason why we should be at war with anybody,' replied the emperor, 'and yet who knows whether a few days will not see us at war with everybody? Do you think that France will remain quiet in the case of Russia attacking us?'"

"Not Warring for Austria."

On July 28 Count Axel makes another entry in his diary and appears to be laboring under great excitment:

"July 28—I have seen the emperor. He began talking to me about the events of the day, and expressed himself at first with calm and coolness on the war, which he considered inevitable. I ventured to ask him what could have happened to imbue him with such a conviction, and what had been the real reason which had determined him to draw the sword in order to support the inadmissible demands of Austria. The emperor lifted his shoulders in a deprecating manner, saying as he did so:

"'Is it possible, my dear Axel, that you, too, believe that it is on account of Austria that I am going to war?'

"I looked at him with intense surprise, so unexpected had been that question.

Waited to Be Prepared.

"'You are astonished at what I say,' he resumed. 'But will you let me speak to you with sincerity and with the frankness which behooves old friends such as we have been? You have known me until this day as an essentially pacific sovereign; sometimes, even, you have thought me too lenient and yielding in questions where I ought to have protested against unjust accusations leveled against German politics and Germany in general.

"'Well, if I have been so it is not because I wanted peace at any price. I kept quiet, simply because we were not ready, and that when one engages in a war, even with ninety-nine chances of victory and only one of defeat, it is still a crime to do so if one is unprepared. Germany, envied and detested as she is, cannot afford to be vanquished in anything that she undertakes, far less in a war.

"'I had therefore to weigh all the chances of a possible defeat, and so long as I saw even a single one I deferred the execution of the plan, which I have nursed ever since my boyish days, when you and I were talking about a German empire even greater than the one which existed already.

Prepared for 25 Years.

"'It has taken me twenty-five years to establish on a solid basis the attempt that I am going to make at present, but never for a single day have I forgotten the mission which lies before me and which I must perform or perish in the attempt.

"'Look at the geographical position of Germany, surrounded as she is by numerous foes, all eager to feast on her, all persuaded that the day is drawing near when they will be able to sweep her from the face of the earth. Do you think that I was not aware of the hatred with which we are regarded everywhere, of the jealousy that dogs our footsteps?

"'I have borne with the insults of both the Pan-Slavist and the Franco-phile parties; I have submitted to detractions of my army; I have kept still whilst formidable alliances have been formed against German prestige and German power; I have submitted to the very foolish boastings of an idiotic press, which in every country in the world has cried out that the very existence of Germany constituted a public danger against which the whole of humanity ought to rise up in anger and self-defense. And I have remained quiet.'

Hard to Take Insult.

"During the conversation the emperor became much excited.

"'Do you think this has been easy?' he said. 'If so, you are vastly mistaken, my friend. Every one of these daily insults and provocations has seared my soul like a red hot iron. I have felt it eating into my rest, and driving sleep away from my eyes. But I have made no sign; I remained passive because I knew that the hour of reckoning was at hand, when the sovereigns who had believed that they were conferring an honor on me when they condescended to attend my daughter's wedding would crawl in the dust at my feet before the might of my sword, and would have to recognize that Germany was the greatest, the most powerful nation in the whole world, her emperor the one potentate whom no one dared to thwart in any way.'

"'O, yes,' he said, 'for the next few days half the world will call me mad for daring to enter into a struggle with almost the whole of Europe. They will vote me a silly, blinded creature, led away by his pride and vanity. But this will not last long. Very soon these same people will be stunned by the spectacle they will witness.'

Foresaw Glory in History.

"On another the emperor said:

"'War is not sport, nor can it be looked upon with merciful eyes. Mercy, when out of places, comes often quite close to cruelty. We stand today on the threshold of the most titanic struggle history has ever witnessed; it is our duty to end it as quickly as possible.

"'Under these circumstances it is indispensable to strike terror into the soul of the enemy, to convince him at the very outset that resistance is worse than useless, and that no pity shall be shown to him, because pity would mean the prolongation of the conflict necessity obliges us to fight—and fight to a finish.

"'I shall spare no one, because I mean to win, because the destinies of Prussia require from me the sacrifice even of my reputation in history and by doing so I can insure its triumph.

"'You think me a monster of hypocrisy; perhaps I am one—perhaps not. But I know one thing—that later on, when we are all dead and gone, history, which will judge, will speak about me as another conqueror, whose reign put his country on such a pinnacle of glory and power that no other in the world will be worthy to be even mentioned beside it.'"

Failure of Last Appeal.

In September, 1914, Count Axel resumes writing in his diary:

"I am determined, though, to attempt one last effort to speak with the emperor.

"Midnight—The die is cast. I have played my last card, and I have lost. I have seen the emperor. I have tried to appeal to his heart, to his feelings of justice and of humanity. All my efforts have been useless. The emperor remained inflexible.

"To my adjurations he replied, 'War is not child's play,' and that it was time people realized it. The only means to insure a peace for Germany, he went on, consisted in showing oneself pitiless and in hesitating before nothing. That the whole kingdom of Belgium had been destroyed was very regrettable, but an example had to be made and the world had to learn that Germany was not to be trifled with.

Duty Toward His People.

"'I have duties to perform toward my own people,' the emperor added, 'and I must think of the sacrifices Germany has made; she deserves a reward. Let her find it in the knowledge that not one power in the world is capable of resisting her and that whoever attempts to do so is instantly destroyed.'

"'It is not of Germany your majesty is thinking,' I could not prevent myself from exclaiming. 'It is of your own ambition and vanity.'

"William II. stared at me.

"'I can afford to forgive you, Friend Axel,' he said."

HIGH GERMAN HEADS KILLED

LONDON, April 10.—A semi-official statement issued at Petrograd says a Reuter's dispatch announces that several German officers of high rank were killed and several others injured when a train carrying the staff of an army corps was derailed in the section of Poland occupied by the Germans.

INJURED SUFFER GREAT TORTURES ON BATTLEFIELDS

Hospital Corps Must Brave Dangers to Remove Victims from Range of Fire.

BY HENRY J. REILLY.

[War Correspondent of The Tribune.]

[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, March 20.—It is morning and almost complete silence reigns along the front as the men of the two armies in their trenches, never more than a few hundred yards apart, try to snatch a little sleep, a little rest, after a night full of fighting.

The men in the allied trenches hear a report followed by a whistling noise, and then more reports and more whistling noises. They strain their ears to hear in what direction the whistling noise is moving, because experience has taught them how to tell approximately whether the projectiles are going to explode well beyond, to the right, to the left, or amongst them.

This time those of a certain section know that the shells are coming in their direction. They crouch lower in the shelters they have dug out in the front face of their trench. There is a series of loud explosions, some just in front of the trench, some just in the rear of it, but one right on the front edge of it. This one sends up a cloud of dirt and smoke, breaks down the front face of the trench, burying in the dirt the men who are crouching under it, while fragments flying right and left kill and wound a number of men. Well men from each side come up with spades and try to dig out those who have been buried while keeping well under cover. This time they succeed and get out four men, all badly shaken and bruised and all almost suffocated to death.

First Aid by Hospital Corps.

The hospital corps men give the wounded first aid treatment. Many of them have broken bones and bodies badly torn by pieces of shell. With the help of some infantry soldiers they are carried back through the communicating trench to the support trench.

In the early stages of the war surgeons were kept in the trenches to take care of the wounded immediately they were hit. However, so many of these surgeons were killed or wounded that it was decided to have them no farther to the front than the dressing stations.

The enemy's artillery fire starting up again and continuing in earnest, the wounded can be moved no farther. In fact, they are fortunate to have been moved that far, because frequently the fire is so great they cannot be moved from the place they fell when struck. Here, during the remainder of the long day, these men lie, some of them fortunately unconscious, others conscious, and as the first numbness which generally succeeds any bad wound wears off, suffering more and more.

Wounded Drag Selves to Rear.

From time to time as the fire slackens other wounded are brought in to join them. Those men not so badly wounded but that they can walk or drag themselves along drift back from the firing trench continuously. Some of these "walking cases," as they are called, prefer to risk the journey back through the communicating trench and getting to the dressing station as best they can rather than wait until night comes and with it relief. It is surprising with what bad wounds men can manage to move along without help or with very little help. How painful the effort is, however, is shown by the way in which they always largely overestimate the distance they have come.

Stretcher Bearers Work at Night.

Once it is really dark, the stretcher bearers arrive from the dressing stations, and with the help of such soldiers as can be spared, if any can be spared, carry those who cannot walk and help the others back the half or three-fourths of a mile necessary to reach the dressing station. These stations are generally somewhere near the outer limit of effective infantry fire.

If the night is a calm one and there is not much firing going on, the wounded are lifted out of the trenches and taken straight back across country. If the firing is too heavy for this the trip must be made back the much longer distance through the narrow, zigzagging communicating trench.

Arrived at the dressing station, the wounded are carried or helped in through the gateway of an apparently deserted French farm. A French farm always consists of a house, one or two barns, a stable, and a number of smaller buildings, all built around a rectangular courtyard and all joined directly to each other by high brick walls.

Dressing Stations in Farmhouses.

Once inside the courtyard the quick opening and closing of a door shows that the farm is not deserted, but that there is light in one of the rooms. Several men come out and prove to be sergeants of the hospital corps. They have the more seriously wounded taken in the main room of the farmhouse, which is a low, fairly long room, with a stove at one end, which while giving out heat, is also giving out considerable smoke. All the windows are closed and covered, so that not the least bit of light may get out. On the floor, some on stretchers, some on straw, covered up with blankets, lie the more seriously wounded. The only light is the light given out by a number of lanterns. By these lanterns the surgeons make such dressings as are necessary. They reduce fractures and give only the most essential treatment to the more dangerous wounds. They have found by experience that the less a wound is interfered with until the patient arrives in a hospital with every convenience for operating, the better the chance of the patient to survive.

Barn Used as Receiving Ward.

The lesser wounded, after having been looked after, are taken out to the barn and made as comfortable and as warm as possible in the immense piles of straw which fill it. All who are able to take it are given a hot broth. At the same time that the wounded are being attended to, little cards, telling the nature of their wound or wounds, are being made out and tied securely to some part of their clothing.

Sometimes, when the fire is severe, the ambulances cannot come closer than half a mile of the dressing station. Then the wounded must either walk or be carried by hand from the dressing station to the ambulances. The worst wounded are picked up first and put in the first ambulance, which is then sent off to the field ambulance. If there are a great many wounded the less serious cases have to wait until the ambulances can make a second or third trip. Sometimes wounded arrive at the dressing station just before dawn and too late for the ambulances to make another trip. These must remain at the dressing station all the following day and until the following night before they can be moved.

Some of the badly wounded die in the dressing stations. They are buried at night in the little cemeteries which have been established on all the battle fields near the dressing stations. In these cemeteries are also placed the dead killed in action.

The trip back to the field ambulances which are established on the edge of the artillery zone, is at best a painful one. The ambulances must travel without lights and over roads frequently full of holes made by exploding shells, some of which are big enough to overturn an ambulance should a wheel drop into them.

Schools Used as Field Hospitals.

Finally the field hospital is reached. The buildings used in this case are those of the public school of a small village. There are two two-story brick buildings, connected by a covered passageway. The roofs have been badly damaged and most of the windows smashed by the fighting which took place in the vicinity several weeks before.

The ambulances back up to the front gate. Tired hospital corps men and the surgeons who went with the ambulances help to carry out the wounded into a large room on the ground floor of the first building. Here there is a stove which gives out an agreeable warmth, the holes in the windows having been stuffed with rags of various kinds.

Equipment of Field Hospital.

There are several lanterns standing on the floor. In the next room, which is almost similar, the surgeons have arranged an operating table, and all round the sides of the room are open panniers which contain all the instruments and kit necessary for a field hospital. Here also are some lamps with reflectors. The wounded are brought in one by one, their wounds carefully examined and redressed. They are then carried to the second building, where they are laid in rows around the walls on the straw which has been put thickly over the floor.

On the whole, all the wounded are silent and seem to have little or no interest in anything until the hospital corps men start to move them, when their interest becomes intense, as movement of any kind to a badly wounded man is the thing he dreads the most.

Once out of the field hospital and on his way to the clearing hospital, the wounded man has left the battlefield and has started that trip to the rear which, if he does not die, will end in a base hospital with every modern convenience.

DUNNE PREDICTS WATERWAY PLAN WILL GO THROUGH

Counts on Legislative Support; Ottawa and Morris Objections to Be Overcome.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Peoria, Ill., April 10.—[Special.]—Gov. Dunne tonight expressed satisfaction over the results of the three day inspection tour by a party of 160 members of the Illinois legislature of the proposed route of the eight foot waterway from Joliet to La Salle.

"I have not heard of any one who is opposed to the waterway plan," the governor said at a banquet tonight given by the Peoria chamber of commerce to the legislative party. "Everywhere we have been we found enthusiastic support for the general scheme that will give Illinois the opportunity of taking advantage of the Panama canal.

"I think those members of the legislature who were doubtful of the advisability of building the eight foot waterway have been convinced the plan has much merit.

Will Overcome Objections.

"We have found some objections to the general details of our proposition number three. In my estimation this merely is a matter of ironing out engineering difficulties. The residents of Morris and Ottawa naturally are concerned with the effect the higher water stages in the Illinois river will have upon their property and their public improvements, such as sewer systems.

"In preparing this project we of course had in mind taking care of all of these propositions in a just manner. The engineers' estimates are based upon all of these conditions.

"The construction of the waterway will bring benefits to both Morris and Ottawa far in excess of the damages to individual property owners. The value of this waterway to the industrial life of both cities cannot be estimated."

Wilson Favors Waterway.

Gov. Dunne read a message from President Wilson indorsing the waterway scheme. The message was:

Edward F. Dunne, governor of Illinois—Am in sympathy with the desire to improve waterway in such a manner as to encourage actual navigation on permanent basis. A through water route from the great lakes to the Mississippi and on the Mississippi to New Orleans, where connections with seagoing vessels can be made, should afford a valuable opportunity for development of such commerce. [illegible] WILSON.

Lyman E. Cooley, consulting engineer of Gov. Dunne's board [illegible] engineers who formulated the proposition number 3, discussed with the members of the legislature during the trip down the Illinois river from Ottawa to Starved Rock this morning the objections raised by the citizens of Ottawa and Morris to the project because of what he termed "fancied damages."

The legislative party came to Peoria this afternoon by river packet.

CIRCUS COMING TO TOWN, 27 ELEPHANTS—COUNT 'EM.

Ringlings' Leaves Baraboo, Wis., on 89 Cars, with Everything from Red Wagon to Queen of Sheba.

The red wagons and elephants are coming to town today and many a small boy may be missing from Sunday school. The five long trains bearing the wonders of Ringling Brothers' circus are due to arrive in the yards of the Northwestern railroad at an early hour.

The circus trains left the winter quarters in Baraboo, Wis., yesterday, and the first section was due to arrive in Chicago about 2 a. m. The show is traveling this season on eighty-nine cars.

Beginning Monday the circus will enter upon a week of strenuous rehearsals in the Coliseum, and the new season will be officially opened on Saturday evening, April 17.

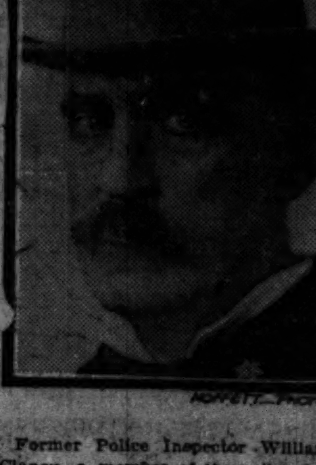
Born 1849. Died 1915.



MOFFETT—PHOTO

Former Police Inspector William P. Clancy, a member of the police department for more than thirty years, died yesterday at his residence, 5553 South Green street. He resigned from the force three years ago. At that time he was in charge of the stockyards district.

He was reduced to the rank of captain, following the council order abolishing the rank of inspector. In 1909 he came into the limelight, when he was charged with allowing "Jim" O'Leary's gambling den to run wide open. He did not resign, however, until three years later.

Clancy was taken into the police department at the time of the annexation of the town of Lake and rose rapidly.

After his resignation he ran for congress and was defeated. Then he retired to private life. He was born in County Galway, Ireland, sixty-six years ago. He is survived by his widow and eight children.

OBITUARY.

MRS. CAROLINE DILLINGHAM CARPENTER, widow of United States Senator Matthew Hale Carpenter, died at Milwaukee. She was 81 years old. Her brother, W. P. Dillingham, is United States senator from Vermont. Mrs. Carpenter was for years social dictator in Milwaukee. When her husband was made acting vice president upon the death of Vice President Wilson Mrs. Carpenter's social rank in Washington was second only to that of Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, wife of the then president.

MRS. MARION BLANCHARD WOOD—The funeral of Mrs. Marion Blanchard Wood, wife of Franklin N. Wood, attorney for the National Jewelers' Board of Trade, was held yesterday, the remains being placed in the vault at Oakwoods. Mrs. Wood was organist of the First Unitarian church for some time and was a member of the Amateur club.

THOMAS B. BROUGHAM, 1415 East Fifty-second street, died yesterday in Los Angeles. He practiced law in Chicago for many years. He was 68 years old. The funeral arrangements are to be announced later.

ATTACKS RATES ON PARCEL POST; TOO EXPENSIVE

Congressman Kindel Says That Express Service Is Cheaper on Long Haul Traffic.

George J. Kindel, congressman from Colorado, who has made a hobby of parcel post rates, stopped over in Chicago for an hour Friday on a return trip from the Panama canal. He spent thirty minutes of his time in THE TRIBUNE office pointing out how Chicagoans could save $2,000,000 a year by a more judicious manipulation of their express and parcel post shipments.

Congressman Kindel has issued three cardinal shipping principles in his national campaign for a readjustment of the parcel post tariffs, which, he asserts, if followed, will save the public millions annually.

Here's His Advice.

His warnings are:

Never ship above five pounds by parcel post beyond the third zone.

Never ship by parcel post above ten pounds beyond the second zone.

Never ship anything edible by parcel post.

"The twenty pound parcel post rate from Philadelphia to Chicago is $1.22, while the express rate is 66 cents," he explained. "The parcel post rates on ten pound shipments beyond the second zone are from 20 to 100 per cent higher than express rates, besides the extra charge for insurance. A shipper never should use the parcel post for edibles, because the express companies give 25 per cent off the regular merchandise charges. For instance, maple sugar can be shipped from Burlington, Vt., to Denver for 90 cents by express, while the parcel post tariff is $2.01.

Criticizes Present Law.

"The present law puts the first, second, and third zones at too low a charge, while the fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth are far too high.

"The big mail order houses have their eyes open and are making great savings. The New York houses ship a big bulk order by parcel post to Des Moines. There they redistribute and ship again at the lower short haul parcel post rates, or in the case of a longer haul by express."

SUICIDE AFTER BABY'S BIRTH

Mother Takes Poison During Illness Following Advent of Child 2 Months Ago.

Mrs. Walter M. Ready, wife of the secretary of the Ready & Callahan Coal company, committed suicide yesterday by swallowing poison in the bathroom of 5432 Princeton avenue. The Readys had been married two years. Since the birth of a baby girl two months ago Mrs. Ready had been ill, and a coroner's jury declared she had ended her life while temporarily insane.

CITY TO AVERT BANKRUPTCY.

Chicago Real Estate Board Agents Withdraw Objection to Juul Law Amendment.

An agreement whereby the city government may be saved from bankruptcy for at least five years was reached yesterday in the office of Corporation Counsel John W. Beckwith. Representatives of the Chicago real estate board said they would withdraw their objection to the pending bill which places the levies for sinking fund and interest on bonds outside the scaling process of the Juul law. It was agreed to have the bill amended to expire July 1, 1921.

Heated by two No. 111 WEIL Smokeless Firebox Boilers.

The Heart of Any Apartment

That's the real name for the boiler. It is the heart of the entire building. The boiler is a mighty important organ. For both tenant's comfort and owner's profits depend upon it.

No apartment is better than its heating system, regardless of the most charming arrangements and the most luxurious decorations. And the one boiler that matches up to the finest building construction bears this name:

Smokeless WEIL Down Draft
FIREBOX BOILER

This smokeless firebox boiler has been approved by the Chicago Smoke Inspection Department. The double grate construction does away with the formation of smoke, and the maximum amount of heat is used before the gases reach the flue.

16 Per Cent Better Than Others

A recent scientific engineering test proved that the WEIL is 16 per cent more efficient than other smokeless firebox boilers. It will heat your building perfectly. It will make 16 per cent more steam from every pound of coal.

Ask your architect to tell you why the WEIL Bent Water Tube Grates give this boiler 16 per cent more efficiency.

Burns Cheapest Coal

No boiler will burn low grade soft coal more efficiently than the WEIL. It gets all the available heat that the coal contains.

WEIL Firebox Boilers are manufactured for all types of buildings. You will find them in Chicago's finest apartment and office buildings.

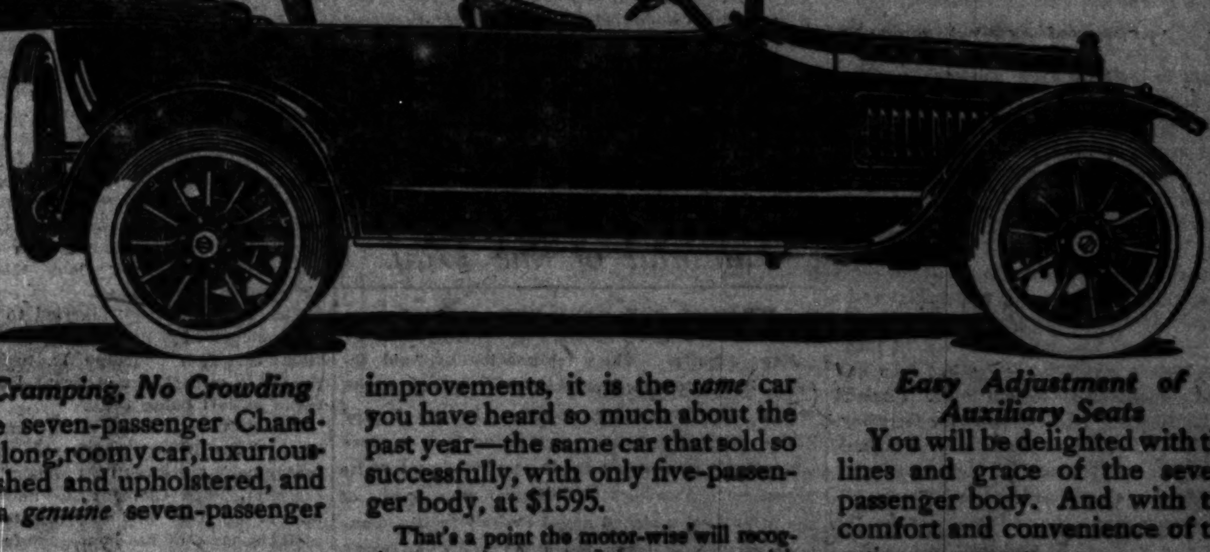
Come In and See the New Seven-Passenger

CHANDLER SIX

The Pioneer Light-Weight Six

$1295

IF you are one of the hundreds who have been waiting to see the new seven-passenger Chandler, this announcement will bring you good news. For it's here. We have just received our first shipment. Come in and see this wonderful car the very first thing. It meets, and even excells, our most hopeful expectations. It is everything, and more too, that the factory said it would be. You simply cannot help being enthusiastic about it.



No Cramping, No Crowding

The seven-passenger Chandler is a long, roomy car, luxuriously finished and upholstered, and with a genuine seven-passenger body.

Up in front is that same marvelous Chandler motor that in three years' time has made the Chandler the recognized quality leader of light sixes—one of the really famous American cars.

It doesn't seem possible that such a car could be built to sell for $1295. No other manufacturer has produced such a splendid car for such a low price.

Still, the Chandler has always offered seemingly impossible value ever since the company brought out the first high-grade, light-weight six selling for less than $2000.

Chandler has led all the way in the light-six field.

Tried and True, Not Experimental

One of the most pleasing things about the new seven-passenger Chandler is the fact that, except for its longer wheel-base and big roomy body and a few general improvements, it is the same car you have heard so much about the past year—the same car that sold so successfully, with only five-passenger body, at $1595.

That's a point the motor-wise will recognize as very important. It is not a new model, not a new design, not a new motor, designed to meet price tendencies.

Not a single feature of design or materials has been cheapened in quality to make the price possible. It is the car that for two years has established price tendencies, not followed them.

No Other Car at Less Than $2000 Possesses All these Features

The exclusive Chandler motor, of Chandler design and built in the Chandler factory. A powerful, quiet, economical, beautifully finished motor that any man may well be proud of.
Bosch Magneto, and Bosch Spark Plugs.
Gray & Davis Electric Starting Motor.
Gray & Davis Electric Generator.
Rayfield Double-Jet Carburetor.
Mayo Genuine Mercedes Type Radiator.
Worm-Bevel Rear Axle, smooth-running and silent.
Cast Aluminum Motor Base extending from frame to frame; giving rigidity to the engine mounting; providing pedestals for magneto, water and oil pumps and generator and doing away with necessity for a dirty, rattly sheet-metal drip pan.
Three Silent Chains, enclosed and running in bath of oil, for driving motor shafts.
Genuine Hand-Buffed Leather Upholstery.
Firestone Demountable Rims.
Stewart Vacuum Gasoline Feed.
Golde Patent One-Man Top covered with high-finish Never-Leak.
Jiffy Curtains.
Bair Patent Top Holders.
Motor-Driven Horn.
Stewart-Warner Magnetic Speedometer.
Instantly Adjustable Tire Carrier (no straps) at rear of tonneau.
All the usual incidental equipment.

Easy Adjustment of Auxiliary Seats

You will be delighted with the lines and grace of the seven-passenger body. And with the comfort and convenience of the seating arrangements.

The tonneau seat and the driver's seat are wide and deep and thickly cushioned. The auxiliary seats are of the most clever design. When not in use they fold away into the floor and back of the front seat, leaving the tonneau free from any marring obstruction and converting the car into an extremely roomy five-passenger carriage.

No thumb-screws or levers of any sort are necessary for the adjustment of these seats. One direct motion of the hand raises either seat, ready for use, or lowers it away, completely out of sight.

Order Early If You Want To Be Sure

With new buildings and added equipment the factory has increased its production greatly for this year. But even this big production will not be enough to fill the demand.

Since we first saw the new seven-passenger model, we have tried hard to double our order to the factory. We want more cars, and so does every Chandler dealer all over the country, but we can't get them. This car is so far out in front of all others, that we know we could sell twice as many.

We will have to be content with what our contract calls for. But that is our loss, not yours, if you place your order early. We are going to try to keep a sample car on our floor. There is one here now. Come in and see it. Come and have a demonstration of this leader car.

Bring your family along, or your family and friends, and see how comfortably the Chandler seats seven.

"Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

OUR COUNTRY AND OUR POLICY.

The legal right of the United States to permit its citizens to engage in the commerce in arms and munitions of war with belligerent governments is clear.

Equally clear is the legal right of the United States to check or prohibit such commerce.

Which right it will exercise is a question that lies entirely within the domain of policy.

Upon the outbreak of the present war our government adopted the policy of neutrality, and neutrality implies that the government shall take no action which will disturb the normal relations between this country and any belligerent. The most important of these relations is that of free commerce, and strict neutrality demands that whatever the abnormal conditions produced by the belligerents themselves, our government shall not interfere with such commerce as can be carried on with any or all of them. The practical consequences of this normal passive policy are created by the acts of belligerents and lie outside our legal responsibility.

Whether we maintain this position must depend upon considerations not of legality but of duty and interest. It is becoming increasingly evident that our exercise of or even our diplomatic insistence upon our neutral rights is causing resentment both in England and in Germany. In the former country there is a natural disposition to identify the English cause with that of human progress, civilization, independence, freedom, and international good faith, and United States is blamed for not accepting this identity and coming actively to the defense of so much that we prize. Even in its more moderate official form we are made conscious of the expectation that a moral support of them should take the form of permitting the allies a free hand even at out own cost and the disparagement of our neutral policy toward Germany.

On the other hand, German feeling, assuming Germany to be the victim of British perfidy and Russian ambition and identifying the German cause with all that is good in modern civilization, resents the practical assistance to the allies which our government's neutrality and our citizens' commercial interest bring about. The actual result, whatever the legal theory of right may be, is that the allies are able to obtain in America arms and munitions for the destruction of German lives, and German feeling has more and more openly resented this.

In short, we are begetting the enmity of both England and Germany.

With this unfortunate fact fully recognized, it is for us gravely to consider our position and our policy.

We are not ready to accept the idealized views of their respective parts in the war held by the various combatants. Without denying the idealistic element in the cause maintained by any of them, we are fully aware that self-interest has been and is a controlling factor in all their policies. England is fighting for England, and Germany for Germany, and Russia for Russia, and France for France—yes, and Belgium for Belgium.

That is human and right and necessary.

And it is human and right and necessary for the United States to work for its own interest.

This may be an offensive consideration to the utopian, the theoretical altruist. Nevertheless it is a reality of international relations and of human nature, and the people which ignores it because its own necessities are not at the moment pressing and because it is pleasant to indulge in theoretical altruism without apparent expense is deceiving itself and preparing for its own costly disillusionment.

The world is shaking with the tremendous combat of armed national egotisms. If we are not bemused with utopian dreams we know that this combat will not usher in the millennium and we shall realize from the spectacle of so much violence and destruction that the time has not yet come when a nation can afford to stand naked in the world without other defense than the good will of its neighbors. While interests clash we prefer our own to those of other nations. The man who does not is not an American. Until mankind has attained a higher development, a greater uniformity of ideals, standards, and traditions, and a greater community of interests than are discernible to the mass of men today, nationality with its rivalries must be accepted as a fact. This is the wisdom underlying the blunt practical patriotism of Stephen Decatur's toast, and though the extreme altruist may be offended by it, it is accepted and approved by all but a very small minority.

From this standpoint of tangible national interest our commerce in arms, until conditions change materially, must remain what it is.

It is within the unpleasant possibilities that we should be subjected to measures so drastic as to compel an equally drastic response. With full consciousness of the extreme gravity of our action we might be compelled to resort to an embargo, and this would be entirely within our legal right.

But in present conditions our national interest lies in our present policy. The financial and social benefits to us from the commerce in arms are substantial, and they are benefits we could not well afford to waive. The war has stricken this country. The need of building up our international credit balance is plain. The need for employing idle workers is great.

But there is another phase of this commerce, which, though it is ignored, is of great importance. It has developed our capacity for manufacturing arms and munitions of war, and to that extent we have diminished our unpreparedness for national defense.

The importance of being able to provide arms and munitions of war within one's own borders has been acutely emphasized by the present war. It may even prove to be the decisive factor. Our supply of copper, of iron, and other necessaries is probably ample. But manufacturing plants and trained direction and labor also are necessary. These are now being developed.

This war has tremendously emphasized the importance of artillery, machine guns, and great supplies or resources of ammunition. It also has brought about in America a development of this vital factor of defense without the exhortation of purblind congressmen or the awakening of an uninformed and hence indifferent public.

The occasion for the growth of this necessary industry is tragically deplorable, but since it has been thrust upon us, it is the part of wisdom to make the most of it.

THE SERBIAN HELL.

Reports of conditions in Serbia are so terrible it is difficult for the imagination to accept them as real. They read like De Foe's "Diary of the Plague in London," and, as a matter of fact, they record a state of horror and suffering similar to the medieval visitations of the "black death," if on a smaller scale.

A sharper edge is given to our pity by the thought that a good deal of this suffering could have been prevented had not American generosity been chiefly centered upon the misfortunes of the Belgians. But there is some consolation in the fact that if relief is given promptly even now it will accomplish a great change. The Red Cross, if properly supplied, can be depended upon to handle the situation efficiently.

It is no disparagement of the needs of other districts stricken by the war to say that at this time Serbia's need is most acute. The heroism shown by volunteer doctors and nurses from America in Serbia ought of itself to inspire an impulse here in fortunate America to come to their aid.

AN ARTIST'S LAMENT.

When the artist Kneller reproduced in a portrait of the Duchess of Cleveland a vexatious wen which obtruded itself upon that royal favorite's physiognomy, he jeopardized his own comfort and hurt the feelings of the vindictive though otherwise complaisant lady.

Disregarding the experiences of his intrepid predecessor, Mr. Walter Ufer, a Chicago painter, announces his belief in the beauty of truth and his determination to paint his subjects as they are. He proposes to be Carlyle's "faithful human creature," drawing the face and figure as he sees them, and so to compete in accuracy with Mr. Shaw's favorite art, photography.

A note of ungraciousness creeps into Mr. Ufer's declaration. He indicts the women of the community for interfering with his plans in the matter. They desire, says he, to be painted in the posture and habiliments of queens, waving fans and all draped in tulle. They wish, he proceeds madly to say, to be too well groomed and to look like some one else besides their charming selves. Even so impeccant an esthete as the mayor of Chicago frowns on candid chronicles in oil and declines to permit his daughter the joy of a Ufer portrait, though he himself has been subjected to Mr. Ufer's uncompromising representation. In Paris and Munich, Mr. Ufer records, this dubious lack of faith in their physical attributes does not exist among the women, and so the artists in those capitals may be happy though honest.

A forthright fellow is Mr. Ufer, possessing the frankness that is the seal of a noble mind. So this plight in a neighborhood so insincere toward portraiture is a pitiable one. He may not reproduce by his upright brushes the contours of the double chin or the subtle crevasses of the crow's foot. The pallor and the hollow cheek of this generation may not be perpetuated to be regarded in future years by posterity, and there will be no record of flat chests or insufficient hair. Thus is the atelier reduced to the status of a beauty parlor, and Mr. Ufer, if he is to prosper, must become a Madame Yale.

Editorial of the Day.

WHAT IS THE NAVY FOR, ANYHOW?

[From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.]

Rear Admiral Fiske's resignation as "aid for operations" to the secretary of the navy again raises the interesting question, Is the United States navy a fighting machine or is it a mere educational institution for the improvement of its personnel? Although the admiral, who is one of the most distinguished naval experts in the country's service, is much too strict a disciplinarian to talk for the public as to the reasons which prompted him to ask for another assignment, it is well understood that his retirement from staff duty is the culmination of a long standing disagreement with Secretary Daniels and that he represents the views of the naval service as a whole.

The difference between the secretary and his professional advisers seems to be that the latter believe that efficiency as a military organization should be the primary aim of the department, while the secretary shares with Secretary Bryan the view that the navy is a convenient medium for experimentation in various forms of humanitarian endeavor and for the exercise of "practical politics," a form of activity in which they are most efficient. This radical difference was brought into acute contrast a few months ago, when Admiral Fiske gave the house committee on naval affairs, as he was bound to do, his unvarnished opinion concerning the efficiency and preparedness of the navy. It did not please the secretary to have the nation informed, on the authority of an expert of such high rank, that the navy was without a guiding military policy, and it had fallen off in gunnery, was without sufficient men to man the ships in case of emergency, and that the personnel was insufficiently drilled. And since that testimony was given, it is said, the recommendations of Admiral Fiske for the improvement of the service have been studiously ignored by the secretary.

This conflict of opinion and policy is deeply to be regretted, for the retirement of Admiral Fiske seems to indicate that he and those who agree with him regard the situation hopeless so long as Secretary Daniels continues to be intrusted with the grave responsibility of controlling this most important weapon of national defense. The public will soon learn the true conditions, however, and President Wilson is likely to come to an early realization that Secretary Daniels may be too heavy a burden to carry in 1916.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1915: By the Brentwood Co.]

THE recent transfer of the statue of Sydney, Lord Herbert of Lea, from an obscure quadrangle of the war department at Whitehall to Waterloo place, where it now, in conjunction with the newly unveiled statue of Florence Nightingale, flanks the Crimean memorial, serves to recall an odd incident which took place a few years ago, when the statue of this gifted, handsome, and popular statesman, who had been secretary of state for war during the Crimean campaign in 1854-1855, was moved from the old war office in Pall Mall to the new one at Whitehall.

His widow, old Lady Herbert of Lea (mother of Sir Michael Herbert, who died while British ambassador to the United States), was still alive when this transfer took place. As the wagon conveying her husband's statue passed slowly along Pall Mall, through Trafalgar Square, to its destination in Whitehall she followed in a brougham, with drawn window blinds, the coachman and footman in deep mourning and the dimly lighted lanterns shrouded with crêpe—as if following a hearse—thus paying this last tribute of devotion to her husband, who had been dead for almost half a century.

Philip W. Sargent, in his recently published book on Princess Mathilde Bonaparte, who played so great a rôle throughout the reign of Napoleon III. and afterward in the social world of the French metropolis as the Lady Bountiful and enlightened patroness of art and literature, states that he had been unable to discover the reason which led her to break off suddenly, on the very eve of the war of 1870, her relations with Count Nieuwkerke. Having known Nieuwkerke, who was a natural son of William II. of Holland and perhaps the handsomest man of his day, I am in a position to unravel the mystery.

Nieuwkerke made the acquaintance in the early spring of 1870 of a then 16 year old girl of the name of Olga Cantacuzene. She was a particularly lovely girl, but of the same mental type as the much exploited and much discussed Marie Bashkirtzeff, tremendously precocious and very gifted. In the same way that Marie became infatuated at a much later date with the late Duke of Hamilton, Olga Cantacuzene fell wildly in love with Count Nieuwkerke, who was at least forty years her senior.

For her sake he broke in May, 1890, with Princess Mathilde, and, declaring to his friends that Olga was his adopted daughter, took up his residence with her and with her widowed mother, who, however, played a very small rôle in this strange establishment.

When the war broke out that summer they moved to London, and had a house in Cromwell road, South Kensington. He presented Olga everywhere as his adopted daughter, and was so popular and so brilliant that people accepted his explanation at its face value.

After the war was over the count, Olga, and her mother took up their residence at Lucca, in Italy, where he purchased a beautiful villa and large estate, and which he adorned with all the wonderful art treasures which he accumulated during his sixteen years' directorship of the Louvre in Paris, and his term of office as minister of fine arts to Napoleon III.

Finally, with a view of providing for Olga's position after his death, he arranged a matrimonial alliance for her with Prince Lorenzo Altieri, who came and took up his residence under the count's roof, with true philosophy. A year later a child was born, who received the name of Ludovica, and, while she bore an astonishing resemblance to Nieuwkerke, it must be borne in mind that the latter was over 70 years old at the time when she made her appearance in the world.

When the count died it was found that he had bequeathed all his magnificent art treasures, the villa and estate at Lucca, and his large fortune to Olga, who as Princess Olga Altieri was for many years a much appreciated contributor to the Paris Revue des Deux Mondes, in which her several novels appeared in serial form. Ludovica Altieri is now married to an Italian cavalry officer of the name of Guidotti, her first marriage to Count Codroipo having been annulled. She lives with her mother at Lucca, Prince Lorenzo Altieri being dead.

The Altieris are one of the most ancient families of the Roman patriciate, tracing their ancestry back more than a thousand years. In 1670, however, Pope Clement X., finding himself the last of his line, and desiring to perpetuate the historic name of his house, conferred the title of Prince Altieri upon a certain Marquis Albertoni, who had married his holiness' niece, Dona Laura Altieri, and it is from this marriage that the Altieris of today are descended.

The present head of the house of Altieri is Prince Ludovico, whose father was for so many years commander of the noble guard of the pope. He visited America a number of years ago, and at the time his name was connected by Dame Rumor with those of a number of American heiresses. But he still remains a bachelor.

The Altieri palace, which belongs to him, is one of the most historic and famous in Rome. Through his mother, who was a Princess Urach, he is related to the Prince of Monaco, and morganatically to the reigning house of Wurtemberg as well as that of Bavaria.

Although Queen Elizabeth is one of the most popular and picturesque figures in the history of England, yet for some reason or other her name has rarely been given to English warships. Indeed, in all the annals of the British navy, extending over many hundreds of years, there have been but three to bear the name of the virgin queen, the third being the superdreadnaught which is now with its great fifteen inch guns playing the leading rôle in the attack by the allied fleet upon the defenses of the Dardanelles and upon Constantinople.

The only other two Elizabeths in the navy formed part thereof under the reign of Queen Bess. There was one Elizabeth that figured in the English fleet that sailed to meet and rout the Spanish armada.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

SOME DISEASES OF THE MOUTH.

DR. O. E. DYSON, Illinois state veterinarian, informs me that Illinois has been cleared of foot and mouth disease. At the present time there is no animal known to be infected with the disease within the state. As practically similar statements are being sent out from other states, the probability is that this source of infection of the human mouth has ceased to exist, so far as this country is concerned.

Foot and mouth disease as a human infection was first described by an Austrian 151 years ago. It is known to be a filterable virus and is probably a spirile germ too small to see with our present microscopes. Naturally it is a disease of cloven hoof animals, and infects man only under exceptional circumstances.

The number of cases of foot and mouth disease in the human subject is small. The best evidence is that there has never been a case in the United States. But though we can forget human foot and mouth disease, it does not follow that diseases of the mouth are of no importance.

THRUSH—Thrush is one of the few diseases due to a mold. The mold responsible is much like that which grows on musty bread. Molds are everywhere. They are constantly getting in the mouth. Unless conditions there are proper for their growth, they are like seed sown on rocky soil.

The proper soil is composed of two substances—acid secretions and sugar. The saliva naturally is alkaline. When a drop of it is placed on a strip of litmus paper the spot turns blue. If the saliva is acid it turns litmus paper red. Litmus paper can be found in any drug store, and anybody can make the test.

The mold which causes thrush grows in acid saliva. Sugar is especially necessary as a food for it. Therefore, thrush is especially frequent in children fed on sweetened varieties of condensed milk. Foods containing starch are second in importance.

To prevent thrush, see to it that the baby does not put in his mouth any nipple, or pacifier, or other object that has been in any other mouth. See that all nipples are sterilized and kept in a boracic acid solution when not in use. If the baby is fed on sweetened condensed milk, the mouth should be washed after each feeding. Thrush means that baby's mouth has not been kept clean. The essence of cure is to clean up.

Thrush spots appear anywhere in the mouth. They are white and curdlike. Sometimes they are thought to be curds adhering to the membrane. These white patches are easily brushed off. Under a low power microscope the branching mold growth can be easily recognized.

The simple cases will respond to simple home treatment. The diet is to be changed so as to get rid of the excess of sugar and starch. The nipples are to be sterilized and then kept properly. The child is to be cleaned up and kept clean. The acidity of the saliva is to be overcome with a lime water or soda water mouth wash. The mold patches that can not be rubbed off are washed with a solution of hyposulphite of soda, 1 to 8, or borax, 1 to 8. The chance is that a baby who has developed thrush is not properly nourished and that the diet needs some change.

STOMACH ULCERS—Fever blisters and cold sores come on the margin of the lips, and always on the mucous membrane side of the border. It starts as a small, hard, sore spot. What you feel is all out of proportion to what you see.

An ulcer on the inside of the cheek will be exquisitely painful. When viewed, it is seen to be a red patch no larger than a pinhead and not at all deep or ragged. It is not its size, or its depth, or the general inflamed condition that causes the hurt. Somehow the wee bit of ulceration seems to lay bare a sensitive, sore nerve ending.

It is easy to cure one of these ulcers. In fact, it gets well without treatment. The first step in the treatment is to take a purge. The second, to wash the mouth thoroughly. The next is to stop the pain. A simple way of doing this is to apply a drop of aromatic sulphuric acid locally. A bit of cotton is wrapped around the end of a wooden toothpick; this pledget of cotton is dipped in the acid and touched to the ulcer. After this the mouth is to be rinsed with soda water.

The acid kills the surface of the ulcer, including the sore nerve ending and stops the pain in a few minutes. The next day the little bit of acid charred membrane comes away, and the ulcer is cured. If the burning pain recurs, a second application of acid can be made.

The interest is in the prevention, and not in the cure of stomach ulcers. The hundreds of letters which I get on this subject are from people who complain that they are subject to stomach ulcers. They come several times a year, at all seasons of the year, and ofttimes without any relation to the condition of the bowels.

Some people have as many as a dozen of them in a year. Before the painful experience of the one has passed out of mind another appears. When they asked their physician what it meant, they have been told that the stomach was foul, or the stomach was out of order, or the digestion was bad. Maybe so, but there seems to have been little proof of it, so far as the complainer has been able to see.

There was no diarrhœa. Constipation has been just as was the case when there were no ulcers. There was no nausea, or no acidity of the stomach, or change in appetite.

As the digested products come down the intestinal canal, bacteria convert some of them into amins. Amins are poisonous; some more so, and some less.

It is possible that stomach ulcers result from the absorption of amins produced by bacteria acting on digested food. Certain it is that a purge is the best medicine for cure, and a good method of prevention is to overcome constipation by change in habits.

A person who is subject to frequently recurring attacks of stomach ulcer has it within his power to cure himself, to prevent these painful patches from recurring. It is for him to change his habits.

He should change his exercise habits and be more in the open air. He should change his bowel habits. He should carefully analyze his dietary, and change that as it needs to be changed. He should change his eating habits.

The man who is sufficiently anxious to rid himself of the tendency to stomach ulcer to change his habits will find relief. Those who look to medicine for relief must continue to suffer.

GUMS—The gums are in a position of hazard. They cover hard bony surfaces and here and there dip in between bony plates. They are attached to the teeth—structures not well adapted for attachments to delicate membranes. The work of the teeth (breaking up food) subjects the gums to some risk of accident.

Three mineral poisons show a special fondness for the gums. Phosphorus enters the tissues readily through the mouth. It is thrown off in the mouth secretions. In consequence the jaws and gums feel the full effect of phosphorous poisoning. In lead poisoning, however, the mineral enters the system. A good part of it is thrown off in the mouth secretions.

One of the most reliable symptoms of lead poisoning is the blue line along the gums.

When mercury poisoning exists, whether the mineral has entered through the mouth from the hands of workers in quicksilver or whether it has been given internally as a medicine, a considerable portion of it is thrown off by the mouth secretions, and salivation, swollen gums and sore teeth are symptoms.

When iodide of potassium has been given internally, the drug can be found in the mouth secretions, although soreness of the gums is not brought about. In scurvy no symptom is more characteristic than boggy gums.

PYORRHŒA.—Much the most important condition of the gums is pyorrhœa. Children lose teeth from decay. Grown people lose theirs from pyorrhœa. The tooth lost may be sound and free from decay or even wear. In other words, decay may or may not be present. It bears no necessary relation to pyorrhœa, for pyorrhœa is a disease of the gums and not of the teeth.

While this is true, the pyorrhœa process begins at the point of attachment to the tooth. It is prone to begin around a neglected tooth, and it is liable to remain localized around one tooth for a considerable time. It spreads from tooth to tooth. In the dentist's mind it is a local disease. He thinks and speaks of it as "the pyorrhœa around the tooth."

The sublingual glands discharge at the inside of the gum margin of the central incisors of the lower jaw. These are teeth naturally prone to deposits and scale. Another location prone to befouling is the inside of the second and third molars of the lower jaw. Pyorrhœa is especially prone to start around these teeth and may be limited for a long time to the tooth of starting.

Some cases of pyorrhœa result from bacterial infection and others from amœbic infection, but, whether from the one or the other, the condition of the tooth is a matter of prime importance.

Local treatment of the tooth and the gum surrounding it is just as important as constitutional treatment, even when the infection is manifesting itself generally throughout the body.

The conservation of the teeth is not the only reason for treating pyorrhœa. Probably most of the arthritis deformans and a good part of the rheumatism, neuralgia, and so-called gout result from infections through the gums.

TONGUE.—The tongue is a sign post. Many conditions of the human body are written plainly on the tongue; that is, they are plain for the man who knows the signs. They mean nothing to the other man. Cancer of the tongue often sends a message of warning.

Leucoplakia is a condition in which hard, boardlike white patches appear on the tongue. The usual location is the side of the tongue. Leucoplakia patches are found more frequently in smokers and especially pipe smokers.

It is significant that cancer of the tongue seldom occurs in women, just as leucoplakia is almost exclusively an affection of men.

Leucoplakia is not painful; it is not progressive. After the leucoplakia patch has persisted quietly for months or for years, it begins to develop cancer symptoms, and presently is a well defined cancer. Cancer of the tongue does not follow in every case of leucoplakia, and not every cancer sends a leucoplakia warning.

Cancer on the tongue is a warning that the spirochetes of syphilis are distributed throughout the system. When with salvarsan or full doses of mercury the blood and lymph have been sterilized, the chancre heals. Chancre of the tongue is not a symptom of the later stages of syphilis—the stage in which the spirochetes are walled off in some bone or connective tissue area.

One of the best signs of pellagra is the pellagra tongue. While a fiery red tongue is not a constant symptom in pellagra, it is about as consistent a symptom as the disease has. In pellagra no one symptom is constantly present, and in some cases one group of symptoms is prominent; in other, another.

It is not thought that any essential part of the pellagra process is being developed in the tongue. That organ is merely a signpost on which the disease ofttimes makes a record.

In certain conditions, sometimes called the bilious states, the tongue is swollen, its edges show the print of the teeth, and the upper surface is coated with a white fuzz.

In the condition of weakness known as the typhoid state, the tongue is small and red. In scarlet fever the tongue is covered with a white fuzz through which small red elevations project—the strawberry tongue.

A red tipped tongue means inflammation in the stomach or intestines. A brown coated tongue in a person who does not chew or dip snuff means low vitality.

The tongue furnishes a local record of conditions in other portions of the body. When the tonsils are disordered the condition is local. When the tonsils are swollen, it is because there are germs growing on their surfaces or in their pockets. They are filters, devised to filter the substances absorbed from the tonsil surface or near-by areas.

The causes of tonsil troubles are bacterial. The method of diagnosing tonsil trouble is by local inspection, followed by cultures. The treatment of tonsil trouble is local—tonsils are massaged, cleaned, or excised.

COMPLAINS OF CAR CREW TREATMENT.

Chicago, April 4.—[To the Friend of the People.]—This morning I witnessed a contemptible trick played upon a gray haired old lady by the crew of a street car. I was following a No. 3 through route car, No. 3003, south bound on Lincoln avenue. At 10:30, at Ainslie street, hurrying across from the east side of the street and waving her hand for the car to stop, was a feeble old lady. The motorman stopped with the middle of the car on the crossing, so that she had to walk half the length of the car to the rear. When she reached the middle of the track and was less than four feet from the steps the car started off and left her. There was no car following close behind. The crew cannot make the excuse that they did not see her, for, although it stopped, no person got on or off the car. If we cannot have rapid transit without brutality to old people and cripples, let us go back to ox teams. O. W. McMichael, 3920 Clarendon avenue.

This incident as described shows a disregard of our regulations, which will be thoroughly investigated by our superintendent of transportation. We appreciate the coöperation of the public in calling such matters to our attention, as they assist materially in bringing about better service.

OPENING OF FILLMORE STREET.

Chicago, April 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Please tell me when Fillmore street, between Central Park avenue and Independence boulevard, will be opened.
Herman Miller, 3846 Grenshaw street.

The assessment has not yet been confirmed for opening Fillmore street, between Central Park avenue and Independence boulevard, but we expect that the case will be disposed of this year. As soon as the assessment is confirmed and collected we can proceed to open up the street. After the condemnation proceedings are disposed of the property owners may petition for street improvements.

ALLEY APPROACH REPAIRED.

Chicago, April 6.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The north approach to the alley joining Lotus and Long avenues, north of West Ohio street, is in much need of repair and hope that you will have the matter reported to proper authorities.

NO GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE.

Chicago, April 7.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I married a man in this city in 1909 and shortly after became ill—the doctor calling the disease tuberculosis. For a time I was treated at home and later had to go to the hospital. My husband's mother thought it best that I go to my home in New York, in the hope that a change of climate might be of some help. While in New York my husband sent money to me for my expenses there. He now wishes to procure a divorce and stated to me the other day that he had been to a lawyer and was told that he could get a divorce. Kindly let me know if he can and if so what I had best do in the matter. AMY.

So far as we can judge from this statement the husband has no grounds for divorce. If any such action is attempted you should go to the Legal Aid society, 31 West Lake street, asking for their advice and assistance.

DEFENDANT USUALLY SERVED WITH SUMMONS.

Chicago, April 7.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly advise me whether the defendant in a lawsuit may be notified by the court at the time the suit is instituted by the plaintiff, or is the defendant not notified of the case until just prior to the date of trial? Would it be possible for me to find out whether suit has been filed and how? E. R. G.

Ordinarily the defendant is served with a summons when a lawsuit is instituted and no trial or judgment may be had until this summons has been served. In certain cases it is possible that suit may be instituted and proceedings be had without personal service on the defendant. If you will advise us as to the nature of the proceedings in question we will give you more definite information.

EDUCATIONAL FRILLS.

Chicago, April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Chicago board of education for some months now has been threatening to reduce the salaries of the teachers in its schools. As a parent, I object to this. I believe there are ways of economizing without resorting to this last measure. There are two things absolutely necessary for a good school: Sanitary surroundings and a good teacher, healthy and not distracted from her work by discontent and unrest.

All other things, books, apparatus, etc., are accessory. A good teacher will make a good school in a western shack or in the most up to date schoolroom, with some chances of her doing better work in the ruder schoolhouse. Let the board of education trim off some of the frills in the surroundings before they attack the more vital part of the school—the teacher.

I pay about $50 in taxes each year, an average amount for most of the people in Chicago. There is no taxing body which gives me as great returns for my money as the board of education. I have one child. There is no interest as great in my life as the one connected with her welfare. She has gone to school for three years and what she has learned in that time is worth much more than all the taxes I have paid, directly or indirectly, all my life. Her teachers have been educated, refined women whose salaries have been none too large for the responsibility and culture which they should and do have. I am willing to pay more taxes if the standard set by the teacher's salary is in danger of being lowered. I also believe that this agitation, with constant threats of lowered salaries, must affect the efficiency of the teachers in a way only second to that caused by an actual reduction in their wages. A TAXPAYER.

DOES ANY ONE KNOW WHAT HE IS TALKING ABOUT?

Chicago, April 8.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Permit me to express my utmost indignation and disgust with the course pursued by you in the election just closed. In turning and supporting a man such as Sweitzer you have lost the respect of a large percentage of Chicago's thoughtful people. R. Kershaw,

PEACE OF THE FAR EAST.

Chicago, April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have read with much interest and appreciation your editorial of recent date on "Japan and the Monroe Doctrine." I think some statesmen are indulging in fancies trying to bring forward a grievance regarding the Japanese-Chinese question, while many Americans who love peace are investigating and criticizing with great prudence.

Japan's Chinese policy may be better understood after careful examination of the Monroe doctrine. The cases are parallel. Americans do not want any intermeddling by other nations on the American continent; Japan also wishes to carry out this principle of territorial integrity on Asiatic soil. Therefore, if America does not intend to swallow up South America and Mexico, neither does Japan intend to conquer the Chinese.

In short, as you said, their positions are identical. Your correspondent, Mr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, views with alarm the anticipated loss of "equal opportunity" in China. I, an oriental, would like to inquire if this principle is always subserved in America. N. NAKARA.

RED BLOODED AMERICANS.

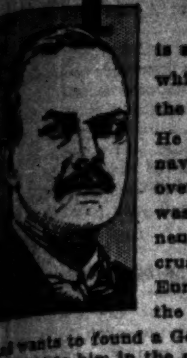
Chicago, April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Whatever P. B. F.'s red blooded Americans may be, a very good example of a blue blooded American is the president of our school board, who was born, reared, and educated in Chicago, who has raised a large and happy family, who has accumulated a small fortune by faithfulness to duty, and who contributes largely to the maintenance of our public schools.

Maybe the red blooded American is of that class who pays $1.25 a week for a hall bedroom, who attends all gatherings where religious bigotry predominates, and who is easily influenced by the unscrupulous candidate who drags religion into politics.

Evidently P. B. F. means well and will no doubt, after residing a reasonable number of years in America, become Americanized and make a very good citizen.
A CHICAGOAN.

Germany—a Caricature Portrait and Ideal

By Edward Goldbeck.



THIS is how people who would like "to wipe out Germany" see the fatherland:

Germany is ruled by a tyrant called William II. He is a hypocrite, for God's name is on his lips constantly, while he is thinking of nothing but how to trample on the rights of his own subjects and to crush other nations. He has built up a tremendous army and created a strong navy, he has waited patiently (infernal patience!) for over twenty-five years, until he thought that everything was ready, and then he assailed a weak nation whose neutrality his own government had guaranteed and crushed it relentlessly. His aim is to subjugate all Europe. When this will be done he intends to dash at the United States. He thinks himself another Napoleon and wants to found a German world empire.

Next to him in the social hierarchy there is a class of noblemen who are allowed to sponge on the country like vampires. They are loafers without education and only good enough to be officers. They are brutes and revel in war even at the cost of their own lives. Mr. Carnegie says they made the emperor sign the declaration of war. But then the emperor cannot be such a tyrant if he was compelled to go to war against his own will? O, yes! Only he is a weak tyrant (the type of Caligula), which is the worst specimen of this class of undesirable citizens.

The nobles lead the army. This is a powerful engine, but a "machine" only and absolutely devoid of mentality. The German soldier obeys his superiors like a slave. This habit of dumb obeying has killed in him every spirit of initiative. He is a poor shot and the tactics of the army are obsolete. The Germans still advance in solid masses, only to be mowed down by the murderous fire of the English gunmen. The German soldiers are cowards, they advance in using old men and defenseless women as shields. Of course they cannot make much headway with such methods.

Below the nobility there are all kinds of officials. In Germany everybody has to pass several examinations and one-half of the nation is constantly examining the other half. They call the result of this procedure "kultur," but it is only a colossal humbug. Charles W. Eliot demonstrated in the April number of the Atlantic Monthly that German culture does not exist.

Nor is there any real efficiency. Of course, the Germans sell lots of their goods, but only because you can't get rid of their drummers. The stuff itself is bad. Highest efficiency, says Mr. Eliot, can only be attained in free countries, and there is no freedom in Germany.

They have no franchise over there and the German emperor rules as an "autocrat." This war is not a war of the nation; it is a war of the government. If anybody should try to oppose a measure of the government he would be shot. "Suffragets," an American lawyer said to the author of this article, "would not be tolerated in Germany. The emperor would hang them all." (He was from Hartford, Conn., and so he knew what he was talking about.)

The emperor is not a tyrant, but he is self-willed and believes in the divine right theory. The formula "By the grace of God" was first used by the bishops of early Christian times; it was a word of humility and referred to the apostle St. Paul, who in a letter to the Corinthians had said: "I am what I am by the grace of God." Then the bishop of Rome adopted it, and from his decrees it was taken by the descendants of Charles the Great and became the expression of irresponsible power and superhuman pride.

William has never conspired against the public law of the empire or of Prussia, and he has not even tried to enlarge the sphere of his rights. His talk was that of an absolutist, his actions were constitutional. And he has seen by now that no single man, not even the greatest genius, can lay down the law for a modern nation of 70,000,000. His attitude during the war has been dignified and quiet.

His foreign policy was impulsive and sometimes vacillating, but he never intentionally did anything to endanger peace. He tried to please everybody. During England's campaign against the Boers Russia suggested an anti-British coalition; William refused. During the war between Russia and Japan he supported Russia by a friendly neutrality. He has tried again and again to reconcile France. He never thought for a moment of aping the "Corse parvenu," whom he dislikes heartily (while the crown prince is collecting his portraits), and years ago he deprecated the notion of a world empire as repulsively "dull." His religious feeling is genuine. So is his admiration for the United States, for the simple reason that there is a certain Americanism in him. (Think of his revolutionary idea to teach history "backward," beginning at our own times!)

Now for the nobles! They are not loafers at all. In all branches of national activity, not only in the army and administration, we find members of the nobility who have distinguished themselves by their work. Some of the most renowned names in modern literature are those of noblemen. We shall not deny that they have much family pride, that some of them are arrogant, and that they have frequently tried to use the administrative and legislative power of the government for the private interests of the land owners. (Have the English nobles acted differently and is there no lobbying in the United States?) In all the wars they have behaved wonderfully well, but they are not silly enough to cry for a war, as they are shrewd politicians and know that every modern war must end with a strengthening of democracy. Nothing increases the self-assertion of the lower classes so much as a war. It makes them realize their importance and their power.

The army is far from being a "machine." When I was a Prussian officer—twenty years ago!—the catchwords were: Initiative and individual education! Modern war is brain work to a great extent. When Prussia had beaten Austria people said, "The Prussian schoolmaster has vanquished at Koeniggraetz." The army has its weaknesses certainly, but lack of initiative is not one of them. There are certain crack regiments in which a commoner cannot enter; it is almost impossible for a Jew to become an officer; the treatment of the privates has not always been beyond reproach. But, waiving such details (which, of course, are no trifles), the army is sane and efficient—it sounds almost funny after Lüttich and Tannenberg—and Germany would scarcely have accomplished what it has in industry and trade if there had not been the universal education in school and army. Organization has made Germany great, and the army is the best organized of all the public institutions.

The officials are painstaking, well informed, and honest. Sometimes they are stiff (the "public be damned" theory is not limited to Germany), short sighted, and red-tapy. Their culture is real, but they are still wavering between exalting and depreciating themselves. As a united nation it is still young and shows all the symptoms of unpoised cubhood.

Germany has the most liberal franchise that exists (universal, equal, direct, and secret ballot), and the president of the United States wields more power than the German emperor. William could never dictate to the German parliament as Wilson has done during the last two years.

Germany, as every country, has the faults of her virtues. "After the war," a high official wrote me the other day, "a new Germany will arise." Then this will be the fatherland of our dreams. The emperor, chastened and fortified by experience, will never think or say with Louis XIV., "The state is I!" He will live up to the words of his great ancestor: "The king is the first servant of the state!" The nobility will not demand any exceptional grants; they will have learned that, as James Russell Lowell puts it, "the true gentleman cannot accept any privilege."

The officials will never forget that their only "raison d'être" is to help the public, and the Chinese spirit of false pride in an academic curriculum will give place to the fresh breeze of an "education to manliness!" which is a modern German slogan. The walls of caste are going to crumble; it will not be necessary to tear them down by violence. The nation will become calmer and gentler. We shall neither brag of our superiority above all mankind nor shall we kow-tow before French esprit, English political wisdom, Russian mystical depth of feeling.

We shall go back to our old, world-wide sympathies and our enthusiastic appreciation of truth and beauty in whatever language they may be preached, but we shall beware of the crude exaggeration in which we so often abased ourselves and exalted the others. We shall not remodel our political institutions according to other nations' ideals; we shall develop them organically and in a slow but constant process of maturing.

We shall not try to subjugate other nations and to found a world empire, but we shall try to love peace and not to fear war. We shall be eager to cultivate our bodies and to purify our souls, to be strong and kind, courageous and helpful, to speak the truth, to act our beliefs, to adore beauty, and to care for "aerial hopes and pensive joys." And we shall be ready to give our lives in serene fulfillment of the highest duty of man whenever the safety of the fatherland demands it.

Expulsion of the German Savants

Efforts have been made among the honorary organizations of literary and scientific men in Paris to drop from their rolls the names of such members as are of German descent and are sympathetic toward the Teutons. Following is a translation of an article by an academician which appeared in "Le Gaulois":

By Rene Doumic.

IT may be that in times past we have been impulsive, that we have been men guilty of too impetuous action. We admit as much. We have been cognizant of the inconveniences that arise from our proverbial impetuosity. However, we will no longer have people say that we do not reflect. Our nation's thinkers, apparently, do not know to what extent they have made this plain in not urging the expulsion of the Germans from the academy.

The different sections of the institute have a horror, of course, of our keeping in our midst these enemies of France. No one doubts that. And the savants might have taken more seriously the warnings of certain members of the academy who realise the dangers of our too close proximity to devoted subjects of the kaiser. Instead, however, they have preferred to wait.

They delay important measures of expulsion while they do not renounce them entirely. They are moving very slowly, escaping thereby the accusation of too precipitate action. Only yesterday the Academy of Sciences negotiated in friendly fashion with German scholars who admittedly have allied themselves with the incendiaries and assassins. The academy will have to learn by experience the folly of its inaction and in time follow the example of other academies. Everything comes into its own in due time.

British War Spirit Gains in Ferocity

By T. P. O'Connor.

[FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1915: By Central News.]

LONDON.—[Special.]—If anything could diminish the ferocious indignation created by the last manifestations of savagery on the part of the Germans it would be the outspoken condemnation cabled from New York. It is a remarkable fact, indicative of the severe self-restraint of the Englishman, that the language of the American press much exceeds in vehement condemnation the language of any of the English papers. Nevertheless, the last submarine atrocities have enormously strengthened the already fierce war feeling and also strengthened still more the universal determination to see the war through until German militarism receives its final crushing blow.

The complaint of some English newspapers about the self-indulgence of the workmen, the slowness of recruiting, the continuance of racing and other amusements is calculated to give a false impression of the real feeling of the British public. I see every day not the slightest diminution in the strengthening of their iron determination. Many of these exaggerated reports are due to the tendency of certain papers pledged to conscription to exaggerate the difficulties of voluntary recruiting.

The working classes are not open to the indictment that they are indifferent to the war. Generally speaking, they are the fiercest of any class. The best proof of this is the enormous proportion they have contributed to Kitchener's army, the miners alone being represented by 200,000. The increased cost of living and the neglect of some employers to consider the demands for increased wages have produced some disturbance, though less than the newspaper accounts would lead foreign opinion to suppose.

The most potent cause of labor troubles is the cruel overwork such as the men, especially in the armament and khaki works, are subjected to. The men sometimes become so exhausted that they go to bed for two days at a time, and no amount of persuasion can induce them to work. Overwork as well as the demand for increased wages are responsible as much as drinking for the labor troubles, although stories of drinking are greatly exaggerated. I regard the demand for drastic restrictions in connection with the drinking hours as one of many symptoms of the growing ferocity of the concentration on war feeling rather than as justified by proved necessities.

My own opinion regarding the prospects of the duration of the war gains rather than loses in optimism. I am now convinced that the cry for armaments has produced its effect. Kitchener's army is rapidly approaching the time when a million men, fully equipped, can be sent to the front. As far as shells are concerned, the allies' supply has already overtaken and will soon surpass the German supply. Shells are going to decide this fight when fine weather enables the advance to begin.

All news from the eastern frontier continues to confirm the conviction that the Russians are able to hold a sufficient number of Germans to prevent a large reinforcement of the western front. The official summing up of the war issued by the French war office, although written in sober tones and ofttimes admitting serious French mistakes, confirms the report that the German shells today are inferior to those used at the commencement of the war.

Dr. Dillon, the famous correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, who from Rome cautiously reports the ups and downs of the war fever in Italy, day by day, is convinced that Italy's intervention becomes more probable daily. However, it is yet to be seen how far bold Veniselos will be able to force the hands of his successors. Greece's action as well as that of Roumania depends on Bulgaria, where, according to recent reports, everything points to a growth of friendly feeling for the allies. The great ovation tendered to Gen. Paget, the English missionary, is evidence of this. I regard it as impossible that Germany can give enough of Austria to satisfy Italian aspirations or that Italy can afford to let pass the opportunity of satisfying her aspirations and increasing Italian territory and prestige. The main factor, in my mind, that is keeping Italy back, is the deep snow along the Austro-Italian frontier.

On the other hand, the anxiety of every neutral in Europe to see Germany get a knockdown blow will convince them that Germany is doomed, and that on the back of a conclusively beaten Germany these same neutral powers are burning to make a tigerlike jump. Germany's last performances on the sea, added to the atrocities in Belgium, have made the European states, especially the smaller ones, feel that her destruction is their only salvation.

No country has shown a greater kindling of the war fever than has Ireland during the last few weks. Every difficulty that Redmond encountered at the beginning of his campaign, which was of a greater character and magnitude than people outside of Ireland supposed, has finally disappeared. The heroism of Michael O'Leary and other Irish soldiers inflamed the martial spirit, but the German atrocities here, as well as elsewhere, have been the most potent factor in bringing about the solidarity of Ireland.

The recruiting campaign in south Ireland is proceeding along popular lines, both Unionists and Nationalists speaking from the same platform. A striking event in north Ireland was a combination meeting of Unionists and Nationalists, which occurred in the typically Unionist county of Armagh. Here, for the first time in modern history, Catholic and Protestant bands marched side by side, and on the same platform there appeared Catholic priests, Protestant rectors, Presbyterian ministers, and a Belgian priest, while the whole town turned out to cheer the Irish Fusiliers who led the recruiting procession. In Waterford, which is represented by Redmond, over 200 enlisted in two days in addition to the many who have already gone.

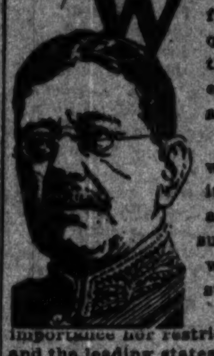
Finally at a great meeting in Claremorris, County Mayo, which was addressed by both Dillon and Devlin, resolutions were adopted declaring for adhesion to Redmond's policy. Dillon again declared that Ireland is bound by every consideration of honor as well as self-interest to stand with England in the hour of her desperate danger.

Devlin said that not only national honor but policy dictated an attitude of friendship, coöperation, and unity with Britain. Both men in alluding to the fact that the meeting was held close to the grave of Davitt, declared that the patriot's dream of the reconciliation of the British and Irish democracies was about to be realised.

Conditions of Success in War

Field Marshal Baron von der Goltz is one of the most distinguished military writers of the present time. He served in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 and afterwards spent some time in Turkey as instructor of the Ottoman army. He was the author of the plan of campaign which gave the sultan's troops a victory in the war against Greece in 1897. His book "The Nation in Arms," describing the conduct of war by a country organised on the basis of universal military service, has been translated by Philip A. Asworth and published by the George H. Doran company. The article presented herewith is from the book.

By Field Marshal Baron von der Goltz.



WAR is always the servant of policy. War waged merely for the sake of extermination and destruction is now quite inconceivable. An object of permanent value to the state, be it only a question of ascendancy, must exist; and this can only arise from political considerations.

The object of a war itself is of such importance and will so powerfully stimulate the exertions of nations for its attainment that, almost from this account alone, we are tempted to place policy first among conditions of success. Now, there are many attendant motives, and we lay down the maxim that without a sound policy success in war is improbable.

War will, on that account, be in no way lowered in importance nor restricted in its independence if only the commander in chief and the leading statesmen are agreed that under all circumstances war serves the end of politics best by a complete defeat of the enemy. How closely politics and war ought to coöperate is manifest. The state is most happily situated when commander in chief and statesmen are combined in the person of a great king.

As an individual, as a rule, only shows his true worth when placed in the right position, so must armies be in their proper element in order to show themselves in the best light. The Prussian grenadiers who without dismay would advance in parade step up to the enemy's batteries, at Jena lost their presence of mind completely when confronted by French sharpshooters, whose fire they could not resist. Napoleon's armies which marched victorious through the heart of Europe could not suppress the Spanish insurrection.

Our modern German fighting method aims at bringing on decisive results by a succession of vigorous blows in accordance with our conception of resolute offensive. Any idea of the offensive is tacitly at the bottom of all our theoretical treatises and for the most part of practical exercises also. Temporizing, waiting, and a passive defensive are unsympathetic to our nature. Our corps of officers are trained to spontaneous activity, to take the initiative, and to aim at positive successes. Everything with us is action, and our strength lies in great decisive strokes upon the battlefield.

An important condition for the happy success of a war is a good internal disposition of the army. Every regiment brings into the field with it a certain character of its own. There may be, however, gross exceptions from the general rule and sudden manifestations difficult to explain. Discipline does not exercise an absolute control over internal emotions, over effects of panic, disaster, or casual unfavorable conditions. We can no more strike the word "panic" out of the military dictionary than the terms "heroism" or "contempt of death."

The will to conquer is, in the case of the commander in chief, as also in that of all his troops, of paramount importance. Victory and defeat are not separated so widely from each other as success or failure in an examination. The line between the two is variable. Troops determined, like those of the second army at Thionville on Aug. 16, 1870, not to yield ground, are in the end regarded as victorious, even though the greater material losses are on our side. This obstinate will to remain victorious speaks most strongly of the spirit animating an army. The previous impressions of life in peace and war here coöperate to produce a great moral effort. The pride and the self-consciousness of the army, founded upon good traditions and successful generalship, secure success even under the most trying circumstances.

Besides these moral factors we must also consider certain material ones. One of the most important of these conditions is undoubtedly a sufficient number of effective fighting men. Numerical superiority confers the first right to expect success. In modern times, when a single blow does not, as in the day of "line tactics," decide the day, but when opposing forces devour each other in a struggle of long duration, a sufficient number of troops is of double importance. A superiority of numbers confers the means of holding the enemy in check with equal forces while initiating measures for his complete destruction with the rest.

A clever general will often manage to paralyze the whole force of the enemy with a smaller portion of his own troops, either deceiving him by audacity as to his strength or by involving him in a very difficult task absorbing large numbers. Again where the numbers on both sides are equal local superiority at a decisive point may be established, which brings in good interest, while the enemy has invested his capital badly. Such incidents display a certain gift of economy; we speak, in fact, of a wise economy of forces as constituting another condition of success, which may compensate for a deficiency of resources.

When speaking of the importance of numbers in war we do not, of course, mean to compare a large and bad army with a small good one, but always two armies which are approximately equal in point of efficiency.

The leading principle of modern war is to show one's self, at the decisive point, as strong as possible. To dispute the value of numbers is equivalent to denying this universally recognised principle.

Armament also figures largely among conditions of success. The bravest soldiers with spears and swords could effect little against breech loaders and rifled cannon. There can certainly never be complete disparity between the armament and the morale of an army, since the latter includes intelligence, which takes care to provide good weapons. But untimely parsimony, technical mistakes, or obstinacy and false pride, which will not allow a weapon once declared good to be discarded, may, considering the rapid progress of our times, be productive of considerable inequalities.

Fighting formations are also of great importance. By force of habit they enter into the flesh and blood of soldiers; and if they fail when used in serious earnest they cause more despondency than ought to be yielded to such a motive. Fighting formations are laid down by the regulations. It is accordingly necessary that a proper sense of the practical should prevail throughout. If mere considerations of spectacular effect or of faithful preservation of traditional usages prevail the troops will, after their first experience of war, lose confidence and feel themselves insecure.

To make war we must have money, money again, and once more money. Our modern wars, with their principle of the unrestricted use of all available resources, are not conceivable apart from the modern method of raising money by loans. The army of a great power upon a war footing costs day by day from 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 marks. No state in the world is rich enough to store up a treasure to pay for its maintenance for several successive years. This can be done only by its credit. On the other hand, one may say, with a certain show of justice, that so long as a state possesses credit its defeat is not decided. If Germany puts its whole organized military force in the field it has about 2,000,000 of men under arms out of a population of 55,000,000 souls.

There always remain behind in the country large numbers who, in case of necessity, could bear arms to defend their fatherland. A similar ratio obtains in the case of the other great powers, and we may assume that the material resources at the disposal of the executive power will be exhausted sooner than the resources in men. Whoever has weapons and money is not, as a rule, defenseless.

French Calm and German Hysteria

Following is a translation of an article from the Paris "Les Annales." M. Capus is a member of the French academy:

By Alfred Capus.

IF the mass of the German people are still blinded by the tissue of lies which their masters have drawn across their eyes from the start of the war, the same is not true of the men higher up, of the officers and the thinkers of Germany. There is no member of the press, no one holding a responsible position in the industrial or the commercial world, who does not realize the frightful difficulties which are beginning to confront the empire. It is at this point we will consider Germany psychologically.

Already one sees a vast difference between Germany and us. At first, after indulging in too rosy hopes, we came face to face with reality. When we understood that the war would be difficult and long, we were not discouraged. On the contrary, the truth stimulated us like a powerful tonic. Never has France shown greater strength, higher spirit, more perfect poise than at that hour. Government, parliament, public opinion, were all of one mind. No protests, no angry exclamations, were heard from any side. Then, little by little, victory began to be descried through the judgment, the established order, the smiling confidence of our nation.

Let us look now at the contrast. Our enemies are face to face with painful truths, just as we were a few months ago. But what exalted us, gave us an equilibrium, a calmness, a healthy perspective, is throwing them into a turmoil, is wresting from them angry cries and protests. What gave us an equilibrium, a calmness, a healthy perspective is throwing them into a state not unlike dementia. In the press such men as Maximilian Harden abandon themselves to neurasthenic gestures and measures the widths between excessive enthusiasm and utter despair, while other journalists like those on the Frankfort Gazette threaten us with hideous atrocities and with so-called retaliations, which suggest the primitive Teuton of old. One Tirpitz, grand admiral, is indulging in megalomaniacal imaginations in which there is not a trace of reason or a shadow of logic. All these strange opinions and sentiments seem but the commencement of a widespread derangement and hysteria.

Never have two races been more diametrically opposed in character and temperament than ours and theirs, and the stupor in which the Frankfort Gazette seems plunged for the most part assumes a peculiar significance. Will there still be extant in France, after all this becomes generally known, that leaning towards German culture which has already attempted to pervert our national teaching and to establish methods of thinking which are productive of these apathetic minds?

Bohemia's Capital in War Time.

The London Times

THE beautiful capital of Bohemia, one of the most enchanting cities of Europe, with its hundred towers and crowning buildings of the Hradrchany and Cathedral of St. Vitus, seemed to be slumbering in medieval solitude, unmoved by the fact that not a hundred miles from the frontier Russian guns were thundering and Russian troops holding Austrian territory, of which Bohemia is a part.

The great majority of the Bohemians seem to hope, to wish for Russian success. Treason, in time of war. So the people hide their real feelings beneath a mask of impassivity that only long oppression could have taught them so readily to assume.

The Czechs of Bohemia, who form 70 per cent of a population of 7,000,000 people (the remainder are Jews and Germans) are Slavs in race, temperament, and sympathies. They let no opportunity pass to dwell on their Slavic kinship. The revival of the Czech language and the fact that Czech is driving German influence to the wall is the great pride of the leading Bohemians.

In no other country in Europe does the national spirit flame forth with such embittered intensity. Their hatred of the Germans and everything remotely connected with the Germanic peoples amounts almost to a religion. It is the vendetta spirit nationalised—vendetta for all they lost at German hands in 1620 and have suffered since.

The one aim and ambition of every good Czech appears to be to wipe out all traces, no matter how trivial, of Austro-German domination. The war has in no respect changed their feeling of contempt, mingled with hatred, for the authorities in Vienna and of fear of the growing ascendancy of Germany.

In Prague I felt as though I were in a city belonging to the allies rather than to their enemies. The book shops display almost exclusively English, French, and Czech books, French newspapers are sold on the streets, and French and English are spoken in the restaurants. In the great "municipal house," as it is called, a meeting place erected by the city of Prague for nationalist propaganda purposes, and containing the largest and finest café, restaurant, and concert hall in the city, no word of German is ever heard even now during the war, and I was told that German or German speaking customers are made so uncomfortable that they rarely dare to patronise it. On the two occasions I visited it it was crowded with young Bohemians who had evidently managed to escape conscription. They were taking their coffee and talking politics, which is the national pastime.

I heard many whispered tales of the abduction and imprisonment of political agitators who had advocated open resistence to Vienna. I can state that several important party leaders were not in Prague, the reason being given in one case—I quote the exact words—"The air is so unhealthy this year that ——— thought best to remain absent for a time."

Because of the "iron hand" rule, which appears still to hold sway in Bohemia, the people whom I met impressed me as being distrustful. I found that it was a distrust based on fear. Once this fear had been overcome, with a great deal of looking around and closing of doors, to make sure that no spying ear was eavesdropping, they unburdened themselves with a frankness that was astonishing. The men I spoke with seemed eager that their views should become known as long as their identity remained concealed.

"Our one aim is to become an autonomous kingdom. We are the dominating people in our country; we must and will demand recognition of our position."

When I inquired how this was to be brought about my informant shrugged his shoulders, and replied:

"We must bide our time. We hope Austria will realise the justice of our demands and our 'correct' attitude during the war."

My further question as to how the Czechs felt with regard to the war received an illuminating reply, expressing apparently the opinion of the educated majority.

"We Czechs and our cousins of Moravia number in all about 8,500,000 people. We were in no way consulted with regard to the war. We have not a single responsible representative in the ministry for foreign affairs or other executive branch of the government of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy. We were not informed of events; the war is no making or concern of ours."

It was admitted in Prague, and I heard it confirmed in other parts of the monarchy, that on several occasions the Czech troops had laid down their arms without fighting. A responsible person informed me that the Sokols—which are societies presumably for the purpose of promoting gymnastics and sports, though with the avowed aim of fostering Czech propaganda—had provided each one of their members who had been drafted for military service with a specially worded formula so that on being taken prisoner by the Russians or Serbians they should not be interned nor in any way treated as prisoners of war.

It was widely acknowledged in Prague among certain classes most directly concerned, that 8,000 Czechs—provided with these formulæ, who took part in the Serbian campaign, which ended in such a fiasco for the Austrians—had laid down their arms without fighting and were welcomed as brothers by their enemies. The fact that when I arrived in Prague the "sokols" had been suppressed would tend to lend credence to this rumor.

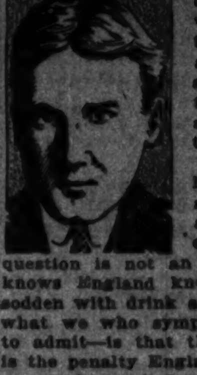
The Final Test

By Robert Herrick.



WILL England give up her drink habit until the war is settled? That is the question which must be agitating the consciences of Englishmen just now. Are they capable of such a sacrifice of their sensual appetites, of such an act of national self-discipline, not as individuals here and there, but as a people, a state, in order that they may fit themselves to win what they have asserted all along is a righteous cause? As they answer this question, straightforwardly or evasively, the world will judge the sincerity of England's professions of national unity and devotion to the survival of the state.

For there is no doubt, alas, that England is badly hampered in putting forth her whole strength in this struggle by the liquor habit, also that the English as a nation are the least united of all the belligerent peoples now fighting in Europe. This drink question is not an incidental nor a superficial matter. Everybody who knows England knows how sodden the English working classes are—sodden with drink and with misery. What everybody does not know—and what we who sympathize with England in her present struggle dislike to admit—is that this wretched sodden mass of her working population is the penalty England has paid for her clean, wholesome, country loving upper class. And what the newspaper dispatches do not print, but what any one can read between the lines, is the reason why England has not taken means long before this late date to check the drink evil—the liquor interests control parliament. The manufacture and the sale of liquor is not a respectable business in this country—there are few or no brewers or distillers in our congress. In England, on the contrary, the liquor business is not only respectable—it is aristocratic! Beer and whisky have powerful, hereditary representatives in both houses of parliament. Moreover, the landed proprietors on whose property the numerous "pubs" are located are members of parliament and friends of members.

That, in a word, is the real reason why the government has not introduced a bill to suppress the liquor traffic, at least until the war has been won, not because of fear of loss of revenue. The Asquith government does not dare, apparently, to provoke the dissension in parliament that such a needed measure would let loose. It dreads the political effect of prohibition more than the demoralization of drink among the workmen. It is shameful, and must give the Germans a just ground for wicked glee—but it is the naked truth. What English bishop was it who said he would rather see England free than England sober? His lordship meant that he had rather a parliament of free Britons insist on its right to sell liquor to free Englishmen than to have his nation sober. I wonder what his spiritual lordship would say in the present crisis. Would he rather have his England drunk and under Germany's heel than sober and free?

Probably not, but he would get off the same rot about an Englishman's "liberties." And that is what Germans and others mean when they talk about English hypocrisy. Some time ago I wrote in this paper of that curious aspect of the English character and tried to explain it as a result of the compartment habit of thinking that the Englishman cultivates. An Englishman closes his eyes to everything but what he wants to see—he shuts his eyes tight before the drink situation, for which there is but one simple rational solution—prohibition by act of parliament until the business of national self-preservation is over.

Instead, the English are talking about the self-denying example of the king and of Kitchener, who have put their households on a temperance basis. They profess to believe that the heroic example of the king and of Kitchener will be sufficient to meet the situation. (Meantime the wine merchants are doing a rushing business; for thrifty, forehanded Englishmen are stocking their cellars in anticipation of a possible drought!) What does anybody think the dockers and miners and mechanics and factory hands care for the noble example of heroic self-denial on the part of the king and Kitchener? What will they care for the temperance efforts on their behalf of societies patronized by dukes and lord bishops and honorables, or of all the patriotic talk handed to them by the same privileged persons? Nothing. Less than nothing! And they are right. If the property holding classes that run the government do not care enough for their own self-preservation, not to speak of their country, to sacrifice the income they get from the manufacture and the sale of liquor, in order to bring about a speedier and surer termination of this war, why should the poor man give up the pleasure—the momentary alleviation—he gets from his ale and his gin? And it must be remembered also that the English working classes have become drink sodden and brutalized largely because of the misery to which the English aristocratic system has reduced them by its selfish exploitation.

The English press talks ad nauseam of English bravery and gallantry in the war. One might infer that the English had done all the fighting in Belgium and France. Of course Englishmen are brave, especially the officers. As a class they are brought up with the one ideal of personal courage drilled into them from boyhood. Just as they learn to ride and shoot fearlessly, they go into battle with a superb coolness and self-forgetfulness that inspires their privates. But this war is not to be won by courage in the field alone, nor by that "last hundred millions of pounds" that Lloyd-George talked of the first week of the war—it will be won primarily by the relative moral strength of the nations involved.

The revelations that Lord Kitchener gave in his recent speeches suggest unhappily that England today is—morally, in stamina—worse off than her foes, weaker essentially than Germany after all the exhaustion of eight months' steady fighting. Will England now brush the cobwebs of self-delusion from her eyes and admit the justice of her enemies' accusation of "hypocrisy"? Will she cease to babble of the noble example of the king in this matter of temperance and the efforts of the "upper classes" and pass at once a drastic act against the demoralizing liquor trade? Her leaders would do well to remember the disgraceful episode of the opium war—of a sanctimonious England forcing opium on defenseless China! In this case she is permitting her own aristocracy to peril her chances of survival by weakening her power of resistance. Self-interest alone should force her parliament to be far sighted and patriotic enough, in the hour of trial, to sacrifice income and rights to the welfare of the nation—of themselves!

Unless England is capable of such a sacrifice she is likely to be beaten. For in spite of optimistic interviews by Sir John French and the "quiet confidence" that Englishmen profess to have in the outcome, the war is not yet won—nor is Germany either starved or exhausted. The second year of fighting, as it opens, reveals the war as an endurance test, not merely of men and money and munitions, but of national character. In this last vital test England is today lagging behind her allies and her foes. Can she throw aside her traditional hypocrisy and meet the test squarely? If she can rise to a sense of national duty—among the "better classes"—she will deserve to win.

WHEAT RALLIES AFTER SETBACK

Bear News Fails to Hold Prices Down; Rains General in Middle West.

COARSE GRAINS LOWER.

After a sharp break early and a bull turn later wheat prices closed not far from the level of Friday's last quotations. May was up ⅛c at the end of the session and the other months were ⅛c lower. News reports were bearish. There were general rains over the sections of the winter wheat belt which have been in need of rain; cables were ½d lower for spot wheat, in spite of the Friday advance on this side, while there were further rumors of peace negotiations pending.

After the first rush to sell, however, there was little wheat for sale and prices advanced 2c from the low point, subsequently working back to the previous closing level. There was a reported sale of 250,000 bu soft wheat for export via the gulf from St. Louis, and seaboard advices claimed 500,000 bu sold for export. Local sales were nil. Kansas City and Minneapolis reported a fair milling inquiry. Seaboard made sales of 500,000 bu.

Pit Traders Too Bearish.

Oversold pit conditions were responsible for the quick rally, but there appear to be strong interests in the market willing to take the wheat on the breaks, both the May and the new crop months. A little buying was stimulated by reports of firmer cash markets in the northwest and at Winnipeg. Indian shipments were only 42,000 bu. Weather conditions are now ideal for the winter wheat and most of the reports received continue favorable.

It is understood a considerable part of the Duluth wheat is owned by agents of the British government and that it will be shipped out at the opening of navigation. Winnipeg reported light offerings and a better export inquiry, with mills more anxious for wheat. Minneapolis mills were also credited with buying May wheat and New York bought Duluth May around $1.51.

Exports Continue Heavy.

A strong feature of the situation is the continued heavy volume of exports, 1,212,000 bu being exported for the day, keeping up the daily average over 1,000,000 bu. Argentine reports indicated a continued brisk demand, with less favorable weather in some sections. Indian conditions are satisfactory. Minneapolis stocks decreased 100,000 bu for one day and the total supply at Minneapolis is much less than half as much as a year ago.

Receipts were 28 cars here. Primary arrivals were 382,000 bu and for the week were 2,841,000 bu, against 2,963,000 bu a year ago. Northwest points had 163 cars, against 301 cars a year ago. Duluth stocks gained 506,000 bu for the week. Winnipeg arrivals were 233,000 bu, compared to 272,000 bu a year ago.

Corn Has Easier Tone.

Corn prices failed to hold, and the recent buying by shorts left the market in a weaker technical position. Prices finished ⅛@¼c lower. Cash prices followed the May, and there was only a fair demand, sales being 175,000 bu. Cables were ⅛d up for spot, and there was reported a good demand for Argentine corn. The demand east continues disappointing here, and while country sales are light there is not much of a reduction expected this week in local stocks. Kansas City showed a sharp decrease in supplies.

Receipts were 30 cars, with 60 cars inspected yesterday, and primary receipts were 2,711,000 bu, compared to 2,225,000 bu a year ago. Freight rates from Argentina to American ports are lower, and with new corn available soon in that country it is likely to be a factor. Bears are counting on May liquidation. Primary receipts were 426,000 bu for the day, and clearances were small at 41,000 bu.

May Oats Hold Firm.

Oats were firm for the May, which closed ⅛c up, but the other months were ⅛@¼c to ⅜c lower. The cash demand was moderate and sales reported here were 145,000 bu. Armour and Lowitz were credited with buying May early. Selling was scattered at the start, but on the advance there was a good deal of profit taking and considerable commission house selling. Primary receipts were 561,000 bu and for the week they were 3,608,000 bu, compared to 2,607,000 bu a year ago. Cash prices were steady.

Hog Products Strong.

Provisions were fairly active and generally prices were firm, especially for pork and lard. July ribs were a little lower. The cash demand was fair and the hog run is expected to be lighter. Receipts here were 9,000, with 30,000 for Monday and 115,000 for the week. Western receipts were 428,800, compared to 338,000 a year ago. Prices for hogs at the yards were about 5c up.

RYE QUIET AND STEADY.

Rye was quiet and steady, with sales of sample grade at $1.12. No. 2 closed at $1.17 nominal. Receipts, 1 car.

Barley was firm to 1c higher, with malting 74@78c for spot and 78@80c to arrive. Screenings sold at 67@74c and feed closed at 70@72c nominal. Receipts, 15 cars.

Timothy seed was quiet at $4.50@6.25 for cash. Clover seed was easier at $9.00@12.75 for cash.

Duluth flax closed ¾@1¼c lower, with cash on track $1.92¼; May, $1.93½; July, $1.96½; September, $1.97½. Receipts, 3 cars. Minneapolis was ¾c lower at $1.88@1.19¼ for cash on track. Receipts, 10 cars. Winnipeg closed ¾@1¼c lower, with May $1.75¼; July, $1.78, and October, $1.61¼. Receipts, 13 cars.

AMERICAN GRAIN MARKETS.

GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

Exporters were practically unanimous in saying there was little demand for wheat, corn, or oats yesterday. St. Louis reported the sale of 250,000 bu soft wheat for export via the gulf late on Friday, but aside from this there were no sales reported. The domestic demand was moderate. Some improvement in the milling demand was reported from Minneapolis and Kansas City. In some quarters there are indications of cash wheat buyers beginning to feel a little pinch in supplies. With any improvement in the flour trade, which is looked for in a few weeks, the cash wheat situation could easily become decidedly acute. At present, however, trade is extremely slow.

Primary receipts of wheat to date for the season are 390,000,000 bu, against 281,482,000 bu last year and 340,315,000 two years ago. Corn receipts for the season are 156,000,000 bu, against 131,000,000 bu year ago, and oats 224,141,000 bu, against 170,584,000 bu a year ago.

Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 28 cars; corn, 60 cars; oats, 80 cars; rye, 1 car; barley, 15 cars; hogs, 30,000 head. Hogs for all next week, 115,000 head.

French official report makes condition of winter wheat 72 per cent; last year, 70 per cent. Winter oats, 67 per cent, against 65 per cent a year ago.

Cash sales of corn yesterday were 175,000 bu and of oats 140,000 bu. Country sales were light. Cash prices were steady relative to the futures.

Kansas City wheat stocks decreased 345,000 bu for five days and corn stocks decreased 553,000 bu.

Minneapolis stocks of wheat are now 8,769,000 bu, compared to 19,899,000 bu a year ago.

Hans Kierstede Hudson made application for membership on the board of trade.

Duluth reported New York buying May wheat there around $1.51.

Duluth wheat stocks increased 506,000 bu for the week.

Hog receipts of 7,500 head met with an urgent demand at an advance of 10c from Friday's prices and the market closed strong at the upturn. Shippers had a few orders and the big packers took all the animals that remained, paying $7.10@7.20 for the bulk. Top sales were made at $7.27½, the highest price made since Jan. 18, when extreme sales reached $7.35. The average price for the day was advanced 11c and stood the highest made in nearly three months.

Final prices were the best of the week and left hogs standing 25c higher than a week ago, while pigs showed an appreciation of 25@50c. The average price of all the 105,000 hogs received here this week was placed at $6.95, compared with a weekly average of $6.85 for the 100,000 hogs marketed last week.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 2,300; Swift & Co., 700; Morris & Co., 300; Anglo-American, 700; Hammond, 500; Boyd-Lunham, 200; Roberts & Oake, 200; Western Packing company, 400; Independent Packing company, 600; Brennan Packing company, 900; butchers, 400; shippers, 400; total, 7,600.

CATTLE.

Beef cattle values at Chicago this week recovered part of the price losses sustained the foregoing week, steers closing at a rally of 15@25c, while cows and heifers showed as much as 25@40c recovered in many instances. Improvement in the demand for dressed beef following the Lenten season and a decrease in receipts of cattle were the two principal causes for the recovery. As in previous weeks, buyers discriminated against heavyweight steers of plain quality and these showed less advance than any other class. Light steers, cows, and heifers were shown the preference. Bulls made a little recovery, while calves sold higher early in the week, but reacted and finished at a decline of 25c. Receipts for the week decreased about 2,000 head, while shipments fell off 1,000. Both receipts and shipments were much smaller than those of the same week last year.

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 102,100, against 102,700 the preceding week, 115,400 a year ago, and 83,600 two years ago. Total for 1915 to date, 1,631,000, against 1,625,000 for the same period in 1914.

SHEEP.

Firmness continued to be an outstanding characteristic of the trade in live muttons and values of sheep and yearlings finished the week at an advance of 15@25c, while lamb prices closed at a gain of largely 25c. Highest prices in recent years were made by all classes, with aged sheep topping at $8.25 and prime lambs at $10.50. Receipts were increased nearly 15,000 head, while shipments showed a little decrease, but there was no surplus stock on the market at any time and the trade closed in a strong position. Prospects are that shipping on a restricted scale will be resumed with eastern buyers at the beginning of next week and a broader trade is expected.

Farm Mortgages.

The largest investors in farm mortgages in the United States are the life insurance companies. Of the $2,800,000,000 of mortgages now in force on the farms of the country nearly one-third are held by the large life associations, and the savings banks probably hold one-half of the rest.

The life companies, which probably make a more careful study of permanent investments than is made by any other institution, would invest much more heavily in mortgages except for the fact that the laws require them to pay to any policy holder, practically on demand, the surrender value of his policy. This requirement forces them to keep a considerable part of their reserves invested in liquid securities—something which they can convert into cash on short notice.

While farm mortgages have the disadvantage of not being readily convertible they have the corresponding advantage of not fluctuating in value. They are always carried on the books at par, while an inventory of stocks and bonds must be made every year in accord with the market price. A big slump in the stock market may bring a sound insurance company near the verge of technical insolvency, though it is in reality as sound as ever. The mortgages are the solid, dependable part of an insurance company's assets. No matter how severe a panic may occur the mortgages are safe if the loans are placed with care and good judgment.

The machinery by which a life insurance company loans money on mortgages consists first of one or more large agencies or loan companies in large cities of the country. The loan company, by means of traveling agents and through correspondence, is in business relations with hundreds of country loan agents.

The country agent may be primarily a fire insurance agent, a country lawyer, whose practice is chiefly attending to the details of real estate transfers, drawing wills, etc., for villagers and farmers. He has the confidence of the farmers and also of the large city agency, while the city agency has the confidence of the life insurance company.

The city agency safeguards important matters of policy, takes care that loans are made only in districts where soil is fertile and rainfall sufficient, and in states where laws are reasonably favorable to creditors. The local agent knows his territory and lends money only to thrifty farmers, who own and till good farms. For their services each agency receives a small commission, which varies according to the intensity of competition.

This extensive and complex machinery built up by life insurance companies has gradually broadened its field of operations. There are many more good farm mortgages available than the insurance concerns can take. As a result the city agencies dispose of them in other ways and it is here that the individual city investor may find a safe way of investing in mortgages.

Buying a House by Installments.

E. D.—You propose to pay $700 down on a $6,200 house. The rent is $32 a month. You will owe at the start $5,500. If you pay all the rent money to your creditor, caring for taxes and repairs with other money, it will take you a month or two more than twelve years to extinguish the debt. If you reduce the payments by using rent money for taxes and expenses, or if the building is not rented all the time, it will take much longer to clear the property. For instance, if you pay only $300 a year on the debt instead of $384 it will require nearly eighteen years.

How Much Ought to Be Saved.

E. G., Mankato, Minn.—You ask how much a man 50 years old and having no immediate heirs ought to save annually out of his income. If the income is derived from stocks he ought to save 30 or 40 per cent of it as insurance against reduction in dividends. If it is derived from gilt edged bonds 15 or 20 per cent ought to be ample for insurance against loss. Other considerations may enter the question. If the income is large many men would consider it morally wrong to spend most of it on personal luxury and extravagance.

Prairie Life.

J. F. Harvey, Ill.—The Prairie Life Insurance company began business less than two years ago. Its report for the first six months of 1914 showed $695,500 of insurance written and $811,000 in force at the end of the period. The company has $183,867 of capital stock paid in and a surplus of $65,569. The surplus came from sales of stock at twice the par value. The total receipts for the six months were $24,156 and the disbursements $23,69. The excess of receipts was not enough for policy reserves. The total assets were $100,626. The company evidently was not on a paying basis up to June 30 last. The report for the entire year has not yet been received.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, April 10.—Cotton goods and yarns were firm today. Burlaps were strong. Linens were firm. Men's wear and dress goods were in moderate demand for immediate use. Advance orders were slow. Knit goods were higher.

Experience Is Proof

Making your smokestacks smokeless is not the only virtue of Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers. It's only one of them. These boilers reduce your coal bills from 20 to 58 per cent, and these figures are the results of careful data collected from men and firms that have had the boiler in actual use.

If you are now burning the high-cost grades of coal to secure "smokelessness," bear in mind that the Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler will burn the cheapest grades of soft coal without smoke. You can figure for yourself where your saving comes in and what it amounts to in dollars and cents. The most stringent smoke ordinance in the United States can't be violated by the operation of this boiler.

Bear in mind another thing—that when the Kewanee Smokeless Boiler is set according to Kewanee specifications you never have any trouble with it. Sometimes we butt into stubborn brickmasons, and janitors and engineers lacking in knowledge, who insist upon doing things their way. And so we insist that you follow Kewanee specifications in the setting and installation, and from then on your worry on account of your boiler is conspicuous by its absence.

Goodrich Common.

There is good talk of a resumption of dividends on Goodrich common after the middle of the year.

Willys-Overland Profits.

A Boston authority estimates net profits of the Willys-Overland company for the year to end June 30 at about $8,000,000. This will be equal to 35 per cent on $20,000,000 common stock. The statement continues:

"The management has practically decided that it will pay no extra cash dividend this year on the common beyond the present 6 per cent rate.

"The company has been shipping during the last two months about 300 cars a day. The cars shipped represent actual sales as the company maintains no branches and is therefore not shipping out to distributors owned by itself to be later turned into cash."

Reo Motor Advances.

Reo Motor Car advanced from 29 to 33, while Reo Motor Truck improved from 11 to 13. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply company is wanted at 292. Some trading in National Grocer common has taken place between 72½ and 73. Consumers company preferred advanced to 84 bid, with offerings at 85, while the common has remained unchanged at 28½ to 29½. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock sold up to 103, but reacted to 100. Oxweld Acetylene remains steady at 98 bid, offered at 100.

Curb Market Broadens.

The local unlisted market is beginning to broaden and some of the lower priced issues have met with sharp advances.

Emerson Brantingham preferred sold from 38 to 52, while the common stock advanced from 10 to 16. Chalmers Motor common showed an upward turn from 84 to 92½. Stewart-Warner common has been fairly active on the curb, and good buying has taken place. It is understood the company is doing the largest business in its history. Pettibone-Mulliken first preferred advanced from 77½ to sales at 81. Moline Plow first preferred sold at 100¼. United States Gypsum preferred changed hands at 111. Sulzberger & Sons preferred was in demand at 90.

Inspiration Consolidated.

The report of the Inspiration Consolidated Copper company for the year ended Dec. 31 last states that the mill capacity will be increased from 7,500 tons, as originally planned, to 14,000 or 15,000 tons, and that production will commence in June. By August 7,000 tons a day should be treated, and the mill will be completed to full capacity by the end of this year.

New York Bank Figures.

The New York bank statement showed a moderate contraction in loans and a decrease of about $8,600,000 in deposits.

There was a moderate decrease in cash. The figures follow:

Money and Exchange.

Money rates were easy in Chicago at 3½@4 per cent on collateral, 4@4½ per cent on commercial paper, and 4@4½ per cent over the counter. New York exchange sold at par to 5c premium. Chicago bank clearings were $44,996,510.

Chicago Securities.

There was a large volume of trading in Stewart-Warner common on the local exchange and the price was erratic. From an opening at 65 it advanced to 69 and sold back to 67. So far as can be learned the company is profiting by an enlarged volume of orders.

Union Carbide was firm. Sears-Roebuck, and Peoples Gas steady. Diamond Match was higher at 94.

Booth Fisheries preferred was up ½ to 79, while the common sold off one point, closing at 39½. Business in the preferred was larger than in the common.

In the bond department prices were fairly steady and the market moderately active.

HIGHER PRICES IN WALL STREET

Profit Taking, in Which Europe Figures, Is the Only Restraint.

WEEK END A RECORD.

New York, April 10.—Profit taking of a very broad and general character, in which Europe participated to an unusual degree, was almost the sole restraint upon further speculative excesses in the stock market today. Even so, higher prices were established, and in some instances retained, on the largest week end business in six years.

At the opening, which was marked by much confusion and excitement, practically all the leading stocks and a majority of the specialties moved somewhat unevenly toward levels substantially above yesterday's high figures.

Bethlehem Steel Declines.

United States Steel was the outstanding feature, interest converging around that stock because of its meteoric rise yesterday. Opening at a fractional advance, it soon gained a full point at 58, but as speedily fell back to 55½ under the weight of enormous offerings. Its close was 56, a 1 point loss, on dealings in excess of 180,000 shares.

Bethlehem Steel was the sole exception to the general tendency, falling back 2 points in the early dealings and increasing this loss to 4 points. At no time did it figure importantly in the day's operations. Motor shares, while strong, also lost some of their recent prominence.

Bonds Show Strength.

Harrimans, the anthracites, Atchison, Canadian Pacific, Pennsylvania, and New York Central rose 1 to 2½ points, but failed to hold. Rock Island's feverish course reflected next week's meeting of the shareholders by rising almost 4 points, all of which it subsequently lost. Total sales of stocks amounted to 833,000 shares.

Bonds were strong, but failed to keep pace with the movement in stocks. Total sales par value aggregated $2,761,000. Panama coupon and registered 2s declined ½ per cent on call during the week.

Mercantile paper, 3½ per cent. Sterling exchange steady; 60 day bills, 4.77; for cables, 4.8015; for demand, 4.7985. Bar silver, 50⅛c. Mexican dollars, 38c.

URGES GERMANS SELL STOCKS.

BERLIN, April 10.—The newspaper Vossische Zeitung states that one-fifth of the shares of stock of the Bethlehem Steel corporation is owned by Germans and proposes that they sell their holdings at once because the corporation has disposed of $100,000,000 worth of war material to the allies.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, April 10.—The payment for $75,000,000 treasury bills was offset by the maturing of a similar amount today and the money market was not affected. Discount rates were easy on the hardening New York exchange. The strength in Americans and in Wall street helped the week to close cheerfully on the stock exchange. American securities were the leading features. A large number of markings occurred in United States Steel, Canadian Pacific, and the Erie issues, and the closing was firm. Rubber shares and Kaffirs were the most active in the other sections. Investment stocks were quietly steady. Bar silver, 23⅝d per ounce. Money, 1¼@1½ per cent. Discount rates—Short bills, 2⅛ per cent; three months, 2 per cent.

PARIS, April 10.—Trading was calm on the bourse today. Three per cent rentes, 72 francs 50 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 25 francs 55 centimes.

Safe Stocks for Western Investors

The agricultural West has ceased to be a borrower. Its 1914 surplus is being invested in great industrial enterprises farther East, whose prosperity is not dependent on the weather. Thus the West is becoming a creditor entitled to collect a permanent income on reserve investments that are independent of agricultural conditions.

We are specialists in the underwriting and selling of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stocks issued by sound manufacturing institutions turning out staple products. Our securities are highly safeguarded against impairment of the principal, as well as against delay or reduction of dividends.

When you understand our methods you will know why our stocks are safe. Our free booklet "Investing Under Expert Direction" explains. Send for it if you are interested, together with our descriptive offering list of stocks yielding 6 to 7 per cent income.

To those who have the desire to make a good investment, yet are willing to admit to themselves that they have the speculative instinct, this will certainly be of interest.

The typewriter, the linotype machine, cash register, adding machine, phonograph, etc., offered an opportunity to those who had the nerve to accept it, to make for every dollar invested many times the returns of a common investment.

Those who backed their judgment with a few hundred or a few thousand dollars in the infancy of some of the biggest industrial enterprises of the United States today, generally made reference to same in "whispers." Now these "ground floor," "subcellar" opportunists refer to their extraordinary foresight right out in the open. They are proud of their investment judgment.

If, in a few years—say possibly two years—you wish to not only be proud of your investment judgment but can have the satisfaction of having availed yourself of the now offered opportunity to join in the financing of an industrial proposition—as big a future possibly as any of the above—you will acquaint yourself without delay with the facts. One important fact is this—that not one penny is needed to complete the proposition—from the point of demonstrating what it will do.

The possibilities and probabilities will be as clear to you as they are to every one who is acquainted with the commercial world. The interest of those who have the money to invest, plus courage and patience, is directed to the advertiser.

Your communication will be replied to promptly and an invitation will be extended to investigate and see for yourself whether or not this is a real genuine opportunity to make money—and you will of course be the sole judge.

BY SAM WELLER.

ansas City, Mo., April 10.—[Special.]—icago's White Sox of 1915 are ready for e clatter and roar of fans which mark e inauguration of the race for the pennant next Wednesday. To say they are ly is perfectly proper, for Rowland's n are fit if any team ever was for the ening to be staged in the yard of the owns at St. Louis.

While the Sox are cavorting in the open g pastime in the Mound city there will e similar activity in three other cities of e American league circuit—Detroit, ashington, and Philadelphia. The re rts from the camps of the other teams e in an optimistic vein, it being claimed t condition has been attained.

Season to Watch Sox.

But the big interest to the Chicago fans ll be centered in the getaway of the hite Sox under the leadership of their manager and with Eddie Collins, the mer Athletic star at second base. th the return of Buck Weaver to the m the Sox machine is in the best of n for the first battle of the champion ip race. Rowland, however, isn't look g for any cinches even in meeting the owns, who have occupied a lowly posi on in the past. The new manager ex cts a tough session ahead, for his play s will face some southpaw hurlers of ass, in this list being Carl Weilman, arl Hamilton, and Walter Leverenz.

From present indications it looks as if m Scott, the Death valley gent, would to the mound for the Sox, and that eilman will be sent in to pitch for the rowns by Manager Branch Rickey.

Fighting Spirit Shown.

Confidence is the keynote in the Sox mp before the season's kickoff. A new rand of fighting spirit pervades the nks and to a man the players are igned with Rowland. The pitching staff, esenting such truly greats as Scott, ussell, Faber, Jasper, and Cicotte ready, ith Wolfgang and Benz fast rounding to trim, can be depended upon to wheel e Comiskey machine out into the front r of the flag aspirants, and the addi n of Brief at first, Felch in center, and nian in left field makes the team loom 25 per cent stronger than any combi n that has carried the Thirty-fifth reet standard in recent campaigns.

Old Man Hard Luck tried his hardest r a time to impede the progress of the x in their spring endeavors, but now at his chief victims, Weaver and Ray halk, have shaken off the pesky hoo and returned to their wonder work g feats all is serene in camp. Fast as e Sox looked with Blackburne subbing t short alongside the dynamic Eddie ollins, they now must be classed the riginal speed merchants of the game ith Weaver again on watch.

Plenty of Utility Talent.

Utility talent galore has been rounded p for the 1915 pale hosed crew, and owland now can carry three or four of s 1914 regulars for the substitute roles, ummoning forth Fournier, Roth, Black urne, Demmitt, or Chappell as the oc asion demands when trouble besets any f the steady service pastimers.

For the benefit of those rabid enthusi sts who idolized Ping Bodie in recent ears let it be known that a new hero is oming home in the person of "Hap" lsch. This Dutch youth can hit 'em r as the fence buster ever did in his almiest days, and we haven't as yet cked him in the midst of an ivory y. Moreover, he is fast and has a rking arm.

Brief Lands First Sack Job.

nny Brief, the newly crowned first seman, has laid hold bodily to the rth which was assigned to Jacques urnier, with the defection of Hopping arold Chase, and in every branch of the me the Traverse City Pole has out nned his French rival for the post. all the American association race of 4 only one slugger—Bill Hinchman of e Columbus club—had Felch or Brief ped in the matter of long range clout Of course, these two promising g gents are going up against a vastly perior brand of twirling in the Johnson circuit, but they're both natural hit s and mighty welcome additions.

e Sox itinerary now reads Manager owland will lead his troops from here to Joseph tomorrow morning for Sunday Monday engagements with Jack Hol 's Western league Drummers. These s will conclude the spring jaunt, ch carried the Sox over almost 5,000 of assorted touring through the far southwest, and middle west. Mon night they will steam over to St. Louis big rest Tuesday, and a light work ranged with the view of putting

Saier	First base
Williams	Center field
McLarry	Second base
Bresnahan or Archer	Catcher
Cheney or Vaughn	Pitcher

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Memphis, Tenn., April 10.—[Special.]—Runs will begin to count next Wednesday with the opening of the major league championship seasons, and the Cubs will begin the serious business of earning their salaries instead of merely their keep.

The chances of the Bresnahans in the pennant race will depend on the number of runs they can make. Up to date the Cubs have shown delightful proclivities in the way of hitting the ball where nobody can get it, but they have been shy on converting swats into runs unless the swats went over one of the fences. Likewise they have proven their ability to suppress tallies unless the other fellows bunched hits on the pitchers.

Cubs in Fine Condition.

On the whole the Cubs will go into the the flag race in better physical condition than any other team in the National league and that ought to count for considerable at the start. They have had better training conditions ever since March 1 than have been enjoyed by any of the aggregations which will dispute their progress. Most of them have worked hard and faithfully and some of those who have not done so are in better condition than one or two who have, which would seem to be robbing virtue of its own reward.

Bresnahan picked his regulars the first week and has seen no reason for changing his mind. Outside of the pitchers all of them are in tiptop shape except Fisher and Archer. Fisher has been unable to work his whip into good condition in spite of constant practice. If he had shut his teeth and pegged hard every time in spite of the pain, instead of favoring the wing and trusting to time to bring it round, he might have got better results or he might have put himself out of business entirely.

Two Regulars Nurse Injuries.

At any rate there will be a lot of grounders to shortstop converted into base hits by sprinting unless Fisher's arm improves a lot before long. Archer was knocked out of the valuable work of the closing ten days of the trip by stopping a Pierce spitter with one of the fingers of his throwing hand. He expects to be able to catch when the bell rings, but Bresnahan has been catching constantly to get into shape to bear all the burden if necessary.

There is not a flaw in the condition of the rest of the infielders or outfielders and they have been playing together practically without switch for more than a month. With McLarry's inexperience, added to Fisher's slow pegging, the Cubs are bound to be weak around second base at the start. It is expected that both can recover—Polly from his inexperience and Horace from his sore wing. If not, Bresnahan will fall back on Corridon and Phelan for the Keystone work, but does not expect to have to do that.

Zim Promises to Be Good.

Saier is in better form than last year, and Heine Zimmerman has promised to let the umpires alone and cut out the phantom double play as he now is an ex-family man with considerable alimony to play. Schulte, Williams, and Good, the outfield trio, are lightning fast and hitting the ball hard. By constant coaching and drilling Bresnahan has got them to use their speed with more intelligence. There still have been disastrous results, however.

The pitching staff looks to be doubtful at the start, but even four days of warm weather work may do wonders in that department. Neither Vaughn nor Cheney, on whom Bresnahan places most reliance for the early work, was in good shape the last time out. Humphries, always a late starter, has been handicapped by a wrenched knee and will not be of much use for at least a month. Lavender and Pierce are in the best all round condition of the veteran slabmen, but both have shown a tendency to be erratic in spots. Oddly enough, Pierce, although a left hander, has been the steadiest of the whole lot in recent exhibitions.

Two Recruits Promising.

Zabel, a second year man, started late on account of completing his college course in chemistry, and has not yet gained full control of his goods. The two recruits of the staff, Adams and Standridge, have had youth in their favor and naturally have acquired the best physical condition, but their lack of experience makes them less dependable under the acid test than the older men. If his veterans prove unable to cope with the situation on the slab, however, Bresnahan will call on the youngsters early and often on the theory that it is better to have taken a chance and lost than never to have won at all.

Superior condition over the other teams' regulars at the outset will be partially offset by slowness of the Cub pitchers in rounding to, according to the present outlook. Later on the other teams will attain the same physical form and the Cub hurlers will get completely into their stride, barring accident. Consequently, it looks like a tough fight all the way for the Bresnahan tribe.

Rogers Wants Fighting Spirit.

In the belief that fighting wins more ball games than base hits do, the Cub manager has endeavored to instill into the west siders the spirit of pulling together and fighting for each other on the ball field—something that was noticeably lacking from their games last year. The Boston Braves of 1914 are an illustration of what the unified battle of brains, brawn, and billingsgate will do, and Bresnahan wants his men to take up the cudgels of language all together when an opposing team starts riding one of the Cubs, instead of leaving him to fight his verbal battle alone, as has been the case recently.

BY HANDY ANDY.

Do you want a picture of the most popular baseball player in Chicago without a cent of extra expense, a beautiful rotogravure picture suitable for framing?

THE TRIBUNE will give you such a picture and it wants every fan in Chicago to have his or her favorite hero of the diamond. The only thing THE TRIBUNE wants to know is the name of the favorite of the largest number of fans. Then we will furnish you a picture of him, like the one of Roger Bresnahan, the supplement of today's paper, or of Joe Tinker last Sunday, or like the one you will receive of Eddie Collins next Sunday.

So if you want to get your favorite player right away without waiting just indicate your choice on the ballot which appears on this page.

The most popular player will be chosen first and his picture will be given to you free in THE TRIBUNE of April 25—it takes nearly two weeks to count the ballots and produce the pictures by the rotogravure process; but you can have a picture of your favorite by April 25 if you and your friends vote for him with the ballot here presented.

Just clip this ballot out and mail it to the Baseball Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Room 810 Tribune building.

Baseball Editor:

Please have the picture of

appear as a supplement to the Tribune one week from next Sunday.

Signed ______________

P. S.—Please don't vote more than once for your favorite player. This isn't a coupon contest, but a bona fide effort to find out the most popular ball player in Chicago.

You can choose from any of the three Chicago teams, Sox, Cubs, and Whales. It'll be mighty interesting to know what player has the most friends in Chicago and you can help decide it and also get his picture free by filling out this ballot and sending it to the Baseball Editor.

Don't vote for Tinker, Bresnahan, or Collins because their pictures have appeared already.

PHILS WIN AND TIE ATHLETICS

Beat Macks, 5 to 3, and Quaker City Series Ends in Draw.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 10.—The Philadelphia National league team defeated the Athletics in the final game of the spring series today, 5 to 3. The series ended in a tie. Each team secured three victories and one game was tied.

Alexander was batted for eight hits, while Bob Shawkey held the Phillies to seven, but the Nationals bunched swats in the fourth and eighth, scoring twice in the earlier frame and three times in the eighth.

A home run by Cravath was a leading factor in the victory for the Phillies. Score:

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 10.—Brooklyn defeated Buffalo, 13 to 9, in a ragged game before a big crowd at the opening of the Federal league season here today. It is considered probable that the game will be thrown out, as Grover Land of the Brooklyns, after batting for Upham, was taken out to let Howard run for him, after which Land donned the mask and finished the game behind the bat. PROMINENT FOLK ROOT FOR WHALES

Chicago's sport loving public, from Mayor-elect William Hale Thompson down to the little street roller skating urchin, turned out yesterday to pay homage to Charley Weeghman and his Chicago Federal league team, which opened its season with a victory at the North side park over Fielder Jones' St. Louis club.

Preceding the game was the parade of 300 automobiles which started from Grant park, off Monroe street, toured the loop, and wound up at the ball park. All the cars were handsomely decorated.

After the arrival at the park, the first incident to happen which brought the crowd to its feet was the arrival of Mayor-elect William Hale Thompson. Wearing his cowboy hat, Thompson walked down the aisle to his box and when he waved his headpiece he was given a rousing cheer. He was accompanied by Commodore James A. Pugh, Eugene Pike, J. Lincoln Pfaff, and Bill Burkhardt.

Intermingled in the large gathering were several prominent families of north side society, including Al Plamondon and family, John Ringling and family, John Vogelsang and wife, E. B. Shaw and family, Miss Jessie McCarey, Will Stewart and wife, Bruce Watson, Murray Keller, and John J. Connors.

The bench was represented by Judges Petit, Bridwell, McDonald, Scully, Williams, McGoorty, and Foell. R. M. Sweitzer and wife occupied a box on the first base side. August Weeghman, father of the owner of the club, sat back of the local team's box. Mrs. Tinker occupied a box with Mrs. Frank Houseman and Mrs. Weeghman, while wives of the other players occupied seats in the vicinity of the Chifeds' bench.

WHALES TAKE OPENER AS 16,000 FANS CHEER

Beat St. Louis Feds, 3-1, by Three Run Rally in the Eighth.

HENDRIX BRIGHT STAR.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Baseball for 1915 in Chicago began yesterday with splendor, sunshine, and a victory when Joe Tinker and his Whales thrashed Fielder Jones and his St. Louis Feds at Weeghman park by a count of 3 to 1, before a gathering of 16,000 enlivened fans who reveled in the return of the national game.

There was gayety in abundance, marked by a parade of decorated motor cars, floral presentations, a brass band, cabaret performers, and a great and exciting game of ball which was won by the north siders in a frenzied eighth inning rally which pulled the game out of the fire and set the big crowd wild with joy.

Plank Great at Start.

For seven innings Tinker's lads toiled helplessly before the cunning curves of the famed Eddie Plank, who helped Connie Mack win six pennants in years gone by, and who looked as chipper as ever until the eighth round rampage. In the fifth the St. Louis gang had clouted home one man by means of two terrific blows in succession, and it looked as if that one run was all Plank needed to start his new career with a victory.

Claude Hendrix, Tinker's great spitball artist, was on the slab, hurling in his most stylish form, and he himself started the big rally which crushed the veteran southpaw in the eighth.

Hendrix was first up, and led off with a tremendous two base blow to right center. Hanford, Mann, Wilson, and Zeider, who followed the big pitcher, did the rest, and when the former Mack artist succeeded in getting three men out he was licked, for three runs had been pushed over the plate.

Feds Have Fancy Opening.

Seldom has Chicago seen the baseball season ushered in with more frills than attended the affairs of yesterday. The Fed Fans Boosters' club spared no pains to make the day one of grandeur, and when it was all over the president of the rooters' organization, Henry P. Bunkel, was almost as delighted as was Claude Hendrix, who pitched the game.

More than 3,000 automobiles, decorated for the occasion, assembled in Grant park at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The procession strung out for more than a mile as it trailed its way to the north side park. Arriving at the grounds, the band and cabaret performers warmed up along with the ball players, and then the feature act was put on when Mayor-elect William H. Thompson was led upon the field by President Weeghman.

Next Mayor a Southpaw.

While the throng stood and cheered the new city executive strode to the pitchers' slab and pitched the first ball of the game. Not until then did Chicago's citizens know they had elected a southpaw to govern the city. Thompson wound up his left arm and flung the ball to Catcher Wilson, and the season was on.

Threatening weather as late as 2 o'clock in the afternoon doubtless kept many away from the game. However, half an hour before the time to start play the clouds began to melt away, and when 3 o'clock arrived the sun was out. By that time the new bleacher in left field was packed to the limit, the two pavilions were filled, and the grandstand was almost full, there being not more than 1,500 vacant chairs when play began. The early morning rain had made the diamond slippery and heavy, and it handicapped the players a bit, especially in running the bases.

Whales' Field Enlarged.

The field, however, was perfect to look upon. It has been enlarged since last year, the right field bleacher having been removed, while one twice as large has been erected in left field. The grass was green and the stands were draped with American flags. Everything was fresh and clean, even the players having on their new ball suits for the first time.

The game itself was quite remarkable for one so early in the year. Good pitching featured on both sides with the exception of the eighth, when the Whales drove Eddie Plank's curves to the distant parts of the lot, and the fifth, when two successive wallops were made off Hendrix.

All told, the St. Louis Feds gathered only four hits off Claude, while the Whales clouted Plank safely seven times, three of them being bunched in the exciting eighth, when most of the fun took place. Until that time the Chicago fans had been given little opportunity to cheer, about the only occasions being in the fourth and sixth, when "Dutch" Zwilling set them screaming with a couple of two baggers.

Crowd Cheers Former Mackman.

Eddie Plank began with such prowess that he had the crowd applauding him before three rounds were over. He fanned two guys in the first and two in the second. It was the fourth before any one touched him, Zwilling then breaking the ice with his first double. Johnny Farrell punched one to left in the fifth and Zwilling laced out another double in the sixth. Zeider poled one safely in the seventh, but no one got past second base in all that time.

Hendrix experienced no trouble until the fifth, only one hit having been made off him. Plank himself was first up in the fifth and he stepped into the first ball pitched and drove it to left center for two bases. Tobin followed with a terrific drive to right center for three bags and Plank galloped home.

Squeeze Play Goes Wrong.

The visitors would have had another run following that but they failed miserably in the execution of the squeeze play. Bridwell bunted the ball all right, but Tobin was so late in starting for third that Hendrix scooped the ball to Wilson in time to nail the man at the plate. Drake followed with a walk and Borton ended the round with a long fly. From then on Hendrix had no trouble with the Jones outfit.

When the Whales went to bat in the eighth the game seemed hopeless, but Hendrix started the big rally when he drove fiercely to right center for two bags. The next play was the break of the game, for Hanford pushed a bunt toward Plank and a bit to his left. Eddie rushed in, scooped the ball, and though he slipped on the wet turf, he made the shot to third base trying to nail Hendrix. His shot was too late, for Hendrix was there, finishing with a good slide, and both he and Hanford were safe.

Mann Drives in Run.

This drew in the infielders, and Leslie Mann, whose hit beat Plank in one of the world's series games last fall, smashed a single off Ernie Johnson's shins, the ball caroming off to right field. Hendrix counted and Hanford went to third, from where he scored the run needed to win when Art Wilson lined fiercely over second after Zwilling had fanned. Mann took third on Wilson's hit and scored on a perfectly executed squeeze play, Rollie Zeider doing the bunting. Beck ended the rumpus with a pop fly, and the visitors took their half of the ninth with no results.

Notes of Whales' Opener

The Whales will battle Fielder Jones' team again today at 3 o'clock.

Rankin Johnson or Mordecai Brown is slated to hurl today against Bob Groom.

A party of forty-seven prominent St. Louis rooters attended the opening. They will return after the game today.

"Dutch" Zwilling was presented with a silver bat beautifully engraved with his name and batting average. A local jewelry house donated the gift.

Al Wickland made the most sensational play of the game when he legged it into deep right center and captured Ward Miller's terrific drive in the sixth.

The eyes of the fans were upon Young Jimmy Smith, the boy shortstop who beat Manager Tinker out of his job. Smittie never had a fielding chance in the game. At the bat the first time, he fanned, but managed to hit the ball his next two times up.

First prize for the best decorated motor car in the parade went to Max Eitel, one of the boosters. The prize was a silver cup, and after the game it was filled and passed around among the boosters who gathered in President Weeghman's office.

SOX SECONDS FAIL TO HIT AND LOSE TO OMAHA, 2 TO 1

Omaha, Neb., April 10.—[Special.]—White Sox Yannigans struck a slump behind Eddie Cicotte today, and Omaha won, 2 to 1. The battle started in sunshine, but rain fell during the last four innings.

Cicotte was good, but couldn't win with one run. Closman pitched great ball for the Packers, whiffing seven batters, but he walked five, hit one, and let loose one wild pitch.

The Sox score came in the fifth, when Lathrop and Baldwin singled, Cicotte sacrificed, and Chappell rapped a long fly. Owing to Bromwich's injury yesterday, Baker went to second, Blackburne to short, and Baldwin to left field.

The Sox leave tomorrow morning for Des Moines, where they play in the afternoon. Klepfer will pitch. Score:

BY SAM WELLER.

Kansas City, Mo., April 10.—[Special.]—Base hits were almost too numerous to count in the final clash between White Sox and Kansas City Blues today, but the Sox did most of the swatting and walked off with a 14 to 9 victory.

Eighteen solid blows were credited to Rowland's sluggers. Three of the knocks were good for home runs, Weaver, Brief, and Shano Collins injecting circuit clouts into the matinee. Capt. Buck also distinguished himself by poling three singles in addition to his homer.

Jim Scott was ordered to take his final workout previous to the grand opening at St. Louis next Wednesday, but Jim was suffering from cold contracted during the night and he did not extend himself at any time. As a result the A. A. club soaked him hard in spots, but the slugging of the visitors saved Scott from worry.

Fans Attend Fed Opening.

Competing against the local Federal leaguers, who opened their championship race against the Pittsburgh outlaws, the Sox were able to attract only about 1,200 fans. The Fed inaugural drew a crowd of 11,000, according to reports from the rival trenches.

An error by Rath spared Brief after two were down in the second, and a steal, pass to Breton, and Schalk's single off Sanders yielded two runs. Ten Hose batted in the third, six wallops netting five runs, a pair of homers producing four of the tallies.

One gone, Weaver singled and E. Collins singled. The former scored. Then Shano Collins poked a homer into the left bleachers, sending Eddie over. Felch then singled and paced Brief home ahead of the latter's four ply slam. Breton walked and Scott singled, but both were marooned.

Robbins Opposes the Sox.

Russell Robbins, southpaw, discarded by Bresnahan, relieved Sanders in the fourth, and Weaver combed the first pitched ball into the left field bleachers for homer No. 3. Scott wavered in the fourth, when his error, a bobble by Weaver, a single by Titus, three passes, and a sacrifice fly netted three runs.

The Hose added two in their fifth on singles by Brief, Breton, and Quinlan and a wild pitch. Compton's wallop, a two bagger by Lelivelt, and Mattick's single, with a sparkling double play sandwiched in, gave the Blues one in their fifth.

Weaver's fourth wallop, J. Collins' triple, and a wild pitch added two more in the sixth. Then the Sox subsided for two innings before Ragan. A fumble by Quinlan, Lelivelt's double, and Workman's single gave the enemy two in the seventh.

Play at St. Joseph Today.

Fournier broke in with a single and steal in the ninth and subsequent drives by Brief and Daly produced two tallies. Scott eased up in the ninth, when four hits netted three runs. The Sox go to St. Joseph, Mo., tomorrow to open a two day series. Faber pitches.

Sox to Be Leaders Rowland Predicts.

BY CLARENCE H. ROWLAND.
(Manager Chicago White Sox.)

I don't believe in trying to call the turn at the start of a championship season, but will say that the White Sox, now physically fit, should, barring accidents, finish in front, or mighty close to the top. The pitching staff, one of the most effective ever assembled on one ball club, is stronger than it was in 1914; we have added wonderful strength to the club in the person of Eddie Collins and the acquisition of Bunny Brief for first base, Hap Felch for center, and Tommy Quinlan for left field has fortified every position.

What I like most about my club is the predominant fighting spirit. This stick-together feeling is half the battle on the ball field. Should injuries beset any of our regulars we will have capable utility men to jump in, as I propose to carry several of the 191- regulars to play substitute parts.

BROOKLYN TRIMS YANKEES.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 10.—Rucker and Appleton puzzled the Yankees today and Brooklyn won, 3 to 0. Between 3,000 and 4,000 fans saw the game, which was staged in opposition to the Federal opening. Score:

Yankees ....0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0 6 1
Brooklyn ......0 2 0 0 0 0 1 0 *—3 6 1

Batteries—Keating, Ring, and Sweeney; Rucker, Appleton, and Miller.

Wisconsin, 7; N. W. College, 1.

Madison, Wis., April 10.—[Special.]—Wisconsin defeated Northwestern college today by a score of 7 to 1 in the opening practice game. Nupert was on the mound for Wisconsin and showed well.

WHITE SOX FIT TO OPEN BATTLE

them on edge for the opening struggle Wednesday.

Being of an optimistic turn of mind, Manager Rowland isn't picking his team to cop the American league pennant, but to all anxious inquirers the new boss modestly asserts he is heading a band of diamond greats that will be heard from quite distinctly long before the titular problem is solved when the leaves begin to fall. If our opinion counts for anything it's a first division club—one that will be fighting Boston and Washington for the coveted gonfalon from April 14 until the lights go out on the hectic jamboree next October.

Four games are booked with the Brownies during the opening sojourn of the Rowlandites in St. Louis, the series ending a week from today. While the Hose and Browns are locked in grim embrace the Tigers and Indians [or reformed Naps] will be going to the mat in Detroit; Boston's Red Sox and the champion Athletics will hold the boards in Shibe park, Philadelphia, and the Yankees, with their new boss, "Wild Bill" Donovan, will be trying to teach the Senators to take a springtime joke on the Florida avenue grounds in Washington.

BROWNS BATTER CARD PITCHERS

St. Louis, Mo., April 10.—[Special.]—Cardinal pitchers were easy for the Browns, who won the fifth game of the spring series this afternoon, 9 to 4. The Cardinals have won three of the five games played.

The game was featured by two squeeze plays in which Shotten tallied on each occasion, once from second behind Lowdermilk, when Austin bunted, and again from second when Walsh bunted.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Memphis, Tenn., April 10.—[Special.]—Manager Bresnahan speeded up his machine today and the Cubs ran over the Turtles, 16 to 2, in the next to the last game in Dixie. The speed was too fast for the manager, who ran himself nearly to death in hit and run plays with McLarry and went back to the hotel after the fourth inning to recuperate.

Even the preliminary practice was so reckless that Pete Knisely went to the hospital before play started. The Pickleburg, Pa., hero cut a gash in his own face with a foul tip while practicing batting and it required four expert stitches to close the gap in Peter's map. It will be several days before he can see his own feet with his right eye as a result of the mishap, which the doctor says will not seriously disfigure the outfielder's countenance.

Corriden Relieves Good.

Meantime, however, the Cubs will be without any reserve outfielder, and Wilbur Good is feeling none too well. He had to quit in the seventh inning, compelling Red Corriden to cover right garden. Just to show his familiarity with the job Corriden poled a home run into the left field bleachers his first time at bat.

Lavender was put over the full distance and it was only a mild canter for him after the third inning. He pitched for five rounds, during which three hits were made off him and nobody went further than second base.

The other four innings Lavender merely lobbed the ball up when there was nobody on and escaped with a total of seven swats and two tallies against him.

The Cubs started in running bases to the limit and kept it up. The result was a lot of errors for the Turtles and a larger total of runs than base hits for the Cubs. Instructions were for every one to go from first to third on an outfield hit, and pretty nearly everybody did unless the hit went to short left.

There also was some semblance of team work in utilizing speed. In the seventh inning Schulte was on third with two out and Williams dropped a bunt safely along the third base line. McDermott could not get it in time to retire Williams, so tried to chase Schulte instead. "Wildfire" beat the third baseman and scored easily. It is not likely, however, that the Cubs will pull many squeeze plays with two men out and the manager looking.

Morrison and Robison Easy.

Both Morrison and Robison were soft marks for the Cubs. Robison quit trying to pitch after they had made five runs off him in the eighth inning and shot the ball over with nothing at all on it. As a result he retired the next three men and blanked the Cubs in the ninth.

A heavy rain during the night left the playing field soft, but the base lines were fairly firm and the weather was highly conducive to bettering the condition of the players.

One more game here tomorrow will wind up the spring trip and the Cubs will leave for home in the evening with the promise of two perfectly good steel sleepers which never have been used before to chaperon them to Chicago. Two days of inurement to the lake breezes are expected to prepare the athletes for the big show.

Answers to Queries.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—In playing billiards, if I force the object ball off the table and my cue ball remains on the table, do I lose my shot and am I credited with a scratch? F. G.

Ans.—It is not a scratch and you can count on the shot if you make a carom. Three cushion players sometimes force the object ball off the table to avoid a possible kiss.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—Is the following a legitimate shot in three cushion billiards: My opponent, finding the cue ball resting against cushion, shot to that cushion, hit two others, and, after connecting with two object balls, claimed a count. Is he right? F. MURPHY.

Ans.—The cushion to which the cue ball is frozen does not count as one of the three cushions necessary to make the count.

Oak Park, Ill.—[To the Editor.]—What is the world's record run in straight billiards? F. L.

Ans.—Jake Schaefer ran 3,000 points against J. F. B. McCleery at San Francisco in May, 1890, playing on a 4½x9 table. In a championship match in 1879 on a regulation table, Schaefer ran 690.

Ardent Fan, City.—Eddie Collins' batting averages for the last five years have been: 1910, .322; 1911, .365; 1912, .348; 1913, .345; 1914, .344. Frank Baker batted as follows: 1910, .283; 1911, .334; 1912, .347; 1913, .336; 1914, .319.

R. W., Kankakee, Ill.—James J. Corbett defeated John L. Sullivan in the twenty-first round. Corbett was credited with a knockout. The final blow was a right swing to the mouth.

G. K. M., City—Joe Choynski knocked out Jack Johnson in three rounds at Galveston, Tex., Feb. 25, 1901.

SEMI-PRO TEAMS AWAIT SIGNAL TO OPEN SEASON

More than Fifty Games on the Local Baseball Schedule for Today.

Chicago's semi-pro baseball season will open formally today, although the City league schedule will not start for a couple of weeks. Nearly all of the big semi-pro grounds will stage games, however, close to fifty contests being billed through the big central association downtown, while a lot of free lance exhibitions will be played to give the managers a line on some of the players.

A movement is on foot to unite all of the strong semi-pro clubs this year in the contest for the Sweitzer cup, conceded as the big prize of the year among the semi-pros. Last year the City league was practically barred, but both sides have planned to have all of the clubs battle in the semi-finals. Briefly, the best plan suggested is to play an elimination contest so that the four strongest clubs in the Amateur Managers' league will play against the four best City league clubs, the winner taking the county clerk's trophy.

The City league almost is ready for its campaign, the only thing holding it back being the prospect of the new Normal Parks getting ready in time to play with it. If the Normals get into line another traveling team will be admitted and the circuit made a ten club one.

Semi-pro games scheduled for this afternoon are as follows:

Murphys and Niesens at Elston and [illegible] avenues.
Loadins and Ideal Billiards at Chicago and Western avenues.
Riverviews and Anson's Colts at Sacramento avenue and Lake street, morning.
Melrose Stars at Melrose Park.
Mathierens and Humboldt Parks at Logan Square.
M. & Ms. and Payton Colts at [illegible] and Grand avenues.
Johnson Tigers and Herlihys at Kilbourn and Ferdinand avenues.
U. S. Army at Roseland Eclipse park.
Cooke's Colts and Barry A. C. at Albany avenue and Lake street.
Netsel North Ends and Magnus' Colts at Southport avenue and Marianna street.

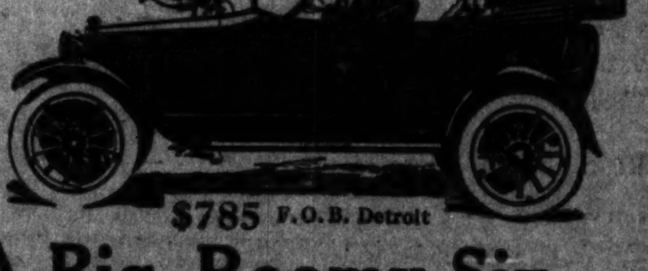
Ford

Anyone can understand and operate a Ford car. Extremely simple, yet absolutely scientific in every detail. No need of a skilled mechanic to keep your Ford running. Each owner looks after it himself. Doctors, farmers, business men, men in every walk of life, enjoy Ford service and economy, for a Ford costs, on the average, but two cents a mile to operate and maintain.

Buyers will share in profits if we sell at retail 300,000 new Ford cars between August 1914 and August 1915.

Runabout $440; Touring Car $490; Town Car $690; Coupelet $750; Sedan $975, f. o. b. Detroit with all equipment.

On display and sale at Ford Motor Co., 2528 Michigan Ave., 39th St. and Wabash Ave.



SAXON "SIX"

$785 F.O.B. Detroit

A Big, Roomy Six

For those who want a touring car, this five-passenger six-cylinder Saxon is truly an exceptional value. In size and specifications it is to be compared with cars selling at $1250 or more.

Here is a roomy, handsome car, with high class equipment throughout. It has Gray & Davis electric starting and lighting system, demountable rims, speedometer, one-man top, clear vision ventilating windshield.

Its 112-inch wheelbase is greater than on any other "Six" below $1200. Only one car below $1200 has as generous inside width of tonneau seat—and none has more. Riding comfort—steadiness on the road—are further provided by its cantilever type springs. You owe it to yourself to see this wonderful car before placing an order. It contains many unexpected features, every one of them tried and proved. And the price, too, is unexpected—$785.

HERE'S LIST OF RECORDS MADE BY CENTRAL A. A. U. MEN

CENTRAL A. A. U. RECORDS LISTED FOR FIRST TIME

Marks Made from 1889 to Present Included in Set Announced.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

For the first time in the history of the Central association of the Amateur Athletic union a complete set of records has been compiled by the registration committee. The records date back as far as 1889 and include competition in all branches.

The compilation of marks has been needed for years in this section. Hardly a meet has been held in which there have not been some disputes over the performances when records were approached. Now that a complete list has been sent to all the clubs and athletic organizations of the association, the board of managers believes it has done something for the good of the game and the prosperity of the A. A. U.

Following are the records sent out by George B. Waterstraat, secretary and treasurer of the Central A. A. U.:

Brother of Ralph to Drive a Delage.

JOHN DE PALMA

JOHN DE PALMA, a brother of the famous Ralph, who has been entered in the next Indianapolis 500 mile race at the wheel of the Delage that won last year's contest. De Palma has been polishing up on the fine points of the game by serving as his brother's mechanician during the last season. At the wheel of his French flier it is thought he stands an excellent chance to win.

Hunting Tips by Alfred P. Lane

C. C., Chicago, Ill.—(1) Would the .22 Hi-Power Savage rifle be powerful enough for moose or bear as found in Nova Scotia?

Answer: It is not to be recommended for such large game.

(2) Will firing the .22 long rifle cartridges with the auxiliary chamber lead the barrel?

Answer: I do not think you will have much trouble of this kind.

(3) What would be the range and accuracy of the .22 long rifle cartridge as used in this way?

Answer: It would probably not be very accurate at over fifteen to twenty-five yards.

(4) Would you advise reloading with reduced loads and lead bullets for short range in preference to the .22 long rifle cartridges?

Answer: Reloading, using reduced loads and gas checked bullets will give more accurate results. Of course it is considerably more trouble.

J. M., Chicago, Ill.—1. How old must a person be to buy a rifle or a hunting license in Illinois?

Ans.—There is no age limit.

2. Is there any hunting allowed in Illinois in summer?

Ans.—The only open season in Illinois during the summer is that on squirrels—gray, red, fox, or black—the open season being from July 2 to Nov. 16.

3. What game is a .22 caliber rifle best suited to shoot?

Ans.—The .22 caliber rifle is best adapted to small game, such as squirrels, rabbits, etc.

4. Can a .22 caliber shot cartridge be shot in a .22 caliber rifle?

Ans.—Yes, but I would not recommend it, as it will surely lead the barrel.

W. L. W., Grayville, Ill.—1. Take an ordinary full choke shotgun, does the shooting of BB or buckshot injure the barrel?

Ans.—The standard factory loaded buckshot or BB shot may be used in a full choke shotgun without injury.

2. What is the speed of the shot from such a gun, using smokeless powder?

Ans.—The velocity is just under 900 feet per second.

3. What is the usual speed of flight of wild geese, wild duck, and quail?

Ans.—The average goose flies at 110 feet per second. Ducks vary according to species, the slowest being the spoon bill, which averages about 70 feet per second, and the fastest the blue winged teal, which flies 150 feet per second. Quail average 75 feet per second. These are the figures as quoted from Mr. Charles Askins in his book, "The American Shotgun."

For Players of Skat.

BY A. I. LAUER.

THE Avondale Skat club had an unusually large attendance at its monthly tournament. The lucky ones were:

1. Hy Gildemeister won 20 games.
2. Ben Jacobs scored 610 points.
3. C. H. Lange won spade solo against 5 matadores.
4. O. Schmidt won 18 games.
5. M. Holt scored 580 points.
6. R. Muelle made high play of 120 points and scored 482 points.
7. Fred Kohl won club tourne against 4 matadores and scored 500 points.

The Southwest Skat club tournament reports also a good attendance, with the following as winners:

1—A. I. Lauer, won sixteen games and scored 520 points.
2—Hy Krabbenhoeft, scored 506 points.
3—Fred Busch, won club solo against four matadores.
4—Her. Jessen, made high play of 140 points.
5—Herman Mueller, won heart tourne against four matadores.

The German Press club held a tournament Tuesday at the Bismarck hotel and announces as winners the following:

1—Charles Kiesler, won seventeen games.
2—Gus Gajeng, scored 781 points.
3—Reid Seifert, won diamond solo against five matadores.
4—Her. Jessen, made high play of 140 points.
5—A. R. Phillips, won club tourne against five matadores.
6—B. Meuser, won the association prize.

The skat players of Chicago ought not to miss today's league tournament at the Lincoln Turner hall, at which our good natured friend, George Gellert, acts as skatmeister. The participants will be asked to vote upon questions submitted by the board referring to the annulment of membership fees.

National Director Lauer, accompanied by League Director Mueller, left for Peoria to meet with their various local committees and also to make proper hotel accommodations for the host of Chicago skat onkels, of whom over 750 are reported to make the trip on June 12.

We regret to announce that National Director A. R. Brandt, owing to his ill health, will not be again a candidate for reelection to succeed himself. Mr. Brandt has in the last twenty years occupied exalted positions in the national as well as local bodies, and through his honesty and faithfulness and loyalty to the game has made for himself an endless number of friends, who will sadly miss him within its councils.

PURPLE DEFEATS ARMOUR NINE IN ELEVEN INNINGS

Ties Score by Rally in Ninth and Lands 6-5 Victory in Overtime Frame.

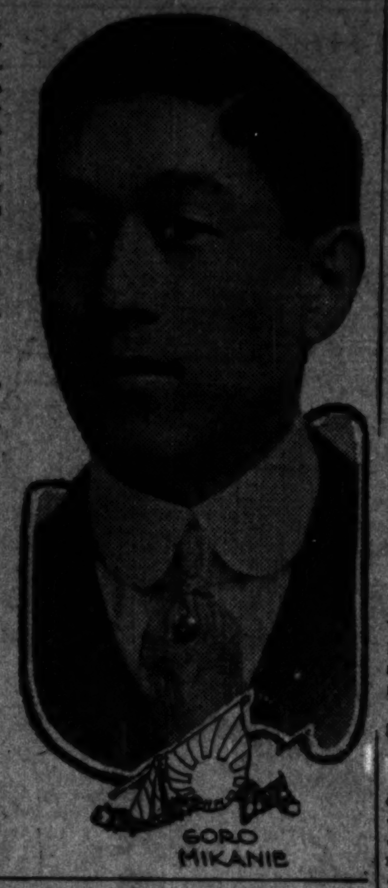
Japanese Baseball Player Captain of College Team.



GALESBURG, Ill., April 10.—[Special.]—Goro Mikanie, recently elected captain of the Knox college baseball team, is one of the most popular men of that institution. Mikanie entered Knox college as a member of the class of 1917. When the call for baseball was given "Mike" was one of the first to report. He had no trouble in cinching a regular position on the team. He played shortstop throughout the season and was generally recognized as one of the fastest infielders in the middle west. This season he expects to retain his old position and to pitch a little if the necessity arises.

Mikanie was born in Kofu, Japan. He played baseball in the grammar grades. Upon entering high school he became a catcher and was backstop for two years. During his last year he did most of the twirling.

Later Mikanie was enrolled at Waseda university, the largest private university of the empire. During his first three years he played in the outfield, two years as a left fielder and the third as a center fielder. He played shortstop during his senior year.

In 1911 Mikanie came to this country with the Waseda university team at the invitation of the University of Chicago and toured the country for over four months.

Mikanie graduated from Waseda in 1912. He came to this country again in 1913 and went directly to Galesburg, where he entered Knox college as a special student.

BUTLERS BEATEN BY MAROONS, 6-3

Early Jump Gives Chicago Commanding Lead.

BY MAROON.

The University of Chicago ball team ran up a lead on De Lave in the early innings, defeating the Butler Bros. nine in an interesting game yesterday on Stagg field, 6 to 3. The Butler pitcher was retired in the fifth, after the Maroons had hit him consistently. Cavin's double, Gray's triple, and George's homer were big factors in the Maroon victory. Des Jardien will pitch in the game against the Cubs on Monday. Shull also is being pointed for the Maroon's first big game. Score:

RECORD ENTRY IN STATE PIN MEET

State bowling promoters put in a busy day counting up the final entries to the eighteenth annual tournament of the Illinois Bowling association tournament yesterday, making the prediction late last night that last year's record would be beaten by a good sized margin. The I. B. A. meet drew 406 clubs a year ago. The late figures yesterday showed 365 five-man teams in Secretary Jake Mueller's hands, with a large number of clubs promised from outside points still missing.

For a time Secretary Mueller predicted that a entry this year would reach 450 clubs, but modified it to about 425 last night.

The tournament will open on Saturday, April 24, at the Randolph alleys, running for twenty-two days, May 14 being set as the final date. The McCormick players, who comprise the Harvester league, will have the second squad on the opening night, while some of the late arrivals today will probably be put to work on the first shift.

Workmen will replane the ten alleys on the top floor, following the usual custom, the lower floor being resurfaced, as the alley there were planed last fall. New pins will be given every third squad of five-man teams, 160 sets having arrived last week and being prepared for the bowlers.

MANY ATHLETES PAY RESPECTS TO MAYOR ELECT

William Hale Thompson Guest of Honor at the Sportsmen's Club.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

A mixed program with boxing and wrestling contests as the main attractions featured the celebration given by the Sportsmen's Club of America last night in honor of William Hale Thompson's election as mayor of Chicago.

Fully 1,000 persons taxed the capacity of the gymnasium, while as many more were refused admittance. After a lengthy program the mayor-elect arrived on the scene and pandemonium reigned for fully five minutes when Mr. Thompson stepped on the platform to deliver a short address.

Pleads for the Athletes.

"I was one of the organizers of this club," Mr. Thompson said, "and it was organized to give the poor athlete a chance to rub shoulders with the rich man in any kind of contest. The ideals of the club are to promote all branches of athletic endeavor, especially among the children of Chicago.

"If we have to go to war we don't want to send a regiment on the field like the one which recently left London. This regiment was composed of small men, hardly 5 feet 7 inches in stature, and but few of them weighed over 150 pounds. It is for this end that I believe the younger generation should be encouraged in athletic work, and as long as I am mayor of Chicago and am connected with this club I intend to do everything I can to develop a race which will be the superior of any in the world."

Cheers for Thompson.

When he had finished his address he was carried around the gymnasium on the shoulders of his admirers. If last night's program is an example of what is to be held every week at the new Michigan avenue club its quarters either will have to be enlarged or admittance obtained by invitation only.

Songs, violin solos, gymnastic exhibitions on the high horse and parallel bars, dancing, club swinging, and other sorts of entertainment furnished by the best talent in Chicago completed the program.

VETERAN 'PEDS' SEEK MATCH

Dan O'Leary and Henry Schmehl, whose combined ages total 135 years, have issued a challenge to any team of the same age wishing to walk 500 miles or less. The local hikers are even willing to concede a few years to get a bit of competition. The challenge is open to as many teams as wish to accept it. The proposition carries with it a side bet and a percentage of the gate receipts to the winner. O'Leary, who is 72 years old, hopes that arrangements can be made for the walk in Chicago, but he is willing to go elsewhere.

Gossip for Whist Players.

The game was saved by the beautiful play of north at trick six.

North had no doubt that the ten of hearts led by west was a singleton and hoped that the discard of one diamond would do west no good. Any card but the five of hearts would have given west another trick and the contract, game, and rubber.

At trick nine west played the low diamond hoping the king in the north hand might be alone.

Readers will find it interesting to play this deal and have north lead any card but the five of hearts at trick six.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—Please cite the rules governing the following plays in a game of two-handed cribbage:

1. When and by which player is a "go" taken and how many points can he score on a go?

2. What is the "last card"? How many points are scored for "last card"?

3. What is "end hole"? How many points are scored for end hole?

4. In a two hand game how many points can be scored on the following play: "A" plays a two spot [his last card] and says 22; "B" [who has a card left] plays a four spot and says 26, and counts one point for a "go," and "B" then plays his remaining card, an ace, and says 27, and counts one point for a "go" and one point for last card, a total of three points after "A" has played his last card. Is "B" correct? F. J. D.

Ans.—A player scores "go" when his adversary cannot play a card without making the count more than 31.

A "go" scores one point.

"Last card" is the last card played in pegging. It counts one point.

"End hole" is the same as a "go."

In the fourth case which you cite "B" was entitled to one point for last card. There was no "go."

STAR SWIMMERS SEEKING TITLES IN LOCAL TANKS

New York A. C. Sending Team for Four National A. A. U. Championships.

With the New York A. C. sending its full team and with the cream of the local talent entered, arrangements yesterday were completed for the staging of four National A. A. U. championship swimming events to be decided in the C. A. A. and I. A. C. pools this week. In addition the official list of entries for the contests were announced.

On Wednesday night the fifty yard swim and 200 yard breast stroke will be decided in the Cherry Circle pool. On the following night the 100 yard swim and 400 yard relay race will be held in the tricolor club pool, and on Friday night the water polo championship trials which will be held at noon of the same day, will be decided.

50 yard swim—P. McGillivray, Hebner, Raithel, I. A. C.; Mallen, Hussagh, Small, Rawleigh, C. A. A.; Ramme, Bollmer, N. Y. A. C.

200 yard breast stroke—McDermott, I. A. C.; Smith, Taylor, C. A. A.; Herbert Taylor, University of Wisconsin; Chapman, University of Illinois.

100 yard swim—Raithel, P. McGillivray, Hebner, I. A. C.; Mallen, C. A. A.; Ramme, Bollmer, N. Y. A. C.

400 yard relay, four men each to swim 100 yards—Raithel, P. McGillivray, Hebner, Vosburgh, I. A. C.; Mallen, Hussagh, Small, Rawleigh, C. A. A.; Ramme, Bollmer, Merich, Wheatley, O'Sullivan, N. Y. A. C.

Not what we say—
We say that the new Marmon "41" is exceptional in performance.
Practically every other automobile manufacturer "says" the same about his car.
No claim we can make on paper for this car can surpass the claim of the maker of the $1500 or $2000 car.
At this stage of the art of motor car building, all cars are comfortable—more or less. All cars are hill climbers—more or less. All cars are powerful or reliable or easy to handle in varying degrees.
No words in the English language can explain varying shades of comfort or degrees of mechanical excellence, but there is one definite, tangible, standard of comparison—actual performance.
So in this car it is not a matter of what we say—
But what we do!
The Marmon "41" must tell you its own story—in terms of miles of wonderful motoring performance—in expressions of adverse road conditions easily overcome.

Resolutions
Unanimously passed this spring by one wise motor car owner who was dissatisfied with his last year's car
A Motor Car Owner being Dissatisfied with last year's Motor Car Experience, called a Conference with Himself to Determine if Possible the Reason.
After duly Considering the question, he Found the Reason and passed the following set of Resolutions Unanimously. The resolutions explain the Reason.
"WHEREAS, in 1914 I started out to sell the automobile manufacturers my old car for as high a price as I could get, and take therefor the car on which I received the best trade; and "WHEREAS, the car I obtained proved unsatisfactory.
"Therefore, be it resolved, that in 1915 I will forget that I own a car that I want to sell or exchange,
"And be it further resolved, that I am going out first to buy the best car I can find and then sell my old car for the most I can get for it, or let the manufacturer do it for me,
"And be it further resolved, that I will never again go into the automobile selling business in competition with 250 manufacturers and 600,000 owners of old cars. I find that my motor car happiness lies in buying well and not in selling badly."
If his search is thorough he will visit us and look at the three Chalmers models—the New Six-40 at $1400, the Master Six-54 at $2400 and most of all, the Light Six-48 at $1650.

MUCH USED GOLF LINKS TRIES REGISTRY PLAN

Players at Jackson Park Can Now Reserve Time in Advance.

SUNDAY FANS ROILED.

BY FREDERICK DONAGHEY.

All went well yesterday with the new registry system of teeing off at the Jackson park golf course, where the season is started earlier and continued later than in any other place north of the Mason and Dixon line. However, even the hopeful and patient officials of this, the greatest public golf course in the United States, admitted that the morning-long rain was all against a fair test of the new device for preventing Saturday, Sunday, and holiday congestion.

Today, with the right weather, will provide a better trial of the practicability of the scheme, for the registry contains entries for 288 prospective Sunday players, while as many more may be accommodated alternatingly under the old plan of standing in line and drawing numbers.

Foursomes for Busy Days.

Sixteen players—four sets of four ball or foursome players—are, in the comprehension of the new scheme, to be accommodated every ten minutes from dawn to 5 o'clock p. m. Two ball and three ball matches are to be discouraged on Saturdays, Sundays, and such special days as seem to warrant the use of the registry because of expected crowds.

The registered fours are started from the first tee at five minute intervals; the fours who draw numbers are started half way in each interval. Nobody is permitted to register more than once for any one day; but there is no rule against registered players also taking a chance for a second game by drawing numbers.

Objections to Plan Cited.

The advantage, of course, lies entirely with the forehanded golfers who are able to make early registry—and here comes in the sole criticism of the scheme so far heard. Scores of Jackson park golfers are able to play Sundays only, and their protest is to the effect that, unable to get out to register any other day, they are unable to avail themselves of the advantages supposed to belong to the new plan, and are compelled to go out to the park before dawn Sundays in order to draw numbers, as in the past, with their chances of playing cut in half through the 288 reservations by registry.

There is a large measure of merit in their attitude toward the new system, as was proved by the condition of the registry for next Saturday and Sunday as early as 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. More than 200 were at that time registered for next Saturday, and nearly 200 for next Sunday. When this morning the Sunday only players reach the park and seek to register, they will find the registry filled, while the book for Sunday, April 25, will not be opened until next Sunday morning.

Sunday Only Players Slighted.

"I admit," said one of the golf course officers, "that the plight of the Sunday only players was not thought of when we worked out the registry ideal; but, even while we must admit the justice of it from their viewpoint, I still think that the new plan works for the greatest good of the greatest number.

It was not at all uncommon last summer to find as many as 800 golfers assembled at the shelter house as early as 3 o'clock Sunday morning. Those who resided within reasonable distance of Jackson park could, of course, make a calculation as to when their numbers would be reached, and, going home to sleep, could guide their return accordingly; but to the great majority the crowded condition of the course Sundays was a physical handicap.

If It Doesn't Work, Drop It.

"Our thought was to guarantee to at least 288 players each Sunday a chance to play, and thereby, perhaps, to cut down by approximately that number the early morning applicants for numbers. Of course there is nothing to prevent thousands from assembling to draw the in-between chances to play, even though the number of such chances has been reduced one-half by the new system. If the new plan does not work as well as we hoped, we shall drop it, and, pending a fresh device promising well, go back to the old way of doing things."

Some idea of the problem at the Jackson park course may be gained when it is explained that more than 3,000 players, men and women, are locker holders in the shelter house. This is ten times the number of members of any of the most populous of the country clubs and golf organizations which maintain eighteen hole courses in the middle west.

More Than $3,000 Golfers.

The 3,000 locker holders do not by any means represent the total number of players using with more or less regularity the two Jackson park courses. Uncounted hundreds of others play there from time to time, carrying their clubs and toggery to and from the course. Theoretically, all locker holders are frequent players, and there is a south park commission rule which denies the use of a locker to anybody playing less frequently than once a week.

No other golf course in the country—or, so far as the records show, in the world—is so much used as the long one at Jackson park. Much of the work of upkeep and repair in the season is done at night. It is, in the quality of "quick recovery," without a rival in the northern states. It is the first of the courses in the Chicago neighborhood to become usable at the end of the winter and the last to give way in the late autumn.

Few changes are made on this course from year to year. Thus, apart from a slight deepening of the few traps, there has been no addition to the hazards in the last three years. The players who look with contempt upon what they term "cinch 80," which is bogey [Jackson park golfers, even in the city championship tournament, never reckon by par] are loud in their demands for more hazards; but the prowess of the average players is kept steadily in mind and the fifty or more regulars who play the long course between 70 and 75 are amiably bidden to keep on trying for a better score.

Local Golf Season Opens at Calumet Country Club

CALUMET Country club golfers ushered in the season yesterday with the qualifying round of their annual Ridge tournament, in which which C. B. Cory, veteran of many an important national tournament, led the field of sixty players. It was the first regularly scheduled competitive event to be held over a local course this year.

Ideal weather conditions contributed to the low scoring, which seemed to be more the rule than the exception. Cory had a card of 72, which led the score of C. F. Grimes, the western junior champion and a winner of last year's ridge tournament, by one stroke. Cory showed the advantage of winter practice, having been a contender in some of the southern tournaments during the cold season.

Four flights of eight each qualified. As an evidence of the great golf played for so early in the season the top score to get in the four flights was 89. Qualifying scores follow:

KAMMERER WINS AT LOCAL TRAPS

Shooting from twenty-one yards, B. L. Kammerer yesterday won the 100 bird monthly distance handicap shoot of the Riverside Gun club with a total score of 88. J. A. Schultz, who shot from twenty yards, was second with a count of 86, and J. H. McDougal, who stood on the eighteen yard mark, landed in third place with 85.

In addition to winning the feature contest Kammerer tied for honors in the second and third events. In the second contest, at twenty-five targets from sixteen yards, Kammerer tied with W. Einfeldt with a score of 24, and in the closing match, at fifteen targets from sixteen yards, he shared first place with E. M. Collis. Each turned in a score of 14. Scores:

100 targets, distance handicap—B. L. Kammerer, 21 yards, 88; J. A. Schultz, 20 yards, 86; J. B. McDougal, 18 yards, 85; H. Templeton, 18 yards, 81; H. J. Allen, 16 yards, 80; G. BIG RECEPTION GIVEN WILLARD IN NEW YORK.

New York, April 10.—[Special.]—No conquering hero, from Hannibal down to Napoleon, ever received a heartier greeting than did Jess Willard when he stepped off the train from Philadelphia tonight. He had scarcely placed his feet on the platform when the crowd caught sight of his towering form and yelled "There's Willard! There's the man who knocked out Jack Johnson and brought back the title."

The crowd caught only a glimpse of the new champion, for Willard was hurried to a waiting taxicab and with four of his sparring partners was whisked away at a fast clip to the St. Nicholas rink, where he was due to show his skill at boxing and give an exhibition of wrestling at 1 o'clock.

In reply to a question whether he would accept any challenges from Jim Coffey, Al Reich, or "Gunboat" Smith, Willard said:

"I am in the hands of my managers. Whatever they decide is best for me I will do. But I do not believe that I will enter the ring again for at least a year. My managers propose to make a tour of the world with me."

OAK PK. HIGH RUN TO MOORE

Weston Moore, a junior with a handicap of two minutes, yesterday won the annual Oak Park High school cross country run, leading a field of forty-two in the race of three and one-fourth miles. Moore's net time was 19:28. The victory gave him possession of the silver cup hung up for the event for one year.

Second place went to Morton Madsen, another two minute man, who finished in 1931. Madsen is a freshman. One second behind was Walter Bradshaw, a sophomore. His handicap was 1:15. Forrest Barr, a senior, who won the run last year, made the best time, starting from scratch and finishing in 18:40 2-5. He landed fourth place. Ralph Doran, with a thirty-second allowance, was fifth. The start was made from Phipps field, and the runners finished at the same place.

PLAYERS CALL BIG FIGHT FAKE

St. Louis Feds, Who Trained at Havana, Believe Johnson Was Bought Off.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Since the day of the memorable battle between Jess Willard and Jack Johnson, the result of which restored the heavyweight title to the white race, many persons have maintained the fight was a "frame," but there is a little band of ball players who trained in Havana previous to the mill who assert Johnson did not train properly. They also claim they heard several rumors which led them to believe the negro champion had been bought.

This aggregation of ball players is the St. Louis Federal league team, which left Havana twenty-five minutes before the fight started. Manager Fielder Jones, officers of the club, and members of the team all believe the mill was fixed. During their spare time the players visited Johnson at his training quarters and his indifference toward the battle substantiated the rumors they heard about Havana.

Refuse to Be Quoted.

Short talks with a number of the players and with the secretary of the team yesterday at Weeghman park gave rise to the belief that Johnson had been bought off by the syndicate which promoted the mill. Some of the players said they had overheard conversations among the promoters and the managers of the fighters which led them to believe the fight was not on the level.

None of the players wanted to be quoted, but because of their experience in all branches of athletics, their opinions are worthy of consideration.

Joie Ray Boxing Star.

Displaying a doctor's certificate stating he is in the best of physical condition, Joie Ray, the star middle distance runner of the Illinois A. C., was the star attraction in the amateur bouts at the Forbes gymnasium, where he worked his way into the finals in the 125 pound division. Ray showed a lot of skill as a boxer, and his ability to hit won the applause of the large crowd. Ray will meet Pete O'Donnell in the final contest next Saturday at the same place.

Walter Genaro, a winner in previous tourneys in the lightweight class, met with an unexpected defeat by Ed Gottal. Tom Nolan and Johnny King, a pair of welterweights, put up such a rattling bout the judges were unable to determine the winner, and they will mix again Saturday. In the other bouts Jack Bailey won from Otto Wolf and Frank Mollitor defeated Jim Curley.

Gilmore to Box Walters.

Fred Gilmore and Manager Doc Krone returned from Detroit, where Fred boxed a ten round draw with Dave Daniels Friday night. Gilmore's next fight will be with Billy Walters, the ex-naval station fighter. Unless some club thinks well enough of the bout to bid for it, the contest will be staged in private within two weeks.

Charley White and Manager Nate Lewis claim Jimmy Duffy took a fifteen count in the first round of his ten session bout with Charley in Buffalo last Thursday. The local lightweight and his manager returned yesterday.

"The referee was rattled," Lewis said. "After Duffy was down in the first round for fully six seconds the arbiter started to tell off the count. Charley won all the way, and the report he was knocked down is untrue. He slipped to his knees, but was on his feet before the official started to count."

Jimmy Walsh and Leo Grover, local 130 pounders, will box ten rounds in private today.

Fighting Spirit Makes Catcher of Bresnahan, Once a Pitcher.

Manager Roger Bresnahan is presented to Chicago fans in a picture reproduced by rotogravure process, which appears as a supplement in another part of the paper.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

THAT same fighting spirit which made Roger Bresnahan manager of the Cubs was the compelling cause of his transformation from a pitcher into a catcher. Some of you remember that Roger used to play the outfield and has "pinched" at third base, but those whose memories go back sixteen years to the time when he used to pitch for the cubs are comparatively few.

Bresnahan's conversion from the slab to the mask happened in 1901, while he was a member of that scrappy Baltimore American league team which, under the leadership of John McGraw, made Ban Johnson so much trouble and demonstrated for the second time that Baltimore is not a major league city.

Roger's Start as Catcher.

The Orioles had only two catchers, Robinson and Lattimer. One day, when Robby was bunged up with a broken finger and Tacks' throwing arm was so sore he could not get the ball to second base in two throws, it came Bresnahan's turn to pitch. As soon as a man reached first base he would immediately steal second and third on Lattimer's sore wing. Twice the backstop hit Umpire Joe Cantillon in the back with pegs to second. That compelled the runners to go back to first, so McGraw ordered Tacks to try to hit the umpire every time a runner started to steal. Although everybody else was making a joke of it, Roger became so peeved that he roiled his manager with his kicks about Lattimer. Whereupon McGraw told Bresnahan that if he didn't like it he could go behind the bat himself and see if he could do any better.

Roger threw down his pitcher's glove, buckled himself into Lattimer's armor, and proceeded to call McGraw's bluff. Joe McGinnity was sent to the slab without warming up at all, and Roger caught the rest of that game without ever having seen the inside of a mask before in his life. This convinced McGraw that Bresnahan's fighting spirit was too healthy to be wasted on the bench except once or twice a week, and he advised the young man to try something besides pitching.

Joined Giants in 1902.

When McGraw sold out the Baltimore club to the late John T. Brush in the middle of the season of 1902 Bresnahan went to the Giants along with his manager. The New Yorkers then were a joke, and Bresnahan played all over the Polo grounds the rest of that year. In the next few seasons Roger devoted his energies and endeavors to third basing and center fielding for the Giants, but McGraw got shorthanded on catchers again and Bresnahan finally donned the mask for good.

While he was still with McGraw, Bresnahan designed and had made for him the first pair of shin guards ever worn by a baseball catcher. At the time Roger explained his new idea to me he wound up with the remark: "They'll all be kidding me about my tender shins at first, but inside of two years all the catchers will be wearing them." They did, and they were.

Makes Good as Manager.

Bresnahan remained with the Giants until the winter before the season of 1909, when St. Louis obtained him by trade to manage the Cardinals. While with the Mound city aggregation Roger made much out of little material and was recognized by those who knew as a manager who got results. But the death of M. Stanley Robison left the St. Louis club in the hands of the first woman magnate in major league history, and not in overabundant funds. Some of Bresnahan's ideas did not parallel some of the feminine fancies of Mrs. Britton, and he was released unconditionally following the season of 1912, while his managerial contract still had several years to run.

The story of how that difficulty with the St. Louis club was compromised by Bresnahan's signing with the Cubs is too recent to have been forgotten, but it produced an incident which established Roger's claim to being the first major leaguer to sign a long term contract on a hotel menu card.

Signs Contract on Menu Card.

While Bresnahan's suit to establish the validity of his St. Louis contract was being ground through the slow mills of justice, C. W. Murphy, then president of the club of which he now is phantom owner, encountered Roger in Cincinnati. The Cub magnate invited the discarded manager to sup with him at the Sinton, and while inhaling their provender they discussed Bresnahan's case in detail.

At the finish Murphy handed Roger the menu card and suggested that he write out on the back of it the terms of a contract which he would be willing to sign to play with the Cubs. Bresnahan inscribed an abbreviated contract on the back of the card, leaving a blank space for the salary. Murphy read it through, then handed it back with the request to fill in the blank space with figures. Bresnahan wrote in a salary for three years which he imagined would close the incident and leave him free to pursue the St. Louis club in the courts. Murphy glanced at it again and said, "Sign it, Roger." Roger did. Murphy attached his signature and pocketed the soup to nuts lineup. Next day he sent Bresnahan a copy of the contract in regular baseball form.

That was how Bresnahan came back to Chicago after an absence of thirteen years. His first engagement on the west side was in 1899 and 1900 under the managements of Tom Burns and Tom Loftus, both of whom have since been given unconditional releases by Father Time. Bresnahan originally came to Chicago from the Washington club, then a member of the National league, with which he broke into baseball as a slabman.

Holds Out on Senators.

He joined the Senators in the spring of 1897 and made so good, in his own estimation at least, that he held out the following season, refusing to sign the contract Washington offered him. Instead he pitched for an independent team in Manistee, Mich., and attracted enough attention to be noticed across the lake by the Chicago club, which negotiated successfully for him.

Bresnahan broke into the big show directly from the lots of Toledo, his native town, without any minor league experience. That was nearly twenty years ago, when there weren't many minors, and in their places were a lot of strong independent teams playing individually without organization into leagues.

Not Born in Ireland.

Perhaps because of his belligerent attitude on the diamond Roger has been generally credited with being a native of Ireland, but that belief is erroneous. The Cub manager has no objection to dissemination of the aforesaid misinformation, but his own regard for the truth compels him to admit he was born a long, long way from Tipperary. In fact, his first holler could be heard in the house in which he now resides in Toledo, as he was born only a block away. The date of that first yell was June 11, 1880, and it was not provoked by an umpire's bum decision, but was merly a vociferous inquiry as to the location of the dining car.

SOCCER LEAGUE LEADERS TO PLAY OFF TIE TODAY.

McDuffs and Bricklayers will meet this afternoon at Forty-eighth avenue and Sixteenth street in the playoff of their tie in the second round for the Peter J. Peel soccer trophy. They met on Dec. 6 on the same ground, each side scoring two goals. This spring they have met twice in the local league series and each has won one game, so that additional interest centers in today's struggle. The winner will go into the semi-finals, the other teams being Joliet, Pullman, and Western Electrics.

Three league games are carded as follows:

Hibernians and Mason Park at Forty-seventh avenue and West Lake street, 3:30 p. m.

Washington Heights and Hyde Park Blues at One Hundred and Seventh street and Vincennes avenue.

Calumets and Pullman at Pullman.

Kenwood and Western Electric at Fifty-second street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Lincolns and Campbell Rover Jrs. at Forty-seventh avenue and West Lake street, 2:30 p. m.

BOXERS OF PAST GIVEN BIG BOOST

Gilmore Says Mace or Fitz Could Beat Willard Under the Old Rules.

BY HARRY GILMORE.
[Veteran Boxing Instructor.]

Jem Mace or Bob Fitzsimmons, when in their prime, could have defeated either Jess Willard or Jack Johnson if the bout was held under the old prize ring rules with bare knuckles as the maulies. The reason is that the prize ring rules gave many opportunities for a tricky, shifty man which are not possible under the Marquis of Queensberry code.

My principal reason for this opinion is that battles under prize ring rules were fought on the turf and the boxers wore spiked shoes to keep from slipping. Now with spiked shoes you had to pick up your feet when you wanted to step around. This would prove tiresome for fellows as big as Willard and Johnson. Mace, in particular, used to raise his forward foot high in attacking and then stamp it down as he set himself to deliver a punch.

Trouble in Footwork.

I don't think Willard or Johnson could shift around. Their footwork is more of a shuffle and with spikes they would trip themselves. Of course they would learn to use spikes, but I think their advantage in weight would be offset by smaller men who were smart and shifty. You used to hear of more bouts in which the smaller man won in the old days than you do now. Willard is the biggest man who ever held the championship under the Queensberry code. His size and strength make him formidable.

In the old days we used to figure on wearing out an opponent sometimes more by our ring tactics than by the actual blows in the ring. You know every time a man went down it constituted a round. You could not go down without being hit, for that was called a foul, but you could go down if you were tapped or pushed. So fellows like Mace or Fitz would have these giants steaming and puffing chasing them. As soon as they got into close quarters they could go down after blocking a blow. And they would dart in and out with their speed until the big fellows were all tired out.

Willard May Improve.

Under present rules I predict that Willard will hold the title longer than any of his predecessors. He is only 27 years old and I think he will be better at 30 than he is now. He has taken the best of care of himself and now he can have the best of everything he is bound to get more strength. Furthermore, he will develop into a better boxer as the result of his increased confidence after defeating Johnson.

At first I thought the battle might be fixed, but now I am sure Willard won because he was the better man and in better physical condition. My advice to Willard is to make all the money he can while he is titleholder. He should get as clever as possible by boxing with clever men in his practice. With his good punch along with more cleverness he will be unbeatable.

Willard impresses me as the right sort of fellow by showing his wife and children so much attention. He is not like some former champions, who neglected their loved ones after making their success. He has a good adviser in Tom Jones, who has handled three champions in his time, and Jones should be given due credit for his part in the making of Willard.

CAMPI VICTOR ON POINTS.

New York, April 10.—Eddie Campi of California outpointed Jimmy Murray of New York in a ten round bout here tonight. The westerner was too clever for the local boy. Campi weighed 122 pounds and Murray 118½.

Bill to Steve.

MEMPHIS, 10, April 10.—Steve. Well Steve we will be oppening up the season up next Wed. and that old bell cant ring to soon to suite me and the sooner that old bell rings but it cant ring to soon. Well Steve I cant tell yet weather I will be in the game or not when the season oppens up on acct. of this here horse shoe stiff of a Williams been geting a hole lot of base hits and he must of shut his eyes or how could he hit a ball the way he swings at them and I guess Bresnahan knows hes lucky to be geting any hits but will keep him in the game as long is his luck last but it cant last for ever Steve and as soon is he beggins hiting in his reglar stride and walking back and 4th bet. the bench and the plate and back then I will get in there and the minut I get in there and get a show they wont never get me out of there again because I dont need no horse shoe to hit that old pill.

Well Steve I got a letter from Gussy and her old mans sick and not feeling good and come find to his bed and she says it may be just the la grip but the Dr. says he cant tell yet and it may be some thing worse than that tyford or some thing and if its tyford it should ought to go pretty hard with a old man like on acct. of how old he is but the Dr. cant tell 1 way or the other yet a wile but she will write and leave me know if its any thing serious so as I can quite the club and come home. Well Steve I hope its only the la grip the old mans got and not no tyford because suppse he should die or some thing and think how Gussy would feel. The old mans got a pretty good bunch of money lade up and of corse theys the brewry to besides the rest of his money and the house hes got and theys only the 2 childern Gussy and her bro. to get a hold of the property if some thing should hapen to the old man and I and Gussy of corse would share ½ the property or what ever was left to her in the will and probly he would leave it just ½ and ½ and then I would half to quite base ball and take hold of the brewry on acct. of her kid brothers to young to a tend to business but you can bet I would make things hum supose I was gave charg of the brewry and I would make it pay twict as much is the old man ever got out from it because when a man gets as old is him you get to be a old foggy and dont know nothing a bout new busness methods. The young men is the ones that pushs a head now days eh Steve.

Williams must have shot his eyes or how could he hit a ball the way he swings.

Well Steve it would be pretty soft for me supose the old man was to say in his will that I was to take charg of the brewry and I would apoint Guseys bro. vice pres. or some thing so as he wouldent have no kick comeing and then I would make things hum and I bet I could sell the beer to evry place in Chi. on acct. of me being strong with the fans and may be I would put my name on the brewry and call the beer after my name and they wouldent be nothin to it.

But I hope the old mans O. K. and hasent got nothing only the la grip only a man go to think a bout them things in the case of what might hapen and be perpared for what might hapen and I wisht I and him hadent of had that quarl before I went south only of corse you couldent hardly call it a real quarl but just a little brall and besides he shouldent ought to let nothing like that enter fear bet. he and Gussy because she dident have nothing to do with I and he quarling and it wouldent be fare to her to cut some thing off of her share because I and him had a few words and I dident mean nothing I says to him and it was all on the spare of the minut.

But I guess they aint no danger of he cutting Gussy out because she and him is grate old pals and they wasent nothing he wouldent do for her. But of corse they aint no danger of him dying and its probly nothing but the la grip only it seems queer a man like he would come down with the la grip at this time of yr. when hes been well all winter and got nothin the matter with him. But tyford strikes on to a man when you aint looking for it and its libel to come any time with out no reason but I hope hes O. K. and not got no tyford or nothing bad but just may be a bad cold. In the case some thing should happen I would ask Bresnahan to leave me go home tonight and if he says no I would say take your ball club and jump in Mich. lake because Im threw and he would oppen his mouth eh Steve because he would think Id went crazy and was throwing my bread and buter on the water because of corse he wouldent know nothing a bout what the old mans got. O you brewry.

Well Steve I will let you know if any thing hapens to Gussys old man but I hope its nothin serius and just a bad cold and he will probly get well and O. K. in a little wile.

Well Steve wear pretty near threw with the trip and we will be home Mon. and play some collige boys a game but I guess they aint no chanct for me to get in there even in to a collige game with this here Williams haveing all that luck and if I was as lucky is him I would quite playing ball and go in to some busness a brewry or some thing eh Steve. O you brewry. But I guess her old man will come out O. K. and hes just got may be a bad cold or a tutch of Pumona or some thing. I will let you know as soon is I hear some thing.

GAME BATTLE EARNS TITLE FOR WILLARD

Conqueror of Johnson Should Prove Popular Ring Champion.

REIGN OF NEGRO ENDS.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

After nearly seven years of domination by a member of the negro race the sport of pugilism once more has come into its own and placed a white man on the world's heavyweight championship pedestal. The man who accepted the greatest opportunity that ever was offered any white fighter since the time of the memorable battle between John L. Sullivan and James J. Corbett at New Orleans on Sept. 7, 1892, is Jess Willard, Kansas plainsman, who prefers the less dignified term of cowboy.

With Willard's great victory in the ring inclosed by the race track at Havana, Cuba, last Monday there came the pugilistic demise of Jack Johnson, who all must concede was the greatest heavyweight of his color that ever wielded a padded mitt. In defeat no one can take away the credit that belongs to the black man, for as a ring man his accomplishments formed a record which will go down in the history of the sport as wonderful.

Johnson Only Negro Champion.

Johnson was the first negro fighter ever to hold the world's championship, and to make his accomplishment more impressive he held the crown longer than any other titleholder since glove fighting came into vogue in the time of the famous John L. Sullivan. To be champion for nearly seven years even in these times of mediocre boxing material is some achievement. The honor of doing that belongs to Johnson alone.

Willard is deserving of all the praise that can be bestowed on him and there is no reason to doubt that he will get it, for not only has he made himself solid by removing from the arena a negro, but in doing that he brought to an end the reign of a fighter who by conduct outside the ring made himself one of the most unpopular champions the world ever has known.

Barred from United States.

There is no use in going into details as to why Johnson was unpopular, now that he has passed out of the limelight of boxing, except to say he is "in bad" to such an extent with the government that it is after him.

So we'll let it go with "De mortuis nil nisi bonum," as far as Jack Johnson is concerned.

Jess Willard as champion promises to be popular, although those who know the game unwillingly concede that he does not possess the class of many of the titleholders before him. He is a clean cut, clean living giant, who has gained his spurs mainly by the great strength within his mammoth frame. As a boxer he is far from classed with the negro he dethroned in Havana. He lacks the speed of Johnson, and as a ring general he could not for a moment be compared with such men as Bob Fitzsimmons or Jim Jeffries.

Willard a Game Fighter.

But this big cowboy has one thing that is essential, and especially so in view of his lack of the other qualities. He has a stout heart and gameness is his middle name. He showed his gameness to the satisfaction of everybody last Monday, for few men have taken a lacing like that meted out by Johnson for twenty-two rounds without withering into defeat. Willard learned for the first time in his life what real punishment in a battle means, but never once did he show anything that indicated a quitting streak. He overcame all that the negro had to offer in strength and a strong right handed punch and demonstrated once more that youth must be served.

Nearly all of the ring experts in the country had doped out the battle along the proper lines before it was fought. They said that if the fight was a long one Johnson would surely be the loser, and that prediction was fulfilled. They figured that Johnson would set a hot early pace and deliver a world of punishment to his giant opponent. If Willard proved game and strong enough to assimilate that punishment without falling his chances of turning the tide and winning would be greatly increased, for the negro, long past his prime, would be sure to slow up and weaken. The moment Johnson began to weaken was the signal for the white man to make his spurt, and that is just what Willard did.

Cablegram Helps Willard.

There is an interesting feature in the method of attack employed by the new champion. He used only two punches throughout the entire fight and used them effectively, although the negro by his cleverness made him miss with them often in the early rounds. Those punches were a straight left to the head and a right hand wallop to the heart.

While it is not known definitely just why Willard picked out this method of offense, it is pretty certain that a pair of Chicago friends were responsible for it. These friends are Harry Forbes, former bantamweight champion, and Kid Howard, who conduct a boxing gymnasium. When Willard first landed in Chicago a few years ago, a crude, unknowing fighter, Forbes took an interest in him and spent a lot of time showing him the rudiments of the boxing game. Willard was an apt pupil and made good progress and Forbes predicted a great future for him.

On Sunday, the day before the battle which made Willard the world's champion, the cowboy received the following cablegram in his camp at Havana:

"Left to head and right to heart and best wishes."

This cablegram was signed Kid Howard and Harry Forbe

"IF you could know no other paintings, what twenty would you choose to know above all others?"

This question was put to the "average citizen" by art dealers in various parts of the country. The votes fell to the pictures enumerated below. It is notable that all of them represent the best there is in art, old and new.

"THE BROKEN PITCHER" was painted by Greuze, a Frenchman born in 1725 of humble parentage. In his youth Greuze tried to preach with his brush, in consequence of which he was hailed as a prophet. Later he was scored on a charge of immorality in painting, due to his talent of portraying that tender, ephemeral beauty which is the subtle essence of youth. His marriage was an unhappy one; his creative ability declined; he lost his friends and admirers and died in poverty.

"The Sistine Madonna" was painted by Raphael for the Benedictine monks, and now hangs in the Dresden gallery. It is a group of the Virgin and child, St. Sixtus, St. Barbara, and two cherubs.

"Phœbus and Aurora," painted by Guido Reni, represents Aurora strewing flowers before the golden chariot of the sun, which is surrounded by the dancing hours.

"The Last Supper," by Leonardo da Vinci, is the classical idea of that most touching event in the life of Christ.

"The Gleaners," by Francois Millet, is the idealized symbol of the humble workers who follow the harvesting, grateful for what is left by the lords of the land.

"The Horse Fair," by Rosa Bonheur, is the only picture by a woman to be chosen among the famous score.

"The Age of the Innocence," is by Sir Joshua Reynolds, the most famous of the painters of children.

"Baby Stuart," by Anthony Van Dyke, is a fine example of that artist's portraits of the English royal family of Stuarts.

"Mona Lisa," by Leonardo da Vinci, is the much discussed, inscrutable portrait, which was stolen from the Louvre and later restored.

"The Dance of the Nymphs," by Corot, shows a rond of nymphs and satyrs dancing in a glade at sunrise.

"The Windmill" is by Jacob Van Ruysdael, who has given Holland an immortality.

"My Mother," by James McNeil Whistler, the much loved, dignified, and tender portrait of the artist's mother, is the one American picture to gain admittance to the twenty.

"Sir Galahad," by George Watts, represents the legendary hero who sought to recover the Holy Grail.

"Holy Night," by Correggio, is perhaps the most beautiful conception of the nativity.

"The Avenue, Middelharnis, Holland," by Meindert Hoddema, is a landscape famous for its delicate and unusual beauty.

"Madonna of the Chair," or "Madonna de la Sedia," another picture of Raphael's to be voted for was drafted on the end of a barrel.

"The Angelus," another work of Millet's, is done with his usual sympathy with peasant life.

"Christ in the Temple," by Heinrich Hofmann, has a universal appeal because of its subjects and treatment.

"The Immaculate Conception," by the Spanish artist, Murillo, represents the Virgin, star crowned, with her feet upon the moon.

"The Night Watch," by Rembrandt, shows a portion of the civic guards emerging from its barracks at night.

The JOINT in the HARNESS

by Lieut. Col. E. D. Swinton, D.S.O., R.E.

The Gadfly and Its Fleet Put to Naught the Work of the Plumber to Save the Third Army.

“HISS—click—bang!”

The monster pile sank perceptibly as the monkey descended with a thud, and the ooze at its foot quivered in ripples of protest which expanded into circles of silver where they caught the electric light. A gout of oil shooting out on to the mud formed a blot of nacreous color, slowly fading as it spread, and became lost in the film of scum. The steam piledriver rained vicious blows with almost the precision of a Nasmyth hammer, its armored hose steam pipe kicking convulsively in the air in a grotesque dance to the measure.

A young man sat in his shirt sleeves smoking, watch in hand. He was a pleasant looking young fellow—the engineer officer on duty. Every now and again he made a note in a pocketbook as he took the time, for he was timing progress. Slow work it seemed to him, this advance by inches, as each blow produced small visible result in the tenacious silt; but if slow it was sure and not entirely mechanical, for every stroke with its hiss-click-bang seemed to him to say in a tone of cheerful confidence: “So-much-done,” “*so-much-*DONE.” The piledriver regulated the progress.

The piledriving machine was carried on a caterpillar-like truck of many wheels, some of which were clamped to the rails of the bridge. At its rear end was the boiler; in front, supported by long arms, which overhung the end of the bridge by some distance, was the gaunt framework and guide, almost hugging the pile which the monkey above was maltreating. The end of the bridge had reached a point about the center of the river, where the water shoaled on to a sandy mud flat; but from below the many wheeled truck, back to the near bank of the river, the dark stream was swirling against the piles, a man's height underneath.

The river was wide. Even allowing for the deceptive moonlight, it seemed a quarter of a mile from bank to bank. A burnished strip in the bright light of a full moon, it was dotted here and there with eyots that stood out dark. It flowed between steep banks at the bottom of an amphitheater—a complete circle of hills save for the gaps through which ran the river and the railway which had crossed it.

It was again night.

It was not till some time after the mist had risen that the same young engineer, once again on night duty, left the work. Closing his notebook, he picked his way, stepping carefully from sleeper to sleeper, lantern in hand, along the low level bridge, which had grown in length and by now passed the little mud flat. He buttoned his jacket as he went, for, no longer at work, he felt the damp chill of the mist, which was dripping from his hair and mustache. A thickset man, his squatness was exaggerated by his bulging pockets filled with notebooks; from one protruded a footrule. As he passed under the glare at the end of the bridge he smiled. Of a sanguine temperament, he was cheered by the progress of his work at a time when others were depressed. Stumbling on abstractedly over the lighted area into the comparative gloom over the dry mud beyond, he had just climbed above fog level and proceeded scarcely a hundred yards when a hoarse voice addressed him from the shadow of a bush, where a man was sitting smoking. It was that of the railway traffic officer—otherwise known as the “Shunter.”

“Well, my Captain of Plumbers, how goes it? Aren't you across yet?”

“Old man, she's a beauty. That little steam piledriver is going to save the situation—to save the Third army. Just listen to her now, snorting and butting so prettily down there. It's music. I've now timed another four spans—sixteen more beastly piles—being put in, and it will take us, at the present rate, barring cataclysms, just fifty-one hours from midnight, say forty-eight from now, till the rails are fished up and the first train runs across. Let's see; this is Monday morning. That is, by 3 o'clock the morning after next—Wednesday. I told my chief 6 o'clock yesterday, and as the commandant has wired that all over the theater——”

“What the deuce are you talking about?” snarled the other.

“I thought you'd say that; why, the theater of operations, of course. All the papers call it that. Over the whole blooming country, if you like it better.”

There was only a grunt for reply.

“I shall let it stay at that, which will give me a margin of three hours for ‘unforeseen contingencies’; not that it is necessary, 'cause there ain't going to be any. I've foreseen all. The men want no driving; they are still working like devils. I tell you, ‘Mit Hast, ohne Rast,’ is our motto; but I wonder how long they can stand the strain. Some are already used up. Eight hours on and eight hours off is pretty stiff, you know, and the mist knocks out all the chesty ones. But it's the——”

“Yes, yes, what's the use of giving me all this flip-flap? I'm not a correspondent. Come to the point.”

“Well, I think the Third army should see the first train reach them, say, at noon on Wednesday; followed, I suppose, by a solid stream of 'em. However, my job's done when the first train gets across.”

“How about their interfering?”

“This place simply stinks of men now since we got the extra infantry and guns—you know that perfectly well. They would need a much larger force than they can spare to attack us. The footling breaks they make in the line ahead don't count; they are made good as soon as done. They can't touch us here, and this is the spot.”

. . . .

The bridge, slowly creeping forward behind its noisy head, was not the only spot where progress had been made that day. The same sun that dissipated the clinging mist from the river and revealed the bridgers at work lit up another scene of toil in a village some thirty-five miles away—of toil less imposing but no less important in its results. This little deserted village was the “hornet's nest” or lair of one section of the raiders.

In a room of the village inn, still the best house in the place, four officers had just finished a hasty meal and were pushing back their ammunition box seats from the packing case table. One of this group was noticeable; very pale, he carried his arm in a sling and had been eating clumsily with his left hand. Another was almost as conspicuous. He was a wiry man with a freckled face and red hair, and he wore a hybrid naval uniform. Upon his yachting cap shone a metal badge representing some insect. The third, the commandant of the section of raiders, was big and bull necked, with a sly expression in his protuberant eyes not usually associated with men of his build. All these men were under middle age, but the fourth was the youngest. He had nothing to distinguish him but pink cheeks and a bread-and-butter face; he was attached to the nautical man only, and did not wear the same uniform.

“We can't spread this map in here,” said the senior in a guttural voice, lighting his pipe; “let's go into the next room, or, better, into the taproom, where there's a bar.”

Following him, the party filed in on each side of the long counter, the pewter top of which was thick with dust, pieces of plaster, and broken glass.

“Anyway, I am glad to find you here,” said the last speaker. “I heard you were on the way, but many expected things do not arrive these days, and I was not too hopeful. And though I must confess that I am even now a bit skeptical about your box of tricks, I am only too keen to try. Have you unpacked your—what do you call them—squadron, fleet, covey, swarm?” The speaker had only just returned from an expedition.

“Yes, sir,” somewhat stiffly answered the man in the nautical suit. “They've been all unpacked, and my men are rigging them up in a shed we found. I have twelve—the Gadfly, Wasp, Bee, Mosquito, Tsetse, Ichneum——”

“Steady, steady—I haven't time to listen to the whole entomological dictionary. How many will be ready for this evening—for business, I mean?”

“All—I hope.”

“Are you anarchists, engineers, chauffeurs, or skippers prepared to proceed on individual forlorn hopes? Mind you, those who do not blow themselves up or get smashed by a fall but taken prisoner will almost certainly be shot as spies, and it's odds that ‘good-by’ at starting will be good-by forever.”

“We quite realize that, sir, and we'll take our chance. 'Tis a forlorn hope in a way; but the prizes are large. Why, just think, given a chance——”

“Yes, yes, I know. I see you are a cran—I mean an enthusiast, and quite rightly. Well, I'm going to give you a bellyful of chances!” The other smiled.

“Now, listen. As you are a newcomer, I'll put you in touch with the position in a few words. Never mind if I tell you something you know already, don't interrupt—listen. See square D 14? That's where their Third army is, some seventy thousand strong. They're in good position, holding some villages, at a strategic point—the names don't matter. They've been there five days. Our western force, which is not strong enough to attack, has been hanging on to and harassing them; we cannot make a grand attack, yet we hope to scatter their army and bag much of it. It has marched a long way, fought a lot, and lost nearly all its transports, and it must be starving, quite played out, and very short of ammunition, and—this is the point—it has only got one line of rail communication, which is cut! The railway's back along here—see?”

The other nodded.

“Of course we cut this line when we retired. In fact, I believe, though I'm not entirely in the confidence of headquarters, that it was arranged for the enemy to advance here. Naturally they have been doing their best to reopen communication. Being splendid engineers, they've done a lot; but so far they have not succeeded, for no trains have gone up, and only a small wagon convoy or two—a mere trifle. The country all round for miles is a desert as far as supplies go—we saw to that—and they must be in a very bad way. We know from spies that they have been for days on reduced rations and have many sick, and their guns are not so busy as they were. My duty, like that of the other raiding parties, for the last five days has been to prevent communication being reëstablished on the railway. We've cut the line and telegraph—we captured all their wireless gear—till we are sick. The bridges are very strongly guarded and all the petty damage we can do is repaired almost at once; unluckily it is a double line, and they repair one pair of rails from the other. Altogether, our efforts are futile. That's the general idea. Got all that?” He paused to relight his pipe.

His listener nodded silently.

“Good! Now I don't believe in your new machines flying about vaguely and killing a few men here and there with a bomb, and I think the chief must agree, as he has sent you here. I believe in attacking some sore spot, and going back to it again and again. The one place where they are vulnerable is at the big broken bridge—here, one hundred and thirty odd miles from the army. They're working like devils to repair the break, or rather to cross the river by a temporary bridge first, and they are doing it much too quick. They may be through in a day or two, and if so—their Third army is saved; but if we can delay the repair for three or four days even, I think it is lost! They know all this, and they've made a regular Port Arthur of the bridge-head. We've tried in vain to get near it, but the whole place is surrounded by outposts, barbed wire, and all that, and they have lit up the bridge till it looks like a gin palace. My sapper officer, who destroyed the bridge originally, spent some hours the night before last watching them from a hill, and, thanks to their illuminations, saw a lot. He had three men carrying dynamite with him: one blew himself up, two were captured, and he himself was wounded in the arm. Nothing that walks can get near the bridge. That's the special idea. Got that?”

Again the other nodded.

“Well, that's the place to attack—that's their sore spot, and here you are—O Beelzebub, Prince of Flies, with your horde! Your duty will be, so long as a single insect remains, to fly to that spot every night and bite or settle or sting, or do what you will to delay the work. Remember, if the bridge is delayed for three days I expect the Third army will fall into our mouths like a ripe plum. No food, no ammunition, no horses, they cannot retreat far. Now you have the whole position.”

“Yes, quite; but as to the details——”

“My sapper here has a large scale plan of the place and knows every inch of it. He will arrange all details for you. He has the very latest information. I'll leave you two. I want some rest.”

“Very good, sir.”

“Hold on; there is one thing more, and then you will have all my ideas. The aerial attack will be made tonight. Now, how about the news of this reaching the other forces of the enemy?”

“O, that seems simple,” interposed the youth. “I suppose you'll have every wire cut, and kept cut, so that not a whisper——”

“I thought so. Not so fast, young fellow. I see you are not a psychologist and do not appreciate the ‘moral factor’ in war,” he answered, quite pleased at catching the youngster. “The attack takes place tonight, and whether it succeeds or not it will certainly cause consternation and alarm at the bridge. I want that consternation and alarm to be transmitted to the starving army. I want the news of the blasting of their hopes, or even of a mysterious attack, exaggerated by ignorance of its exact nature, to be the last message they receive. Therefore from daylight till 10 tomorrow morning their wires will not be interfered with; but after that they will be cut, and kept cut, without chance of repair, and we'll stop all messengers, so that after the final bad news there will be mysterious silence. That will give time for the news to rankle, for rumors to breed, and for the doomed army to exercise its power of imagination; the silence will assist. To men in their position a word of discouragement is worth an army corps to us. Afterward, if any machines are left unexpended, we might further assist the hunger bred fantasies of the poor brutes by flying over them and dropping a bomb or two, or even by flying over them and just showing a light. That's all now. I'll leave you to arrange details. You”—turning to the youth—“come along and show what your box of tricks is like.”

“How many and what size bombs do you carry?” said the man with the wounded arm.

“Four eight pounders each.”

“Well, that's not much good unless you get a detonation alongside some vital spot. It won't do the structure of either bridge much harm. Can you drop accurately?”

“If the night is as calm as it is now we shall be able to drop one bomb out of two on a patch a little bigger than this room. If the wind rises it is more difficult, because we have to turn up wind to hover, and the balancing is not so easy. You see, we have to hover anyway to aim, and that's the difficulty. That's what the secret gear and auxiliary lifting propeller are for—the thing you called the little ‘whing-whang,’ I mean.”

“Quite. Now I know what sort of thing you can do, and this, I think, is the scheme. You see, their rate of work absolutely depends on their piledriver. If that is destroyed they will have to drive by hand, which will take—O—five or six times as long. Therefore that's the sorest point in the sore spot. They're working night and day, partly by the aid of their electric light; if that's destroyed it will hamper them, but will not make them take even twice as long, because they can carry on the low level bridge with flares. That's the second sorest point. Agree?” “Beelzebub” nodded. “As they're so deuced near finishing, we must try to make a dead ‘cert’ of stopping them tonight, as, once their bridge is done, we cannot really damage it with these little bombs. Therefore I think you should sail out with all your fleet and do your devilmost tonight.”

“Yes, that's sound. I quite agree.”

“Take on the piledriver first, and if you get that, or burst its boiler, switch off on to the dynamo house. That will be a much easier target; it's bigger. If you get only one bomb to burst inside, even without hitting anything, it will probably wreck the show, for one splinter in the moving parts of the engine or dynamo revolving at high speed will cause the whole thing to fly to bits. Two fair shots should do the trick. Can you count on two bull's-eyes out of forty-eight shots?”

“I think so, if there is no wind. Can't we set anything alight? I'm stocking a splendid line in incendiary bombs, pretty things of petrol and celluloid that look like capsules.”

“Nothing. I don't know where their ammunition is, though they must have tons there. Hold on—yes, I saw some mountains of stuff, just here; mark it on the map, will you? That is probably forage. After you have done all you can and expended all your explosive sail along and drop a few capsules on to these mounds and over the yard. You may set something alight with any luck. By the way, can you signal to each other?”

“Yes—we carry colored lights and little lamps in our tails. How about finding our way?”

“I was thinking of that. When you get out over the hills about eight miles away from the bridge you will see the glare of it in the sky and can steer straight for it. To assist you before you spot this glare we'll send out a dozen men who will have lights on poles, shaded so as to shine upward. Will that do?”

“Excellent. And about a place for landing, in case any of us come back—that's the great difficulty. Have you a pond near here?”

“Yes, about half a mile away. I'll take you to it later.”

“That will do. You must put lights to mark the pond, in case it is still dark when we get back, and, if it is deep, have some men with a raft of sorts to haul us out.”

“Right.”

“Beelzebub” went out to coach his men in the details and finish off the flies. As the other sat still musing he thought of the feelings of those whose work was to be so suddenly destroyed, and he had a fellow feeling of sympathy for them.

. . . .

It was near 4 in the morning, and all was well, when the “Plumber,” reaching his post on the bridge once again, made himself snug on a plank resting upon two sacks of fish bolts. The piledriver was still thudding monotonously, the steam and the flare lights still roared, and the water lapped against the timbers, while the mouth organ whined a hymn tune a short distance away.

A sudden hiss, and splash into the river, not a pile's length away, fell something. All but simultaneously a column of water shot up, with the muffled report of an explosion under water, and, falling backward, revealed a heaving blister of mud, just visible through the mist. The men playing dropped their cards and sat up. The whine of the mouth organ froze in the middle of a bar. But the pile driver continued its blows, for the fat man still mechanically jerked the string, though his eyes were all but staring out of his head. Silent, stupefied surprise held all. The mud fountain had barely subsided when—a second hiss and splash close alongside the bridge—and another subaqueous explosion followed with its geyser of mud and water, which, falling on the track, would have washed the fat man away but for the string to which he clung. At last the piledriver stopped. Barely had the soused soldiers got their breath after this douche when they were shaken by a racking detonation, accompanied by the sound of rending timbers, some thirty yards back along the trestles. The air hummed with fragments, while all near the end of the structure lay prostrated by the blast of this shock. Still another detonation followed, this time right among the men, as the bomb struck a sack of bolts. Bodies were thrown right and left amidst a volley of bolts, which shrieked as they spun through the air, dealing death all round. It was worse than any shrapnel shell, for these missiles were heavy and jagged as pot legs, and the force behind them was terrific. The boiler was pierced by one. It burst with a deep roar, capsized the truck, and the whole machine toppled over into the swirl below, but not before the cloud of steam gushing out had scalded the maimed and helpless men close by. To add to the horror the wrought iron reservoir of the flare light was torn and the flaming oil poured out over the timbers into the water and spread in a blazing film, momentarily lighting up the inferno before it was swept downstream. The cries of the mangled were loud.

After a minute's respite a faint crash sounded overhead, succeeded by a burst of yellow light, and two flaming masses fell spinning in a sickening spiral plumb on to the girder bridge above, where their flight ended in a volley of explosions against the iron. Again the sound of flying metal filled the air. Other detonations followed in quick succession.

The sudden cataclysm was too much. Men born of women could stand no more. Discipline was lost, and from the river bed a general wail rose up. Those who had for day and night toiled like slaves dropped their tools, their work, and fled off the bridges toward shore.

A bouquet of dazzling red stars now burst out on high with a soft liquid report and slowly floated to earth. In the crimson glare the panic stricken fugitives paused in terror. What was coming next?

There was not much time to doubt, for a succession of detonations round the corrugated iron dynamo shed showed where the attack was falling. These ended in one report with a metallic ring, from which there was no flash, and the electric light went out as a grinding crash sounded from the shed. A second shower of red stars slowly sank to earth. Then, with many little explosions, fires sprang up in the “yard” away by the station. Most of them soon burned out without doing damage, but the stacks of forage had been touched and burst into a blaze. As the dense clouds of smoke and long tongues of flame mounted up, from overhead a shower of magnesium stars were wafted gently downward. In their intense light the flying machines circling round were visible to all those above the mist. The work of destruction ceased.

Rifle shots rang out, close by at first, then growing into a general fusillade, which became fainter in the distance, like an irregular feu-de-joie, toward the farthest outpost line. They marked the course of the angels of destruction, still to be seen in the light of the conflagration. This wild shooting was not quite without result, for two flaming masses were seen to fall, curving toward one of the hills in the north.

As the flames of the burning forage gained strength and clouds of sparks and a huge volume of lurid smoke rose to the sky—now of the gray hue preceding dawn—the roar of the conflagration drowned all other sounds.

. . . .

Against the glowing embers the half dressed figure of the consumptive railway traffic officer might have been observed gazing helpless at the scene—the realization of his fears. He was not thinking of his yard, of his friend the “Plumber,” or of the horrors around him. He was dreaming of the fate of an army and of the ultimate results of its destruction.

VOICE of the FAN

Dear Miss Tinee: Moving pictures have come to stay, and they ought to stay, for they furnish a harmless kind of amusement to adults, an amusement that helps to beguile many a weary spirit from the petty annoyances incident to this intensely complex and competitive age. But moving pictures that will and do serve the purposes I have indicated for the person of mature mind utterly fail, all things considered, when seen by the immature. We cannot, must not, measure the young by the same standards that we use with the adult, even in moving pictures.

Youth lives largely in the exalted realms of fancy. The pigments of all the rainbow tints are spread upon life's canvas by his youthful optimism, and his dream pictures, the purest and sweetest things in life, should never be sullied by sordid and suggestive things, such things, for example, as he often sees in the average moving picture house.

What all communities need is the moving picture house that caters directly to youth, in that it can supply the children and young people with just the proper pictures to amuse and interest them and at the same time minister to their best intellectual and moral and spiritual growth. A. J. Richardson.

Dear Miss Tinee: That Wisconsin "voice" what did the sizzling last week, that one that was so fond of using big words—well, he writ like maybe he was daring somebody to reply to him, and so here goes.

Now, 'course you understand I ain't got nothin' agin him personally, but all the same if he don't like the kind o' questions we ask you about our heroes and heroines let him read the "You know me, Al" letters—they're good reading!

You bet there's "thousands" of the rest of us that could "attain success as motion picture players," but 'tain't the calling of all of us, and I doubt if it will ever be any calling of hissan, either. Somebody's gotta build thrashing machines and bake pies and keep the buttons on shirts an' write "voices" and such like!

But everybody whose an "alrighter" is some member of the cork species—push him under and he bobs right up again; for, be his sphere little or big, he always gets to the top of his own job. And so that's the way with some of these picture players, and the reason we learn to love 'em is because we can see 'em just often enough so that they grow to be an inspiration to us, each in some much needed way.

But I understand this department is for other purposes as well as rag chewing, and so here's in regard to the little leak holes I see in the movies. 'Course, dramatic license permits the exaggeration of speed with which intense situations may follow each other, but that's about all. Simplicity is the key to more puzzles than most people imagine (hint to Wis. dictionary "projector"), and if them movieitors will get right at the business of picturizing just life itself, together with its details (emphasis on the "details") they'll come out all right.

Then, too, I think it's a good thing for us fans to remind ourselves that most usually, at least, a pretty good place for Miss Spirit O'Criticism is outside the door with our galoshes, 'cause then after that I think this movie business, pro and con, will be a-sittin' on quite a high pedestal, don't you? Clara L. Leslie.

Dear Miss Tinee: I haven't been to all the movie theaters in this country, but I've patronized a good many and in many different places, and I wonder whether they all run advertisements. I don't like to pay out my money for entertainment—even if it's only a nickel—and then be forced to read about the virtues of Dr. Bunk's Liver Pills or the marked down prices at Jones' store. Advertising is all right in its proper place—the newspapers—as we don't have to read it there unless we are interested. Any 5 cent picture show which cuts out advertising would make a hit with me by announcing that fact. Guy Haythorn.

Helen Dunbar

INTRODUCING Miss Helen Dunbar, leading character woman with the Essanay company, who, up until some four years ago when she joined the Essanay, was on the speaking stage, playing many and varied parts. At the age of 16 Miss Dunbar graduated from the Sacred Heart convent at Torresdale, Pa. At school entertainments her rather remarkable contralto voice had won comment, and her friends predicted that she would eventually go on the stage. Sure enough! Almost immediately she procured an engagement to sing the leading role in "King Cole," the musical comedy by Wilson Morse, the title of which was later changed to "Wang." After this her success was assured. She was always busy. She was in comic opera for awhile. Then she went with Weber & Fields. She took, later, many dramatic parts in all star cast successes. For two years she headed a company of her own. The Essanay company then decided she would be an asset to it and made her an offer which she accepted. Miss Dunbar is a versatile woman. She is an artist, a horsewoman, a swimmer, and a baseball fan, which last sport she follows with all the proverbial enthusiasm of an office boy.

ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS.

MAIDA: Send a stamped and self-addressed envelope for an article showing just how the doubling process is accomplished. I'll be glad to mail it to you.

JESS: In the Kalem film, "Cupid Backs the Winners," Ruth Roland was the girl who interested you. She's with the Balboa Feature Film company now. No, I hadn't heard that Mary Pickford was going to get a divorce and I think the rumor's wrong.

M. M.: You're too old to be silly.

ANNA McQ.: A letter addressed to James McQuade, 17 Madison avenue, New York, will reach him.

PEGGY: Harry Millarde is still with the Kalem company. Alice Joyce has hazel eyes and chestnut hair. I did my best to get a picture of Arthur Johnson with "the smile in his eyes." Were you pleased with it in the "Frame"? It's most flattering to both Mr. Sweet and myself that you want to see us in pictures, but, alas, methinks it will never come to pass. We're so good at our present jobs, you see. Yes, he's quite cute. Awfully glad you wrote, Peggy.

ANNA G.: I am pretty busy, but never too busy to answer one more question. Beverly Bayne is 21 years old. Yes, I think Florence La Badie is vurr' charming. I'm sure they'd both be delighted to have you write them. If you want your letters answered be sure and inclose stamped and self-addressed envelopes.

KATHERINE T. McC.: If you will write to Yale Benner, in care of Edison company, 2826 Decatur avenue, Bedford Park, New York, he will receive your letter. The chances are he's the same Yale Benner your husband knew.

JIM M.: James Cruze took the part of Hassam Ali in "Zudora." Since the play has been changed he has taken the part of the reporter. Harold Lockwood has gone to the American company. Yes, I think Mary Pickford's lovely. You're entirely welcome.

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

When stamped and addressed envelopes are inclosed Miss Tinee will be glad to answer personally any letters addressed to her. Address all queries to this department to Miss Tinee in care of this paper.

Questions that have been answered will receive a reply only when a stamped and addressed envelope is sent.

Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered.

Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our knowledge, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

If you are interested in photo-play writing send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department for the information you desire.

SINGLE X: Thanks for the greetings but why the "million pardons"? Your letter was flattering—so flattering that I fairly preened myself—so why apologize? Don't you yike to make a yady glad?

CLARENCE B.: Norma Talmadge is 19 years old. Helen Holmes is 20. I have no information regarding the other actresses in whom you are interested.

H. I. S.: House Peters is with the Lasky company. Hobart Bosworth will undoubtedly send you a picture of himself if you will write to him in care of the Bosworth company, inclosing a quarter with your request. The Bosworth company is in Los Angeles, Cal.

DEANE: I wish I could help you, but I personally do not train people for the movies. Woulda that I coulda!

TROUBLE: Arthur Ashley is 28 years old. I have no information regarding his private affairs. Too bad, since you're so interested. And you're no trouble at all!

MIKE: Lamar Johnstone is not a model. He has his hands too full acting for the Selig company to pose for magazine illustrations.

A MOVIE LOVER: So you love Mr. Cooper's big brown eyes, little girl? Well, I reckon that isn't going to hurt you any. I'm glad you realize, however, that it's a long way to Tipperary and that Mr. Cooper is farther removed than that from you. "Sad Minute" is certainly zero in names for a moving picture theater. What in the world do you suppose was the matter when the man named it?

KEOKUK: I think you'd better write me a personal letter regarding becoming a motion picture actress. I have some printed material on the subject I'd like to send you. If you will write to Mary Pickford, in care of the Famous Players company, Los Angeles, Cal., inclosing a quarter with your request for her picture, I'm quite sure she will send it to you. You're vurr' welcome.

MAY MOVIE FAN: I may be a "wise darling" all right, but unfortunately I am unacquainted with the private affairs of the actor in whom you are interested. I'll consult my crystal, though, and in the near future print a note of my findings. Will that be all right?

G. I. M.: Richard Travers of the Essanay company is not married. He lives in Chicago. Harry Benham of the Thanhouser is married and lives in New Rochelle, New York. He married Ethyl Cooke.

LYNN: No, I don't mind your writing to me. And if it gives you any pleasure to say the sort of things you did, rave on! But don't expect any answer in the stamped and self-addressed envelope you inclosed, that's all.

DALE S.: A letter addressed to Herbert Rawlinson in care of the Universal company, 1600 Broadway, New York, will reach him.

JACK W.: Mail sent to the Princess company in care of the Thanhouser studio, New Rochelle, N. Y., will reach them.

Since This Is Not Enough We'll Give You ALL YOU WANT

You're fans, of course, every one of you, or else you wouldn't be reading this page. You love your motion picture plays, your motion picture idols, and your motion picture theaters. And you want to glean just every bit of information you possibly can about them. That's why you send in votes to "The Frame of Public Favor"; that's why you write those awfully interesting letters to the "Voice of the Fan"; that's why you comment and kick and ask questions endlessly.

You are simply insatiable! And—we don't blame you. There'd be something wrong with you if you weren't!

And we're going to satisfy your wants.

Because of the length of time it takes to "make up"—which is newspaper talk for the writing, getting together, coloring, and drawing of a feature page of this kind—it is impossible to get the latest news regarding plays and players upon it. However, you want the latest views and we want you to have it.

So, in the drama section, we're giving it to you under the head of "Latest News from Movie Land." When you've finished this page turn

"Grace Cunard," says a friend, "is making her 'mountain home' a veritable paradise and the acre of ground which she owns is already full of surprises. There are springs and ponds, winding stone steps and shrubs and flowers in profusion, and there are already over 200 specimens of wild flowers on her place, and the gardener has given her the names of over 150. Perched on the top of a mountain, anything will grow there, and although it is a hard climb it is worth all the trouble for the view, to say nothing of the hospitality. Only high power machines can make the trip successfully, and the climb requires some careful driving."

It is the intention of the Reliance and Majestic studio to feature Dorothy Gish in a number of three and four reel feature photoplays, and in each picture her part will be somewhat different from her previous one.

Florence Turner, formerly of the Vitagraph, is now with the foreign Pathe company.

The latest fad is the funny little Chaplin mustache. This mustache is invariably worn by Charles Chaplin in all of his photo comedies. It is one that he originated and is nearly as wide as it is deep. The lip on either side is shaved so that the mustache covers only about one-half of the mouth.

Little Viola Dana, the diminutive Edison leading woman, was unable to play her parts lately due to an accident she suffered while playing on the stage in the title rôle of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" in Louisville, Ky., some two years ago. In the transformation scene she had to suddenly change from the richly dressed miss to the poor little girl on a darkened stage. The scene was one of the swiftest transformation, and during the rush of the stage hands the border lights fell to the stage floor. The scene was made ready unconscious of Miss Dana's predicament, and rather than spoil the most effective part of the play the little woman continued her dance on the glass in her barefeet. At that time she lodged a piece of glass in her foot which gives her recurrent trouble.

Charles Clary, formerly of the Selig company, has enlisted under the Mutual banner.

Says Kathlyn Williams of the Selig company to girls who ask her advice regarding entering motion pictures: "It is work, purely and simply, and I invariably advise girls to seek some other occupation. Amateurs have little opportunity now to successfully enter upon the work because the field is crowded with those having long stage experience, and naturally they are first engaged to fill the few vacancies."

Sadie Carr is to play opposite Charles Chaplin in Essanay comedies.

What is said to be the biggest artificial light studio in the country has been opened at the Lubin ranch in Betzwood, Pa. Director Edgar Jones is making a series of three reel pictures there. This is the third big studio to be built at the ranch during the last few years. The new studio is equipped with every modern appliance for the making of photoplays. The Lubin engineers have been working for many months on the big studio and the system of artificial lighting has been so designed as to permit the taking of natural color motion pictures there.

The Famous Players are rejoicing in the acquisition of Donald Crisp.

The announcement that the Cosmos Feature Film corporation is to present Miss Janet Beecher in the photoplay version of "Fine Feathers," by Eugene Walter, will undoubtedly prove of interest to exhibiters and photoplay goers throughout the country. Miss Beecher has appeared in many prominent productions and in the support of many equally prominent artists. The most recent and probably the best recollected play she appeared in was "The Concert," with Leo Ditrichstein.

"YOUNG AMERICANS"

CONDUCTED BY TERRY RAMSAYE

Prudent Marino, wounded in several engagements, youngest sergeant-fourrier in the French army. He is 14 years old.

BOYS IN THE GREAT WAR

IN the far away town of Zhitomir, in Russia, a 14 year old boy, Orloff, stood watching the soldiers entrain. It was the beginning of the mobilization in that period of diplomatic threats that made good in the great European war.

A few weeks passed and Orloff heard thrilling stories of successes on the Prussian frontier. Orloff walked the village streets with the measured steps of a soldier. His shoulders were squared as he listened to the imaginary music of the bugle and built in fancy pictures of himself in all the glory of glorious war.

The boy could withstand the call no longer. He left the town school in Zhitomir one afternoon and hurried home. That night he slipped away. When the village of Zhitomir heard of Orloff again he was the hero of eleven engagements and been decorated with the order of King George by the czar.

On a reconnoitering expedition Orloff discovered a large body of the enemy. With his comrades he fought in the trenches all day. Ammunition ran low. It seemed that surrender or death was the alternative. Under the cover of dusk the boy crawled away for help. He crept through piles of fallen soldiers and reached the main division of the Russian artillery. Relief came and his comrades were saved.

When the whole story of the part that boys are playing in the European war reaches us we probably will learn of hundreds of just such boy heroes as Orloff. The great story of the boys in the war probably will not be written until after peace has ended the terrible struggle. The larger looming facts of the conflict have for the time obscured the heroic work of the boy soldiers.

In the call upon the defensive resources of the warring nations it is natural that the boy scouts should be the first to be drawn upon as the most available organization. Hence, it is that most of the boys of whom the cable and camera give us occasional accounts are scouts.

"Be prepared," the boy scout motto, seems to apply with particular significance here. The healthy principles upon which the boy scout organization was founded and the training which the boys have received, while not always avowedly for military purposes, are proving their value. At any rate, it is being shown that the training which tends to make boys into better citizens and more resourceful men is incidentally making them better military material.

The boy scouts of England, France, and Germany share alike in the service of their flags. In each country they have proven of great value in the service of their governments.

The "mobilization" of the boy scouts of England is a good illustration of their efficiency. When war became imminent word was sent to every scout commissioner in the British isles that all the scouts available would be needed. Sir Robert Baden-Powell went to work, and within a week 22,000 boys in the London districts alone were ready and willing to serve.

Here is an enumeration of some of the duties which the scouts have been called upon to perform, and it can stand as an indication of the nature of the services of the scouts in other countries:

Distributing notices to inhabitants and other duties connected with billeting, commandeering, and warnings.

Carrying communications by dispatch riders, signalers, wireless, etc.

Guarding and patrolling bridges, culverts, and telegraph lines against damage by individual spies.

Collecting information about available supplies and transportation.

Carrying out organized relief measures among inhabitants.

Helping the families of men employed in defense duties, the sick and wounded.

Establishing first aid, dressing and nursing stations, refuges, dispensaries, and soup kitchens in their clubrooms.

Acting as guides and orderlies.

Forwarding dispatches dropped by aircraft.

Sea scouts watching estuaries and ports, guiding vessels in unbuoyed channels, assisting coast guards, and showing lights to friendly ships.

This list is far from exhausting the duties which the scouts have been able to undertake in behalf of their countries.

According to reports from London the admiralty now employs no less than 2,000 scouts, while it is estimated that no less than 3,000 are helping the police. The war office there is using about 100 as special orderlies, for which the boys are paid 9 shillings—the equivalent of $2.25—each a week.

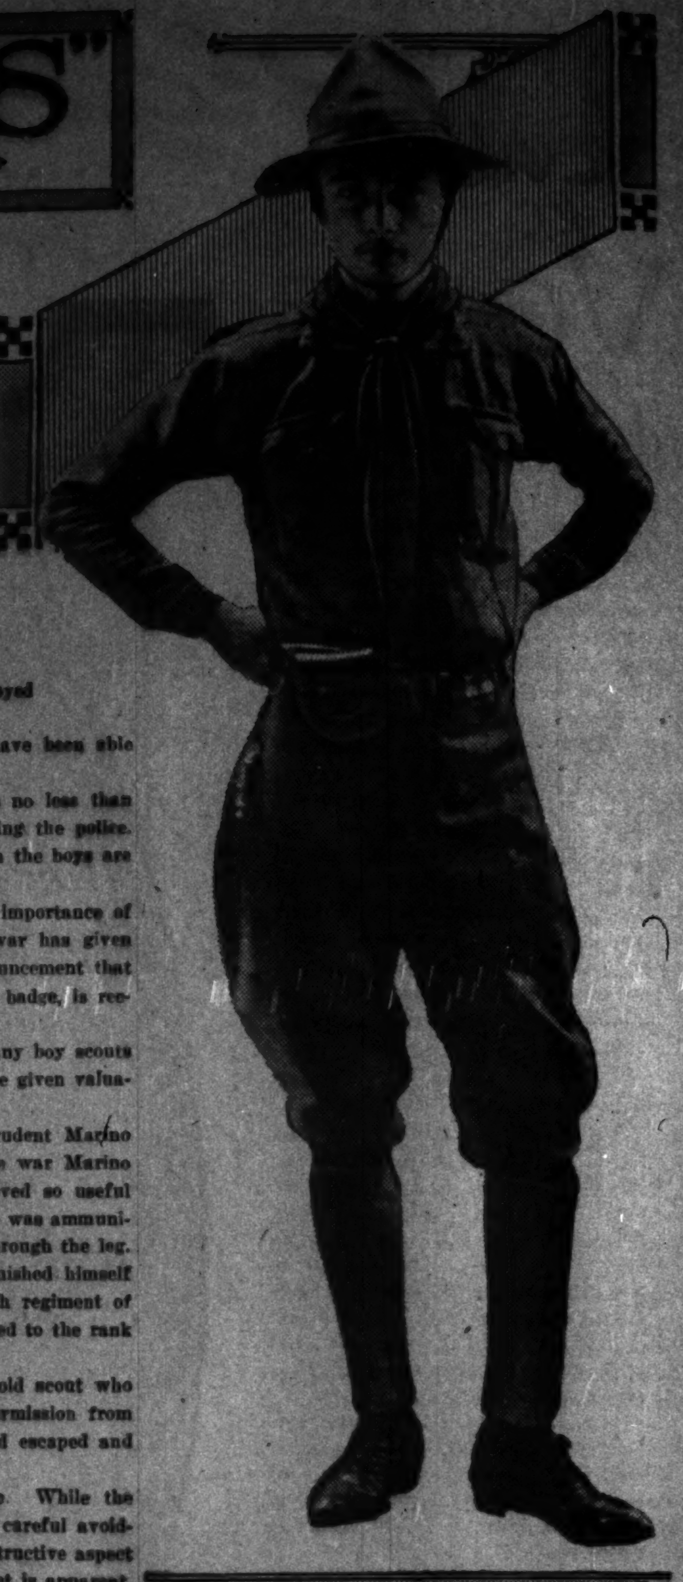
In official recognition of the value of the scout service and the importance of their organization the parliamentary under secretary of state for war has given the Boy Scouts' association of England authority to publish an announcement that the uniform of the boy scouts, the sea scout cap and the fleur-de-lis badge, is recognized by the government as the uniform of a public service body.

Occasional dispatches have shown that in Belgium and in Germany boy scouts have at times taken places on the firing line. French boy scouts have given valuable assistance to the Red Cross.

Among the individual stories of boy scout heroism that of Prudent Marino stands out. This boy is but 14 years old. On the outbreak of the war Marino attached himself to a regiment passing through to Alsace and proved so useful that he was adopted by the regiment. At the front near Luneville he was ammunition bearer, dispatch carrier, and scout. At Luneville he was shot through the leg. When he recovered he went to Monroux as a corporal and distinguished himself under fire. At Crouy, near Soissons, while attached to the Twelfth regiment of artillery he was wounded by shrapnel. On recovering he was promoted to the rank of sergeant-fourrier and rejoined the French troops.

Belgium is proud of the exploits of Stephen Otto, a 15 year old scout who took part in the attack on the forts of Boncelles, then obtained permission from the German commander to work with the Red Cross; and afterward escaped and rejoined the Belgian army.

The work of the European boy scouts is full of significance. While the Boy Scouts of America is a decidedly nonmilitary organization with careful avoidance of everything bearing a semblance of all that pertains to the destructive aspect of war and armament, the value of the scout work as a national asset is apparent. The same qualities of scoutship which are making the boys of Europe valuable in the defense of their countries are in America making American boys more valuable citizens in a nation of peace.



Joseph Gossens of Brussels, who was often under fire in the fighting in Belgium, highly commended for his brave service.

THE TRAIL OF THE BOY SCOUTS

Marksmanship for Scouts.

REQUESTS for information on rifle training and marksmanship indicate a sudden growth of interest in shooting among the boy scouts.

In the past, when the country was less thickly populated and game was abundant in practically every section of the country, every boy grew up learning to use the rifle almost automatically as the boy of today learns to use his knife and fork.

But in these days the average boy meets strenuous parental opposition when he expresses a desire for a rifle and more likely than not grows up ignorant of guns and marksmanship.

Most, if not all of the basis of this parental opposition to gunnery is removed in boy scout work. The careful supervision of the efforts of the boys by scout masters and the very nature of the scout training remove the elements of danger.

There are a great many things to be said in favor of rifle training—little to be said against it under proper conditions. There is health and inspiration on the range. The requirement of really good marksmanship demand the qualities of manhood, self-control, steady nerves, a clear eye, and a certain decisiveness of character that find expression in the trigger finger quite as completely as in more complicated affairs. The highest efficiency with the rifle means a sound body and abstinence from tobacco and alcohol.

The code of scoutcraft for the Boy Scouts of America provides for a merit badge of marksmanship and sets down sensible conditions which safeguard the young marksman. The marksmanship regulations for scouts are practically those set forth by the National Rifle association for "fifth class," or schoolboy rifle clubs. In coöperation with the national headquarters of the Boy Scouts of America the National Rifle association gives special encouragement to the formation of such clubs among the scouts.

The boy scout marksmanship code as set forth by the handbook is a good chapter of guidance for any marksman of any age. The boy scout marksman is required to promise upon his honor:

Never to point a gun at any human being in any circumstances.

Never to handle a firearm without first examining it to make sure it is empty.

Never to load a gun while persons are standing in front of him.

Never to shoot at or kill a harmless animal or bird for the sake of killing.

Never to engage in aiming the gun or snapping the hammer unless it is trained on the target.

Never to shoot in the open without taking every precaution for the safety of others.

Never to be unsportsmanlike in contests of skill with firearms.

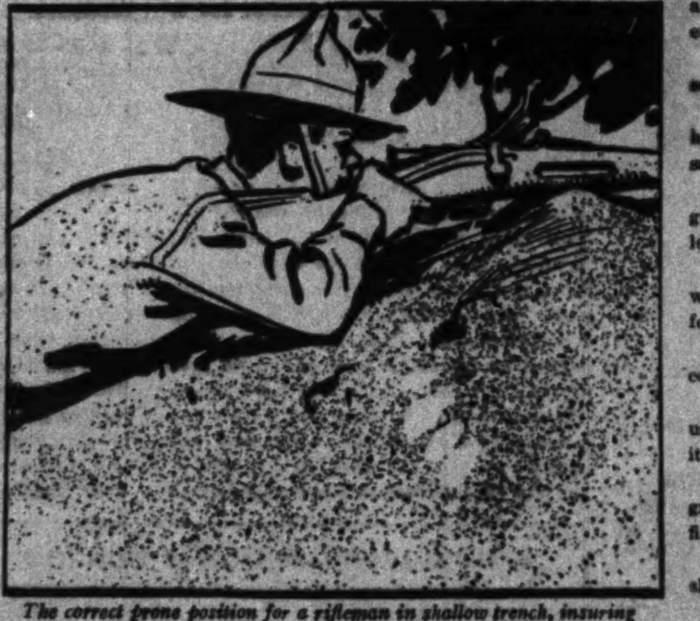
Never to put aside a gun after use without thoroughly cleaning it.

Never to take anything for granted about a gun—find out first.

Never to cut any "monkey shines" while handling a gun.

The conditions in qualifying for a scout marksmanship badge of merit require a score of not less than thirty-eight points out of a possible fifty from a standing position and forty-two points prone, or a total score of eighty in a possible one hundred. The range for this scout test is the standard gallery range of fifty feet, measured distance, from the muzzle of the rifle to the target. The scout must produce evidence that all practice and the test have been under the supervision of a range officer, whose appointment has been officially approved. This detail can best be arranged through the scouts' own scout master.

Next Sunday I will give you some suggestions for beginners in rifle shooting and describe the scoring systems in use.



The correct prone position for a rifleman in shallow trench, insuring steady, certain aim. Much used in "skirmish" shooting.

POPULAR SCIENCE

The Mechanics of War Shells.

THE artillery projectiles in use in the war may be broadly divided into two general classes—those to be used against armor and those to be used against bodies of men in the field. The armor piercing shell is designed to carry through the armor sheet and explode in the interior of the fortification or ship. The projectiles of the second class are broken up automatically by the action of time fuses exploding the disruptive charge within, covering the area about with flying bullets and shell splinters.

In the ever continuing contest between the armor makers and the shell makers the armor builders at one time gained what appeared to be a decisive victory. They achieved a composition which seemed able to resist the impact of any shell. Then a curious discovery was made. It was found that a shell capped or fitted with a nose of soft metal over the hardened steel of the body of the projectile penetrated the hardest armor readily. Hence practically all armor piercing projectiles carry a cap of mild steel.

To understand this action of the soft capped shell it is necessary to put aside the ordinary conception of the qualities of steel. The soft cap under the tremendous shock of impact against the hard faced armor becomes relatively like a dab of mud thrown against a wall. This soft cap affords a sort of anchorage and support for the shell proper and under the pressure produced might almost be called a lubricant as well. The principle involved is not unlike that which enables one to drive a pin through a plank at a single blow, if the pin be first pushed through a cork.

The armor piercing shell is now generally made of forged steel and is carefully machined to dimension. Some cast steel shells are in use. The old style cast iron shell is futile against modern armor. It breaks up like a cylinder of glass.

Shrapnel shells, designed for service against forts and entrenched troops, depend for their effectiveness on the bursting charge of gun cotton or other explosive and lead bullets carried within the body of the shell. The point of explosion is determined by adjustment of the "time ring," a complicated little mechanism carried on the point of the shell. The shrapnel shell may be exploded at any point from the muzzle of the gun to its extreme range.

Every efficient steel projectile carries a copper ring near the base which is driven into the rifle grooves of the cannon and effects the double purpose of giving the required rotary motion imparted by the rifles and holding the expanding gases of the firing charge behind the projectile. A machinist would call this copper band a "gasket." On some experimental projectiles mild steel and wrought iron has been used for this gas check, but copper gives the best service.

The terrific wear on the gun resulting from the high pressure of the burning powder charge and the velocity of the projectile traveling through the rifled barrel makes the life of the weapon short. In some of the big guns drops of melted steel can be seen dripping from the "lands" of the rifling after the piece is fired. It is said that the fifteen inch guns on the Queen Elizabeth, the big British warship used against the forts of the Dardanelles, are good for only 100 rounds. The same effect in a lesser degree is noted in the modern high velocity small arms of sporting and military service. The life of a high power sporting rifle barrel in actual service is usually something less than a minute. That means that the barrel would be worn out in that time if bullets passed through it without intermission.

In addition to the purely mechanical effect of the gun fire must be added the corrosive action of the residue of smokeless powder.

The Story of Kit Carson.

Chapter II.

The most thrilling and important aspects of Kit Carson's career are found in his exploits on the exploring expeditions of Lieut. John C. Fremont of the United States army. The element of chance entered importantly in this connection and friendship of these two strong men.

Carson spent something more than eight years in the west and northwest, hunting and trapping, after he had run away from his Missouri home to go to Santa Fé. Next we find him in the service of Col. Bent at Fort Bent, in the upper Missouri river country. Carson was the official hunter for the post, intrusted with the duty of feeding the little post of forty persons through his skill with gun and trap. While at the post he married an Indian girl, who died shortly after a daughter was born to them. Carson ultimately determined to take his daughter to St. Louis, the closest point having the semblance of civilization, that she might have the advantages of an education among his people.

Carson reached St. Louis in the spring of 1842 and found himself a lion of the hour. The stories of his adventures in the great and then almost entirely unknown west had preceded him. It is recorded that he, as every proper hero should, received his fame modestly. Accounts of the daring and wonderful scout, Carson, reached Lieut. Fremont, who was in St. Louis outfitting for his first expedition of exploration. He insisted that Carson join the party.

On May 22, 1842, the explorers took boat from St. Louis and proceeded northward up the murky waters of the Missouri river. They landed at what is now the site of Kansas City, at the junction of the Kaw and Missouri rivers, proceeding overland to the Chouteau trading post. There was a party of twenty-one men, including a surveyor, a hunter, and various porters, Canadians and Creoles, who had seen similar service. The expedition was bound for the Rocky mountains.

Something of the excitements of the overland trail of the explorers is shown in Fremont's own account of the journey. An extract from his journal telling of a buffalo hunt follows:

"The hunters were brought up and saddled, and Kit Carson, L. Maxwell, and I started together. They were now somewhat less than a mile distant, and we rode easily along until within about 300 yards, when a sudden agitation, a wavering in the band, and a galloping to and fro of some of the buffalo which were scattered along the skirts of the herd gave us the intimation that we were discovered. We started together at a hard gallop, riding abreast of each other.

"A crowd of bulls, as usual, brought up the rear and every now and then some of them faced about and dashed on after the band a short distance, then turned and looked again as if more than half inclined to stand and fight. In a few minutes, however, the rout was universal and we were going over the ground like a hurricane. When about thirty yards away we gave the usual shout and broke into the herd. We entered on the side, the mass giving away in every direction in their heedless course. We separated on entering, each singling out his own game.

"My horse was a trained hunter, famous in the west under the name of Proveau, and, his eyes flashing, foam flying from his mouth, sprang on after a cow like a tiger. In a few moments he brought me alongside of her, and, rising in my stirrups, I fired at the distance of a yard, the ball entering near the heart. She fell headlong at the report of the gun, and checking my horse I looked around for my companions.

"At a little distance Kit was on the ground engaged in tying to his horse the horns of a cow he was preparing to cut up. Among the scattered bands, at some distance below, I caught a glimpse of Maxwell, and while I was looking on a light wreath of white smoke curled away from his gun, from which I was too far to hear the report. Nearer and between me and the hills, toward which they were directing their course, was the body of the herd, and giving my horse the rein we dashed after them. A thick cloud of dust hung upon their rear, which filled my mouth and eyes and nearly smothered me. In the midst of this I could see nothing and the buffalo were not distinguishable until within thirty feet.

"They crowded together more densely still as I came upon them and rushed along in such a compact body that I could not obtain an entrance, my horse almost leaping upon them. In a few moments the mass divided to the right and left, the horns clattering with a noise heard above everything else, and my horse dashed into the opening.

"Five or six bulls charged on us as we dashed along the line, but were left far behind. Singling out a cow, I gave her my fire, but struck too high. She gave a tremendous leap and hurried on faster than before. I reined up my horse and the band swept on like a torrent and left the place quiet and clear. Looking around I saw only one of the hunters, nearly out of sight, and the long dark line of our caravan crawling along three or four miles distant."

That was the life into which Kit Carson fitted.

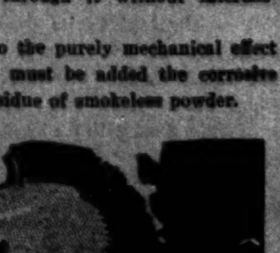
The party progressed onward to Fort Laramie, in the Wyoming country. There they learned that the Sioux were on the warpath, roaming over the country, ready to fight and kill every human being they might meet. A trapper came into camp in wild alarm, declaring he had been pursued from his hunting ground by the bloodthirsty Indians.

Fremont's party took fright. Some of them asked to be permitted to quit the expedition at once. Carson it is said, admitted the grave hazard and made his will.

When Kit Carson made his will it was time indeed for less brave hearts to be afraid.

When the day came for the advance Fremont called his men about him and by force of his determination chided the cowards into continuing the journey.

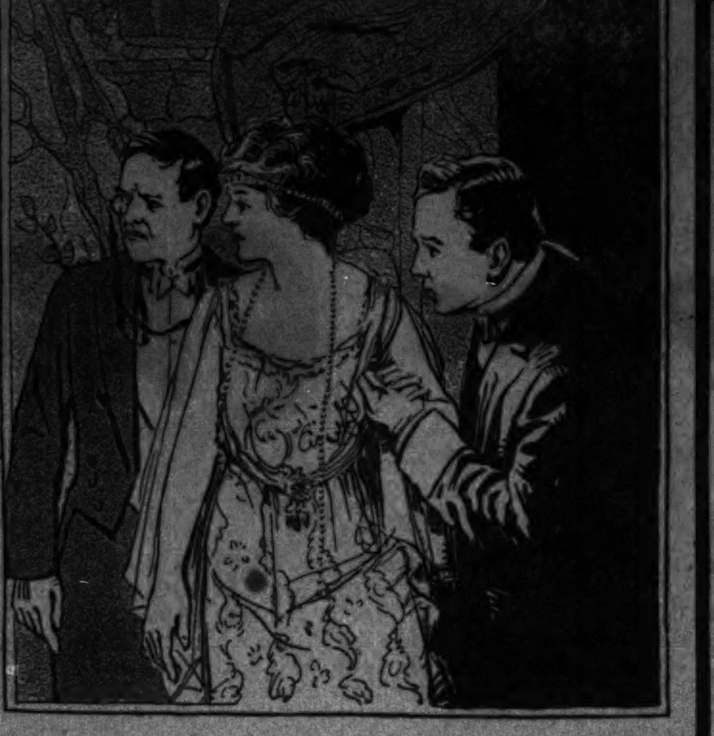
(To be continued next Sunday.)



SYNOPSIS.

Zudora, heiress to $20,000,000, is placed in the guardianship of her uncle, Hassam Ali, a mystic. Hassam Ali is determined to secure the girl's fortune for himself, and when she becomes of age he makes every effort to bring about her death. Zudora is in love with a young lawyer, John Storm, and she seeks permission of her miserly uncle to marry him. Hassam Ali promises to grant her wish provided she shall solve twenty of his cases. Zudora solves nine of the cases, when her uncle dies, and she is released of her pledge.

At the death of her uncle, Zudora has another suitor for her hand—Jim Baird, a man who has been playing as double to Hassam Ali, but who, through sincere love of the girl, gives up the false life and goes back to his work as a newspaper reporter.



ZUDORA In the Twenty Million Dollar Mystery

NOVELIZED BY HAROLD MAC GRATH

The photodrama corresponding to the installments of "Zudora in the Twenty Million Dollar Mystery," as printed in the Sunday Tribune, may now be seen at a number of the leading moving picture theaters. The producing company is the Thanhouser Film corporation of New Rochelle, N. Y. More than 1,000 actors are in the cast, including Marguerite Snow, Mary Elizabeth Forbes, James Cruze, Sidney Bracey, Harry Benham, and Frank Farrington. One two-reel episode is released every Monday.

No longer obliged to solve Hassam Ali's cases, Zudora now confronts the greatest mystery of all, which is the mystery of her own life and the ambition to secure the vast fortune of $20,000,000 left her. On looking through her uncle's papers she also finds that her father left her an interest in a diamond mine, and Storm and Baird both lend assistance in trying to regain for her possession of this estate, which is being appropriated by rogues.

Sided with Zudora are Detective Hunt and Baird, who set out for South Africa to look after some of her diamond mines. There they have a stirring encounter with some of the rogues who seek Zudora's fortune. Eventually they return to New York. Shortly afterward Zudora is kidnaped. Storm, through a fisherman, learns she is held captive on an island. His search for her is vain. Baird and Hunt are enlisted, and by shadowing one of the guards of Zudora they find and rescue her.

The same day two of the rogues try to smuggle some of Zudora's diamonds into New York. Hunt and Baird try to stop them in the harbor, but in vain. The chase leads to the Jersey shore, where Hunt and Baird recover the diamonds, only to lose them again when attacked by Zudora's enemies. They try to burn Baird at the stake, but Hunt foils this and Baird is freed. In the meanwhile Mme. Du Val plans to steal valuable papers concerning Zudora's estate.

[Copyright: 1915: By Harold MacGrath.]

CHAPTER XX.

It took two weeks for Baird's burns to heal. And Hunt sat down, as it were, and patiently waited for his friend's recovery. He could have gone forward alone, but Baird had stuck to him so loyally and devotedly that he hadn't the heart to disappoint him.

"I want to be in at the death, Hunt."

"All right, my boy. It may be a bit risky waiting, but I'm going to take the chance."

"It's mighty good of you. Can we bring the count of murder against them in regard to the superintendent's death?"

"That's a hard nut to crack," answered Hunt. "All I can see clearly is to jug them on the grounds of smuggling; that is, if I don't find something more vital in that desk of Madam Du Val. Since you've been laid up I've found an odd bit of news."

"What's that?"

"This man Radcliffe knew Zudora's father."

"No!"

"Sure thing. How well and under what conditions I wasn't able to learn. Villier's extra documents brought this bit to light. Madam Du Val, Bruce, and Radcliffe are crooks of a high order; but I confess that there are some confoundedly big holes in my net. I'm worried to death for fear they'll slip through. If I can get 'em on the grounds of grand larceny and fraud and perjury, why, I can send them up for a comfortable number of years."

"Well, let's pray for that much. It seems to me that Hassam Ali's Hindu servant did not sell everything; they had something to start with, and only wanted to fortify themselves. Well, here's hoping I'm up and out by the end of the week. It's going to be a grand smashup for somebody."

Three days after Baird was freed of his bandages, Storm paid a visit to Zudora. She was sitting in the window seat, thrumming a guitar. He tossed the box of flowers into her lap. She opened it with delight.

"Are you still of the same mind?" he asked.

"Same mind for what?" she countered, knowing full well to what he referred.

"That you will marry me inside of three months?"

"I never break my word, John. Perhaps if I hadn't been so stubborn and foolish and had married you at the start all these dreadful things might never have happened to me."

"Well, you're at the end of a long lane. Hunt telephoned today that he and Baird were now ready for the warpath. And what do you suppose Hunt told me?"

"What?"

"That this man Captain Radcliffe, Madam Du Val's admirerer, once knew your father."

"Impossible!"

"It's a fact. And this may in the end explain away many confusing things. Now, give me that kiss I've been waiting for ever since I came into the room."

She flew into his arms, very grateful to have a pair so strong to shield her. As she drew back from him the little locket containing her father's and mother's pictures caught on a button. She gave an exclamation of dismay, tried to catch the broken chain; but she was too late to prevent the locket from falling to the floor.

"It's broken!" she cried. "O, that's bad luck!"

"Nonsense," he replied. "A jeweler will be able to patch it up without any trouble whatever."

"Bad luck!" she reiterated. "It was my mascot, and now the charm is broken."

"Put on your things and we'll go right down to the jeweler's and prevent the hoodoo from getting in any active work." Storm laughed. He had very few superstitions.

Half an hour later they were at the jeweler's.

"O, yes; that can be fixed easily enough," he declared. "The pictures will have to be taken out, though, while the locket is being repaired."

He picked up a small tool and pried the photographs from the cases and handed them to Zudora. Idly she turned them over.

"Why, what's this?" she cried, indicating a slip of paper which adhered to the back of her mother's picture.

She spread it out on the case and read aloud: "Your father's will has been left in charge of our trusted friend, Captain Radcliffe."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Storm. "Girl, there's the key to the whole business; take my word for it. I propose you run down to Hunt's office at once. He'll want this."

Meantime Hunt had a visitor. It was Marcus Villiers of Montana, in charge of the Zudora gold mines. He was informing the detective that he had concluded to follow his documents in case they needed his testimony, when Storm and Zudora burst into the office with their astonishing news.

"I knew it!" said Hunt, jubilantly. "They seemed too confounded assured to suit me. And this little scrap of paper will solve the riddle. Baird is out at the villa, ready to send word to me the moment those people leave the villa empty. And, by George, there goes the phone now!" He took down the receiver. "That you, Baird? Fine! They've left the villa? I'll be there inside of ten minutes. And you heard the directions? Ah, the diamond cutter's! Great work, boy; I'll make you my partner for this." Hunt turned eagerly to his visitors. "I'm off. I can't let this chance slip by. You people sit quiet until you hear from me. I've a hunch that we're going to do some round-up work this afternoon. Storm, you keep Zudora under your eye up to midnight. You never can tell. The rats may turn and bite when they learn that the game is up. Promise?"

"I promise," laughed Storm.

Hunt found Baird hiding in the pergola

"Everything all right?"

"Yes. But you'll have to hurry. No knowing when they'll return. I judge they took some diamonds to the lapidary's.

Fold Here

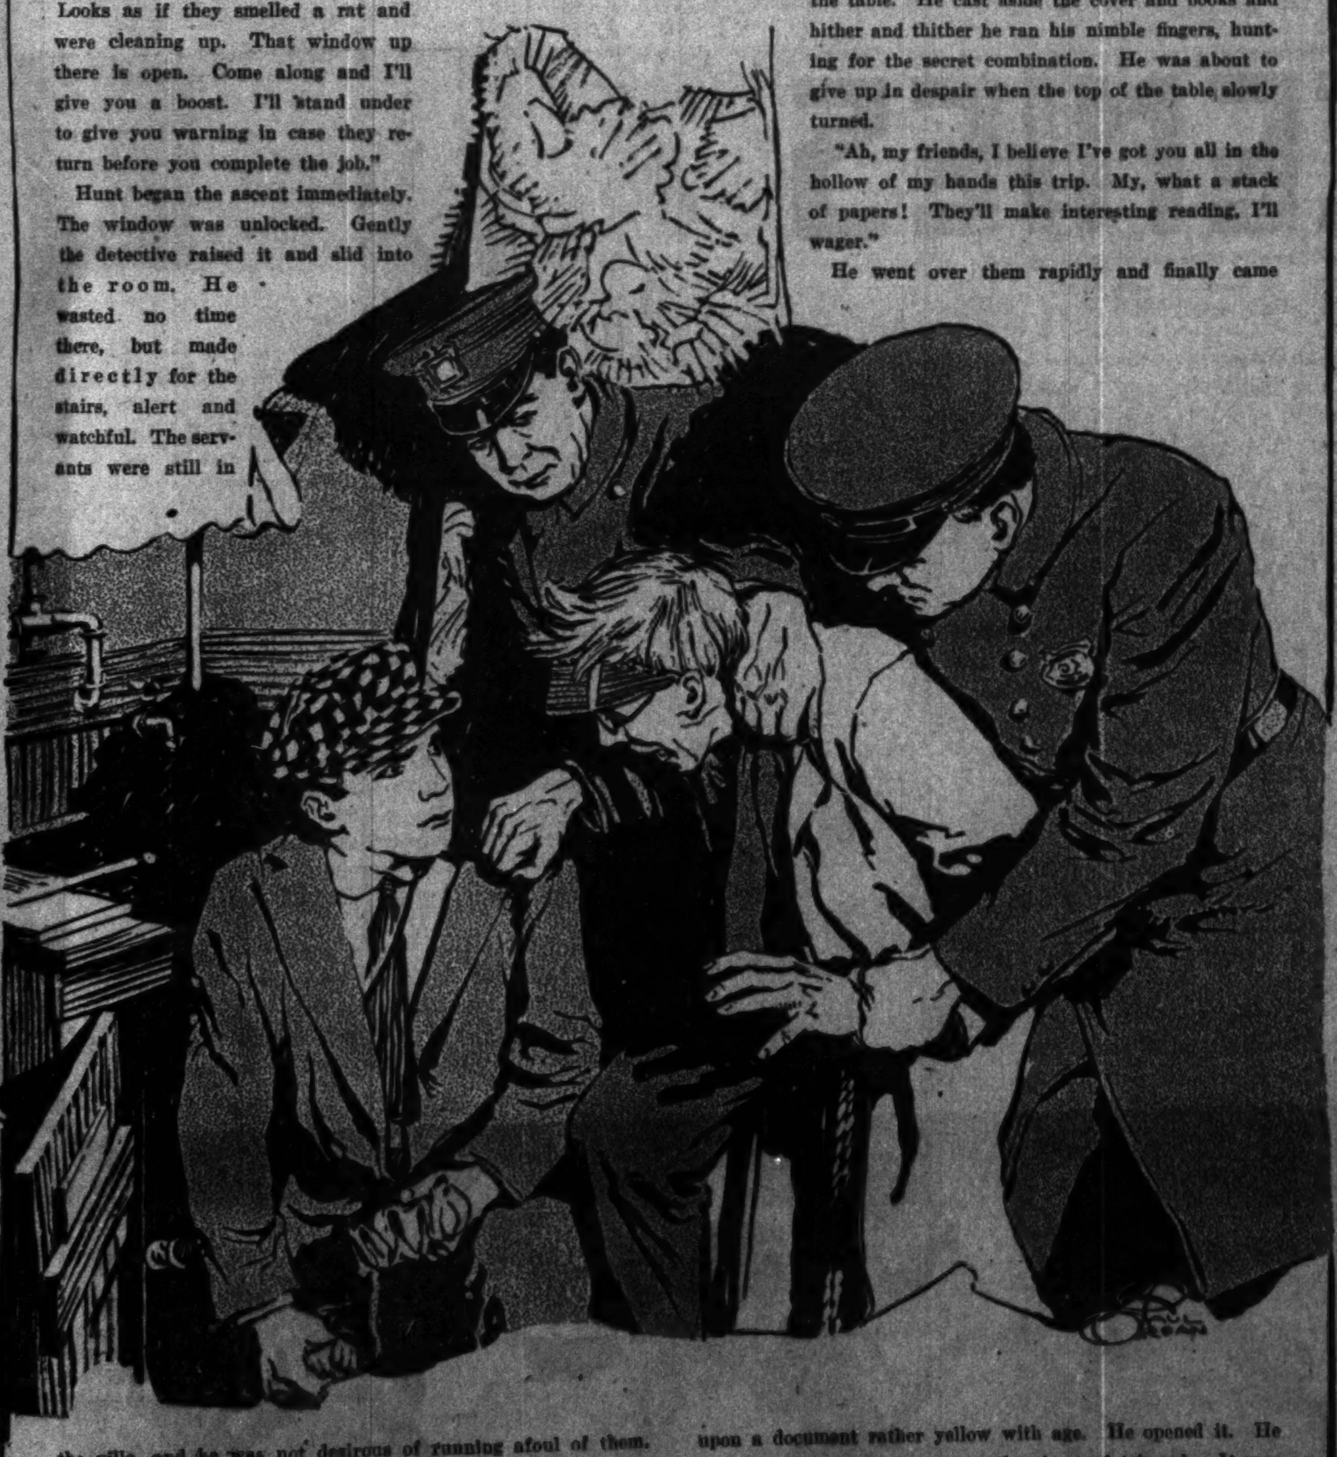
Looks as if they smelled a rat and were cleaning up. That window up there is open. Come along and I'll give you a boost. I'll stand under to give you warning in case they return before you complete the job."

Hunt began the ascent immediately. The window was unlocked. Gently the detective raised it and slid into the room. He wasted no time there, but made directly for the stairs, alert and watchful. The servants were still in the villa, and he was not desirous of running afoul of them. He reached the stairs safely and went down as soundlessly as a cat. He paused abruptly at the first landing. Some one was in the Grecian salon. It was the butler. He was clearing the little table of glasses. When he had them all on the tray he stalked out of the room.



"Maybe tomorrow he will not hold his head so high," mused Hunt, continuing his way down. He tiptoed into the salon.

The first object of his attentions was the gem vault. He succeeded in opening the panel in the column, but the vault was seemingly impregnable. He desisted and gave his attention to the table. He cast aside the cover and books and hither and thither he ran his nimble fingers, hunting for the secret combination. He was about to give up in despair when the top of the table slowly turned.

"Ah, my friends, I believe I've got you all in the hollow of my hands this trip. My, what a stack of papers! They'll make interesting reading, I'll wager."

He went over them rapidly and finally came upon a document rather yellow with age. He opened it. He had all he could do to repress the shout of triumph. It was the will so long sought. Zudora had won her fight. He moved the cover back into place, but in his hurry did not replace the things he had taken off it. A mistake that may have cost him a good deal in the end. Some victories are not only half victories; and fate was going to bring this home to him.

He tiptoed into the hall, flew up the stairs, sped through Madam Du Val's boudoir, and went out of the window just as Baird sounded the alarm.

"They are coming back. That's Madam's limousine down the road. Hustle! What luck?"

"Got everything!"

"Then let's duck while the ducking's good," suggested Baird.

They began dodging among the trees in hopes that the occupants of the limousine would not see them; but in this they failed.

Radcliffe leaned out of the limousine window.

"Hunt!" he whispered. "Hunt and that man Baird! What the devil have they been up to?"

"We can soon find out," said Madam Du Val uneasily. "They can't have got into the house with the servants on the watch."

"You never can tell about this man Hunt," replied Radcliffe grimly. "Here we are. Come, hurry!"

They got out of the car and ran up the steps. Upon entering they both intuitively went into the salon. Radcliffe first went to the gem vault; but nothing there had been touched. Then Madam opened the top of the table.

"Gone!"

"What's gone?" demanded Radcliffe.

"Everything!" she cried passionately. "They have cleaned out the drawer completely. Radcliffe, we are lost!"

He rang violently for the servants. But they swore earnestly that they knew absolutely nothing. And as these servants were crooks of a minor order, Radcliffe was forced to believe them. But he gave them a berating over their carelessness, a berating not to be forgotten soon.

"Well," said Radcliffe, striving to calm Madam, who had inexplicably burst into tears, "we've got a tidy sum salted away. I've warned you a hundred times, but you would play the game to a finish. But I don't understand your tears. You knew the risks we were taking. And now, flight. Thank the Lord, the yacht's in commission. That'll take us anywhere we care to go."

Suddenly the woman rose to her feet and dashed the tears from her eyes.

"Radcliffe, if I weep it is with tears of rage. That little chit, to beat us when we had everything. I am going to finish up this affair my way."

"And what's that?"

"I will give a reception tomorrow night."

"You are mad! A reception! They'll hold that in the Tombs."

"Listen to me. They'll come out of curiosity; and while they are dancing, or waiting for the arrival of the police, we'll slip into the tunnel and make our getaway under their very noses. I insist upon it. I know. They will think they are playing with us, while on the contrary it is we who will play with them."

"I'm against it, but I can see that your mind is made up. Don't turn to me with reproaches if the game blows up the other way. What's the use of playing game when we're up against a proposition like this?"

"It is my will!"

"All right. I'll wire the warden at Sing Sing to order a feather bed for me. Believe me, if we don't tonight we shan't find the opportunity tomorrow night."

"If you wish to run away, do so at once," she replied coldly. "My dear woman, you'll never be able to lose me. Let's say nothing more about it."

At 6 o'clock the old lapidary was arrested as the first move in the game. A small fortune of uncut diamonds was taken in at the same time. In the future diamond smugglers would have to look elsewhere.

Hunt informed Storm and Zudora what he had succeeded in doing, and declared that on the morrow he would arrest Captain Radcliffe, Bruce, Madam Du Val, and their confederates.

But imagine Zudora's amazement the next morning when she received a polite invitation from Madam Du Val to attend a tango dance! And when Storm telephoned that he had also received one, they concluded to notify Hunt. He went up in the air for a few minutes.

"What shall we do?" asked Zudora.

"Wait a minute," said Hunt. Then he spoke. "Go. They are contemplating to set a trap for you, and we'll get them red-handed on that count. I'll have the place surrounded by the police. They've got nerve; and I'm curious to see how far it will stretch. Tell Storm to arm himself. Baird and I will be within calling distance. With the police at hand I don't think there'll be any great risk. Give 'em rope; they'll hang themselves." Hunt hung up the telephone.

"A final adventure!" cried Zudora.

"If it was any one but Hunt I'd bow off. But the old boy knows what he's doing."

It was rather a remarkable gathering which appeared at Madam Du Val's valedictory dance. Half of them knew that something serious was afoot and the other half felt that something was in the air, but could not tell what. Hunt's fault lay in his overconfidence; and in his overconfidence he forgot all abount the underground passage until his quarry were suddenly found missing. He was furious. They had played with him in a manner he had been far from expecting. He had a sensation not unlike that of a nonsmoker having tobacco smoke puffed in his face. He called to Baird.

"They've gone into the underground passage. We have one chance in a hundred in blocking them at the old garage. Look alive!"

The two ran excitedly from the house.

They found the garage boarded up. They began battering at a window and succeeded in breaking the barricade just as the fugitives left the garage at the other end. They jumped into the empty van awaiting them just as Baird and Hunt crawled into the garage. They saw by the open trap that the birds had flown. Out of the window again they went, in time to see the van lumbering off.

"They're in that!" yelled Hunt, in a strangled tone. Never in all his career had he been quite so brazenly made a fool of.

But the van gained speed and rapidly drew away from the pursuers. Hunt had saved Zudora's millions for her, but he had lost forever his trio of precious crooks. He received this information three weeks later. Madam Du Val's yacht had run afoul a floating mine in the English channel, and everybody on board had gone down.

Storm and Zudora were married in the Du Val villa, which really had been purchased by money belonging to her father's estate. Thus ended the trials of Zudora.

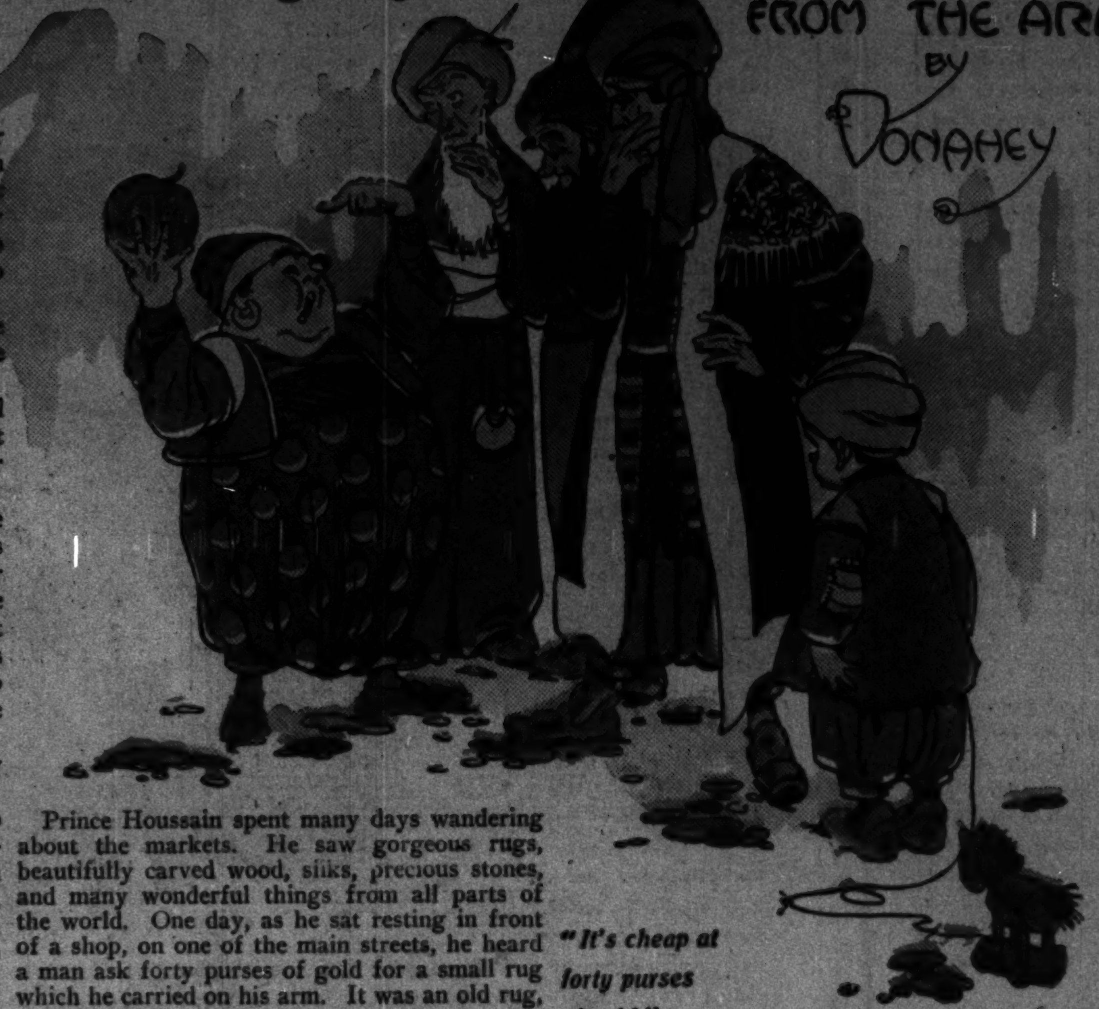
PRINCE AHMED AND THE FAIRY.

FROM THE ARABIAN NIGHTS



"It's cheap at forty purses of gold."

THE Princess Nouronnihar, having lost her father when she was a little girl, had been brought up in the palace of her uncle, the King of India. The princess was very beautiful, and now that she had grown to womanhood, the king wished to marry her to some prince worthy of her name and beauty.

The king had three handsome sons. The eldest of the princes was called Houssain, the second Ali, and the youngest Ahmed.

When the princes heard their father wished to have the princess marry they separately went to the king and each told him that he loved her and would like to have her hand in marriage.

This discovery disturbed the king, for he knew it would surely cause jealousy among his sons. The king thought the matter over for some time and, calling the princes before him, he said: "My sons, my love for you is so great that I could not possibly pick any one of you as a husband for the princess. In order to keep peace among you and to be fair to each, I have formed a plan."

"Tell us," eagerly cried the princes, as they gathered around their father.

"My plan is," began the king, "for you to go out into the world and travel about in different countries. During your travels I want each of you to buy some rare and unusual object. When you have all returned, one year from today, I will give the princess in marriage to the one who brings the most wonderful present."

The three princes, each hoping that he would be the lucky man, readily agreed to their father's plan. Early next morning the king gave each prince a large sum of money, and, disguised as merchants, they set out upon their adventure.

They traveled together all day, and when evening came on they stopped at an inn, where they spent the night. In the morning the princes started out on their several journeys, having agreed to meet at the inn in one year.

Prince Houssain, the eldest brother, having heard of the richness and splendor of the city of Bisnagar, made his way at once in that direction. He traveled for many months, sometimes over great deserts and high mountains, and at last he came to the city and made his home at an inn.

Prince Houssain spent many days wandering about the markets. He saw gorgeous rugs, beautifully carved wood, silks, precious stones, and many wonderful things from all parts of the world. One day, as he sat resting in front of a shop, on one of the main streets, he heard a man ask forty purses of gold for a small rug which he carried on his arm. It was an old rug, and the prince wondered at the price the man asked for it. "Surely," he thought, "there must be something wonderful about that rug." And when the man came nearer he called to him, "I say, my friend, that must be a fine rug you have, to bring such a fancy price."

"It's a magical rug," explained the man, as he spread it out before the prince, "and it's cheap at the price. For whoever sits on it may be instantly carried to any place he wishes to go, no matter how great the distance."

The prince was greatly excited, for he believed he had found a thing that would win the hand of the princess.

"How am I to know this rug has the power you claim it has?" asked the prince.

"I will prove it to you," exclaimed the man. He then sat down on the rug and motioned the prince to do the same. "Now," said the man, "where do you wish to go?"

"I—I wish to be carried to my room at the inn," breathed the prince. And instantly he found himself there.

Prince Houssain, now satisfied of the strange power of the rug, quickly counted out the forty purses of gold and became owner of it.

As some time yet remained before the time set to meet his brothers, the prince spent his time pleasantly, visiting among the merchants. After a while he became impatient to be off, and, seating himself upon the rug, he wished to be taken to the inn, where he had agreed to meet the other two princes. Almost as quickly as one could bat an eye he was carried to the meeting place.

Prince Ali, the second brother, disguised himself as a jeweler and joined a party of merchants who were traveling into Persia. Soon they came to the city of Shiraz, where the prince left the party and engaged a room at the best inn. On the morning of his arrival Prince Ali started out to look around the town. He had not gone far before he saw an old man wandering along the street with a queer looking ivory tube in his hand.

"Forty purses of gold; only forty purses of gold for this fine ivory tube!" cried the old man.

"That fellow's crazy," thought the prince, as he watched the old man shuffle along. Suddenly it occurred to him that the tube the old man carried might have some strange use. As a piece of ivory it wasn't worth a tenth of what the old fellow asked. "Anyhow," he thought, "it won't do any harm to ask why he wants so much for it."

"Sir," asked the prince, as he fell into step with the old man, "may I ask you a question?"

"Quite as many as you like; quite as many as you like," he answered.

"Why do you ask so much for that?" asked the prince, pointing to the ivory tube.

"Ah! That's a secret," cried the old fellow, looking cautiously about. Catching the prince by the arm, he pulled him into the doorway of a deserted house. "It has a strange power," whispered the old man, holding the tube up to his eye and squinting into it. "By looking through this tube one can see any object he wishes to behold."

"I would like to see my father," excitedly cried the prince. Snatching the tube from the old man's hand the prince gazed into it and saw his father sitting on the throne. Next he wished to see the princess, and immediately he saw her walking in the palace garden.

"With this tube I can surely claim the hand of the princess," thought the prince, "for there is nothing in all the world so wonderful."

Prince Ali bought the tube at once, and after many days of travel he returned to the meeting place, where he found Prince Houssain. Here both waited the return of Prince Ahmed.

Prince Ahmed traveled in an opposite direction to that taken by his brothers. He visited many cities, wandering about the streets and looking into the queer shops and searching everywhere he thought there might be a chance of finding some strange and unusual object. As the prince stood looking into a shop window one afternoon he felt a tug at his sleeve and, turning around, he saw a little, dumpy fat man standing at his side. "What is it, my man?" asked the prince, looking kindly upon the little fellow.

"Oh, sir," cried the little man, holding up a large artificial apple before the prince's eyes, "it's cheap at thirty-five purses of gold. Buy it, sir, oh, please do."

"Judging from the price you ask, it must be a precious one. Possibly it's the apple Eve took from the garden of Eden," said the prince, smiling down upon the little man.

"It's a magical apple," cried the fat man, "and it cures all sick persons of the most dangerous diseases simply by the patient smelling it."

"This apple is truly wonderful if it has the power you claim for it," cried the prince, "but how am I to know it has this power?"

"I can tell you how," cried a man among the crowd of people that had gathered around. "I have a friend who is dangerously ill. You might try it on him."

Prince Ahmed thought this a good plan, and at once set out for the sick man's house. They found the man to be very sick, but as soon as the apple was held under his nose the color came into his face and he sat up in bed a well man. The prince was satisfied with the power of the apple and paid the little fat man five purses of gold more than he had asked.

"Now," thought the prince, "with this apple I am sure to win the princess."

Shortly after he journeyed to the meeting place and joined his brothers, who had been waiting for him.

The princes were happy at meeting again and spent many pleasant hours telling each other about their travels. The brothers had carefully kept their presents hidden from one another. Prince Ali, being curious to see what his brothers had bought, brought out the ivory tube, hoping they would also show what they had purchased.

"Brothers," he cried, "this is a most wonderful tube. By looking through it one can see whatever person or object they wish to behold."

"Is it possible to see the princess?" asked the Prince Houssain.

"Take it and try," cried Prince Ali, as he handed the tube to his brother.

Prince Houssain lifted the tubed to his eyes and looked into it. Suddenly he turned deathly white. The tube fell from his trembling hands, and with a great cry he fell in a dead faint at the feet of his brothers.

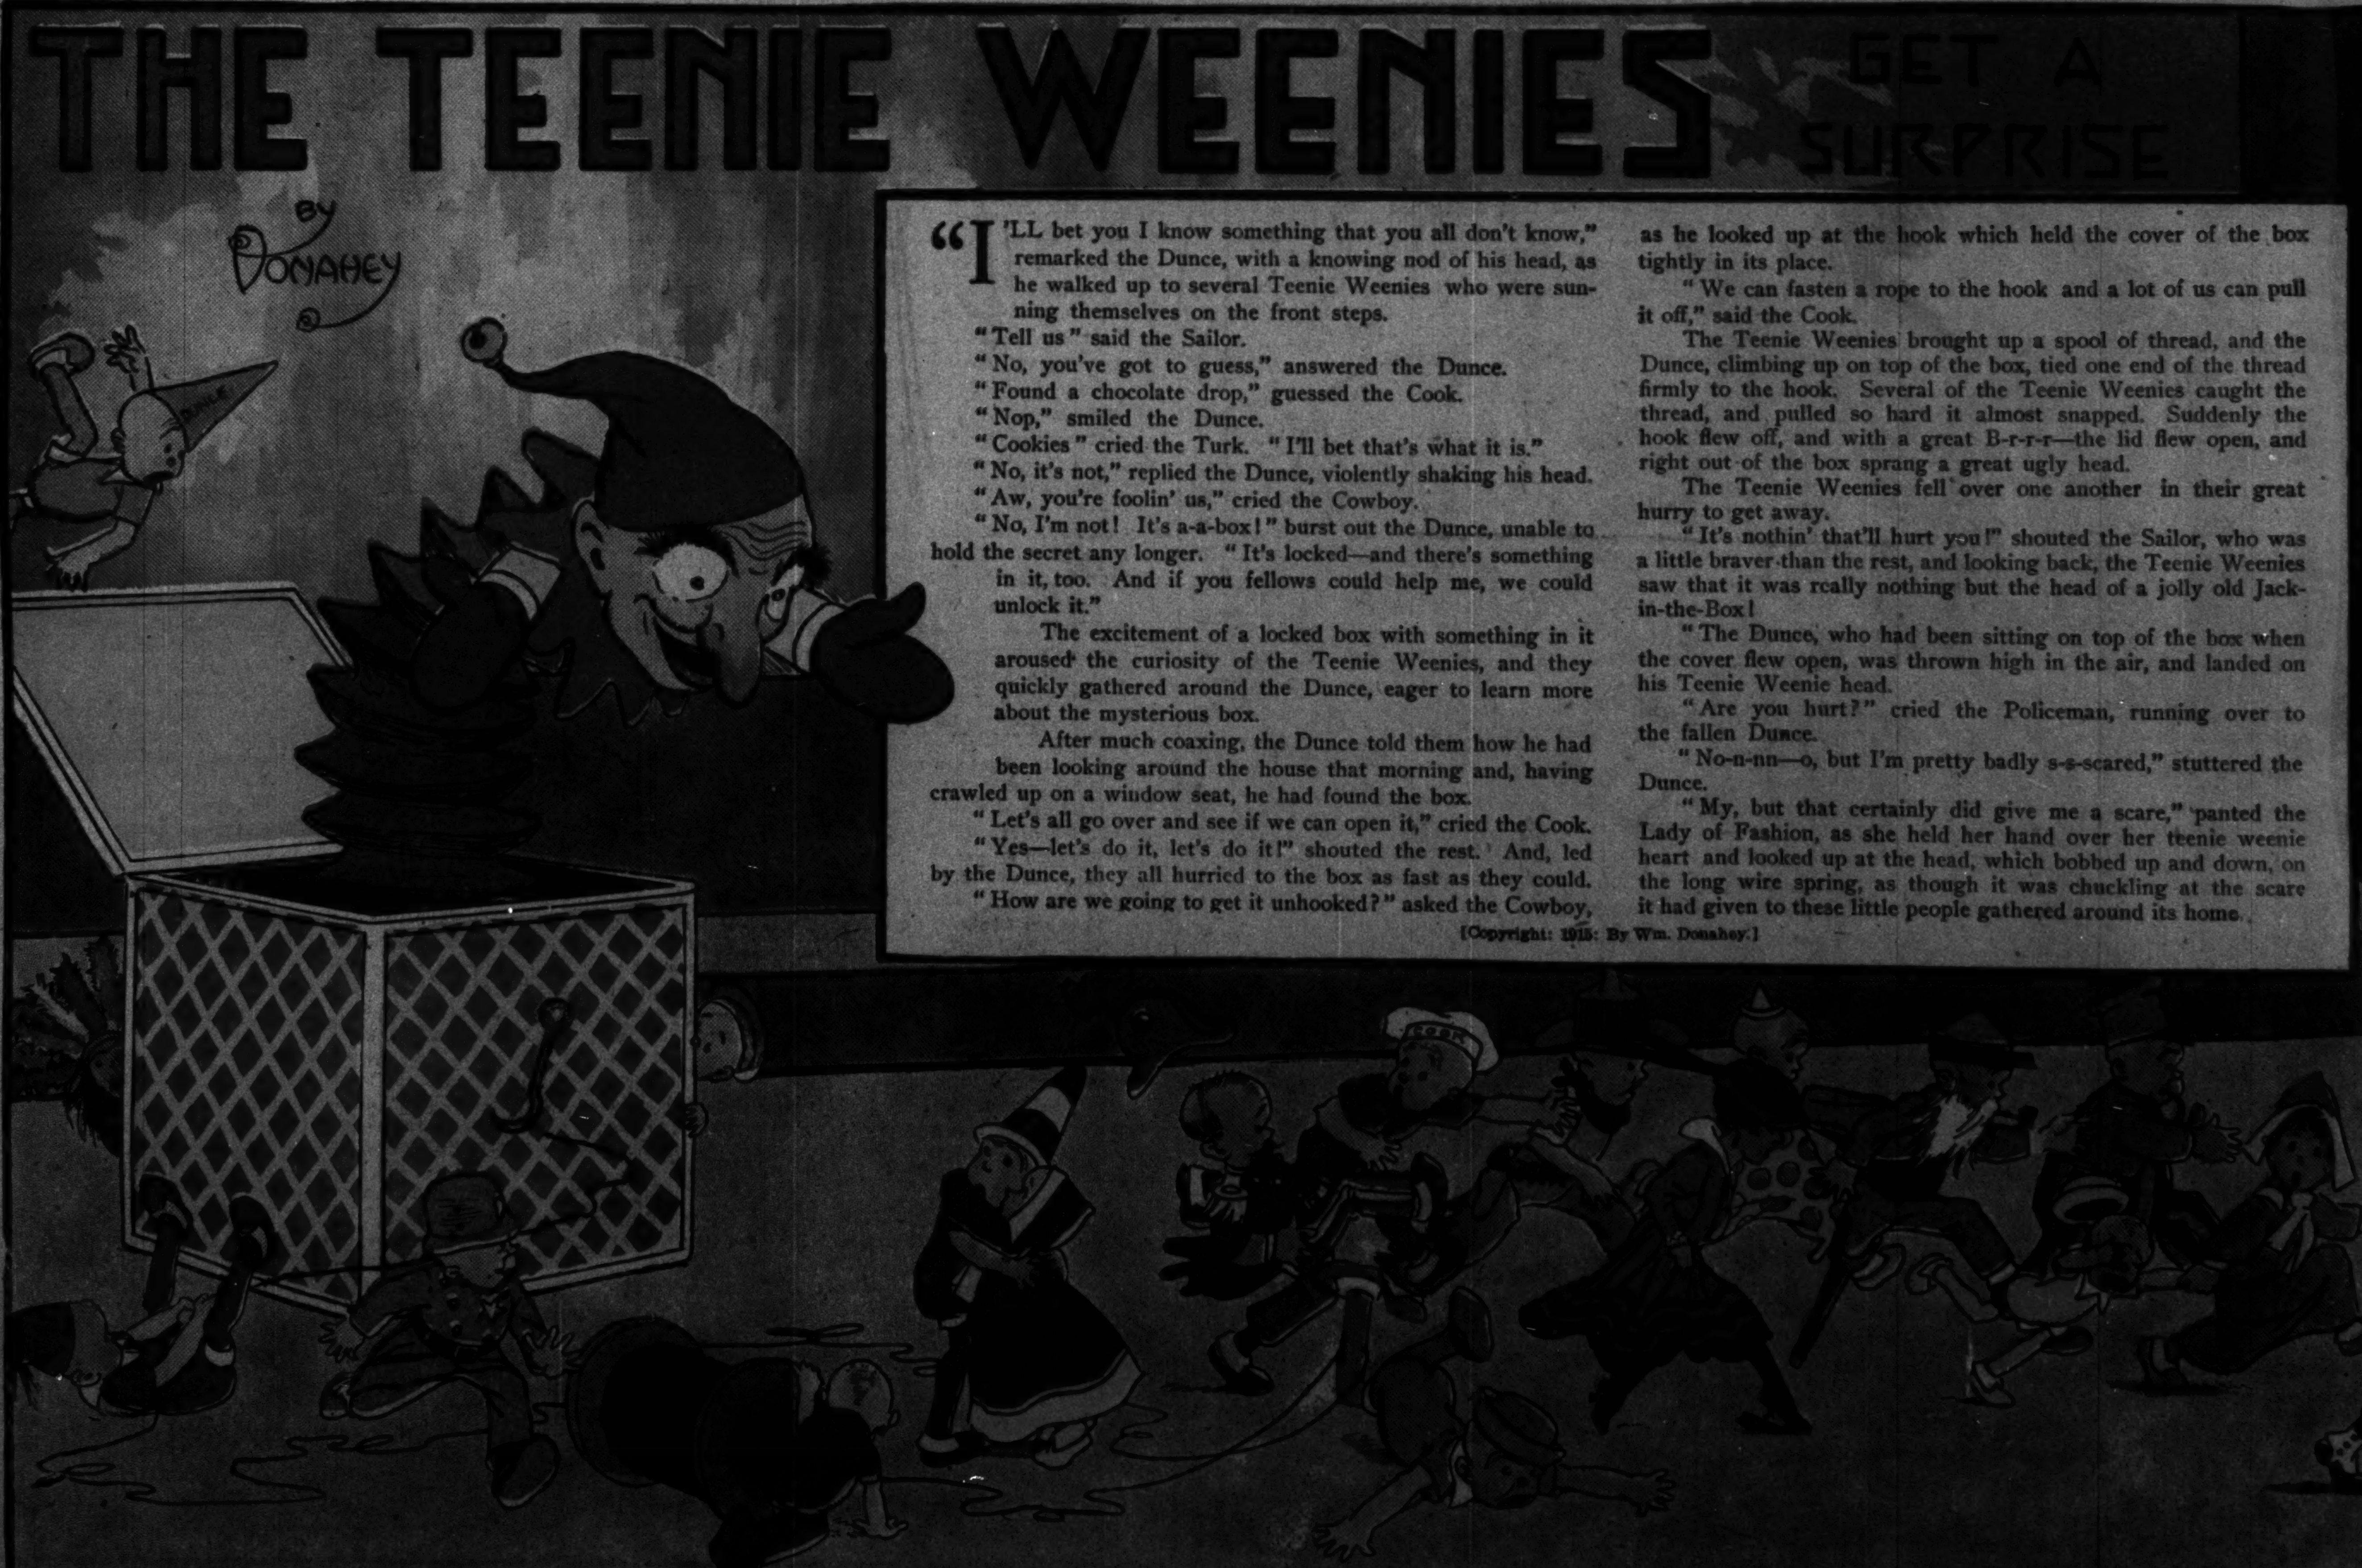
THE TEENIE WEENIES GET A SURPRISE



"I'LL bet you I know something that you all don't know," remarked the Dunce, with a knowing nod of his head, as he walked up to several Teenie Weenies who were sunning themselves on the front steps.

"Tell us" said the Sailor.

"No, you've got to guess," answered the Dunce.

"Found a chocolate drop," guessed the Cook.

"Nop," smiled the Dunce.

"Cookies" cried the Turk. "I'll bet that's what it is."

"No, it's not," replied the Dunce, violently shaking his head.

"Aw, you're foolin' us," cried the Cowboy.

"No, I'm not! It's a-a-box!" burst out the Dunce, unable to hold the secret any longer. "It's locked—and there's something in it, too. And if you fellows could help me, we could unlock it."

The excitement of a locked box with something in it aroused the curiosity of the Teenie Weenies, and they quickly gathered around the Dunce, eager to learn more about the mysterious box.

After much coaxing, the Dunce told them how he had been looking around the house that morning and, having crawled up on a window seat, he had found the box.

"Let's all go over and see if we can open it," cried the Cook.

"Yes—let's do it, let's do it!" shouted the rest. And, led by the Dunce, they all hurried to the box as fast as they could.

"How are we going to get it unhooked?" asked the Cowboy, as he looked up at the hook which held the cover of the box tightly in its place.

"We can fasten a rope to the hook and a lot of us can pull it off," said the Cook.

The Teenie Weenies brought up a spool of thread, and the Dunce, climbing up on top of the box, tied one end of the thread firmly to the hook. Several of the Teenie Weenies caught the thread, and pulled so hard it almost snapped. Suddenly the hook flew off, and with a great B-r-r-r—the lid flew open, and right out of the box sprang a great ugly head.

The Teenie Weenies fell over one another in their great hurry to get away.

"It's nothin' that'll hurt you!" shouted the Sailor, who was a little braver than the rest, and looking back, the Teenie Weenies saw that it was really nothing but the head of a jolly old Jack-in-the-Box!

"The Dunce, who had been sitting on top of the box when the cover flew open, was thrown high in the air, and landed on his Teenie Weenie head.

"Are you hurt?" cried the Policeman, running over to the fallen Dunce.

"No-n-nn—o, but I'm pretty badly s-s-scared," stuttered the Dunce.

"My, but that certainly did give me a scare," panted the Lady of Fashion, as she held her hand over her teenie weenie heart and looked up at the head, which bobbed up and down, on the long wire spring, as though it was chuckling at the scare it had given to these little people gathered around its home.

Patterns by Clotilde

The bride-to-be shortly after Easter is quite as important as the June bride from a clothes point of view, for she has the first chance to try out the new styles. Clotilde is offering six of her exclusive patterns for the spring bride. Three of them are shown this week and three will appear next week. In designing the bridal outfit Clotilde has taken care to incorporate all the salient style features of the moment, at the same time refraining from all extremes. The bride who uses Clotilde's patterns will be able to wear her trousseau this coming summer with the full consciousness that she is still fashionably attired despite fashion's strenuous leaps and bounds. Clotilde, in designing for "The Tribune's" pattern service, keeps the future in mind as well as the present. She knows of changes to be long before the public sees them. She glimpses the end of a style weeks before its decline is evident to the outside world. Therefore she incorporates into her designs only the most reliable and the most authentic fashions extant. Through her it is possible for the conservative and the stylish woman to meet on common ground.

In the designing of a six piece bridal outfit, three of which are shown today and three to be shown next week, Clotilde has achieved a difficult task. She has reconciled the ideal of the bridal gown with existing modes. The wedding dress of softest satin clings, though it possesses the due amount of flare at the hem. The bridesmaid's frock is no less alluring because of its sectional cut, while the traveling suit has availed itself of all possible ruffles just to show that a skirt may be frivolous and still contain the essentials of substantiality.

As far as materials for wedding gowns are concerned, they are much as they always have been. Satin in its supplest form leads in popularity, while handsome brocades in combination with sheerest chiffon are shown in many of the more pretentious frocks. Then, too, there are all the wealth of crêpes in combination with silk and satin. Cotton enthusiasts have pressed into service a cotton voile of an unusually fine quality. Cotton is by no means a synonym for cheapness or for economy. Charming results may be obtained from it by combining with it fine lace and handwork.

There is, of course, much more fullness in the skirt of the bride's gown and that of her bridesmaids' than there was last year, but there is nothing obtrusive in the flare. Indeed in many cases the material is so supple and soft that straight folds seem to have been achieved.

There has been no radical change in the flowers of the bride's bouquet. Roses, white orchids, and valley lilies still lead in popularity, though there are brides who are using less conventional flowers. One particularly attractive combination at a recent fashionable wedding was a bouquet of lilacs in the pinkish lavender tones, combined with exquisitely shaded pink roses.

The cap style of veil arrangement is still fashionable, but there are other ways that are newer. A band of pearls worn across the forehead, after the manner of evening toilets, is stunning, while again a band of filet may be passed across the forehead and made to fit the head snugly like one of the modish long torpedo hats. Then the tulle of the veil can be glimpsed a bit below the band on the forehead and then puffed across the top of the head.

As far as the trousseau proper is concerned the bride of today is different from the traditional bride of a generation ago. Considering the rapidity with which fashions change, it is not a sensible proceeding to amass a profusion of clothes, even if one has an unlimited amount of money. It is wiser to have a limited amount of clothes at the time of marriage and then some more later on. Of course the meaning of a "few" is an elastic one, depending largely on the financial status of the individual. Still the fact remains that a large trousseau is sure to be completely out of style long before it is worn out.

Here Clotilde has shown the going away suit, the wedding gown, and the frock for the bridesmaid, and next week she will show the dinner and dance frock, the negligee for traveling and at home purposes, too and the blouse to be worn with the suit. The patterns for all of these garments may be had for 10 cents. Only the large numbers of orders filled every week make possible the obtaining of Clotilde's exclusive designs at such a remarkably low price. Their perfection of cut is assured, while a single glance at them bears witness to their style and cut.

Nos. 1115 and 1116 come in sizes 34 to 40 bust and No. 1118 comes in sizes 34 to 40 bust.

Nos. 1115 and 1116 comes in sizes 34 to 40 bust and 24 to 30 waist.

1115 AND 1116—This going away costume for the bride is of faille silk and shows flounces over a plain skirt. The sleeves of the belted coat have flaring cuffs and the neck is finished with stylish collar. Any color may be chosen. This suit is of Palm Beach sand shade.

1117—The short gown is the smart one for the bride of this season. This charming one is made with a flaring tunic over a plain skirt finished with a pleated frill. Material is of Callot satin, while the sleeves, the surplice portion of the blouse, and the frill on the skirt are of chiffon.

1118—For the bridesmaid there is no material more suitable than Pussy Willow taffeta. The gown here may be copied in any color. The skirt is cut in sections, which gives a proper amount of flare at the lower edge. The draped bodice is arranged over a fitted lining. Sleeves and frill at the lower edge of the bodice are of tulle and jeweled buckles hold the shoulder straps in place.

The Married Flirt.

IF the married man flirt could be eliminated once and for all time, with his departure would go one of the big problems that confronts the girl who works. Beside this annoyance all others seem slight and hardly worth worrying over.

It is the young girl starting out in business who has a hard time of it when she encounters the married flirt, especially when the flirtatious one is her employer. The inexperienced girl who considers herself fortunate when she succeeds in securing a position feels that she cannot afford to offend her employer and must endure almost anything rather than risk his anger and the prospect of again having to look for a position. She does repulse his advances, but she feels that it has to be done carefully and tactfully so as not to make him angry enough to discharge her even though she recoils from having to conciliate the man in order to save her position.

I heard of a girl who left her first position because her employer, who was married, persisted in asking her to take luncheon and dinner with him in spite of the fact that she refused him consistently. At first her refusals seemed to effect him not at all, but after the third or fourth one he said, "O, come now, you know you don't mean that. Come along with me to dinner or one of these days your coolness will make me angry." This thinly veiled threat was the last straw and she left him right then to begin again the task of looking for a position that a girl without experience could fill.

She had such a hard time finding another that she says she fears that if she were unfortunate enough to have a second experience of that kind that she might not have the courage to do as she did the first time, and wonders whether she would not put up with the annoyance, at least until she had experience enough and sufficient confidence in herself to make it comparatively easy to find work again. The girl who is entirely dependent upon her own efforts to live dreads the thought of being without work and rarely leaves a position unless she has another one in view.

Another girl who has met the married flirt says she does not believe any girl has to put up with such an annoyance, that any girl with spirit enough to tell the man plainly the way she feels about his attentions can promptly get rid of him.

I think the majority of male flirts realize that when a girl declines their invitations she means it and they will not bother her again.

But there are men, undoubtedly, who will persist after a girl has made it clear that their attentions are unwelcome and these are the ones who cause the women who come in contact with them in business so much annoyance. It is this type of man that would take advantage of an inexperienced girl, thinking that her timidity or the fear of having to give up her position will prevent her from squelching him, and would probably leave the older and more experienced girl severely alone.

On the other hand, I do not believe there are so many male flirts as to be alarming. I have no knowledge of them from personal experience, nor have any of my friends, whom I have asked about it, but since I have been conducting this department I have received so many letters from girls who have had unpleasant experiences with them that I know they do exist and do cause a great deal of worry and annoyance to the women who are unfortunate enough to meet them in business.

He Woke Up.

He was a fine young fellow, but bashful. He had been coming to the house for about a year, but never in that time did he utter a tender word. One summer evening he was coming down the street. I was sitting on our porch and all the neighbors were on theirs. One of the children in the neighborhood, a little fellow of 5, spied him and yelled, "O, May, here comes your husband." It was embarrassing, yet amusing, but it seemed to wake him up, and that is how it started. J. W.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

25 cent bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance.

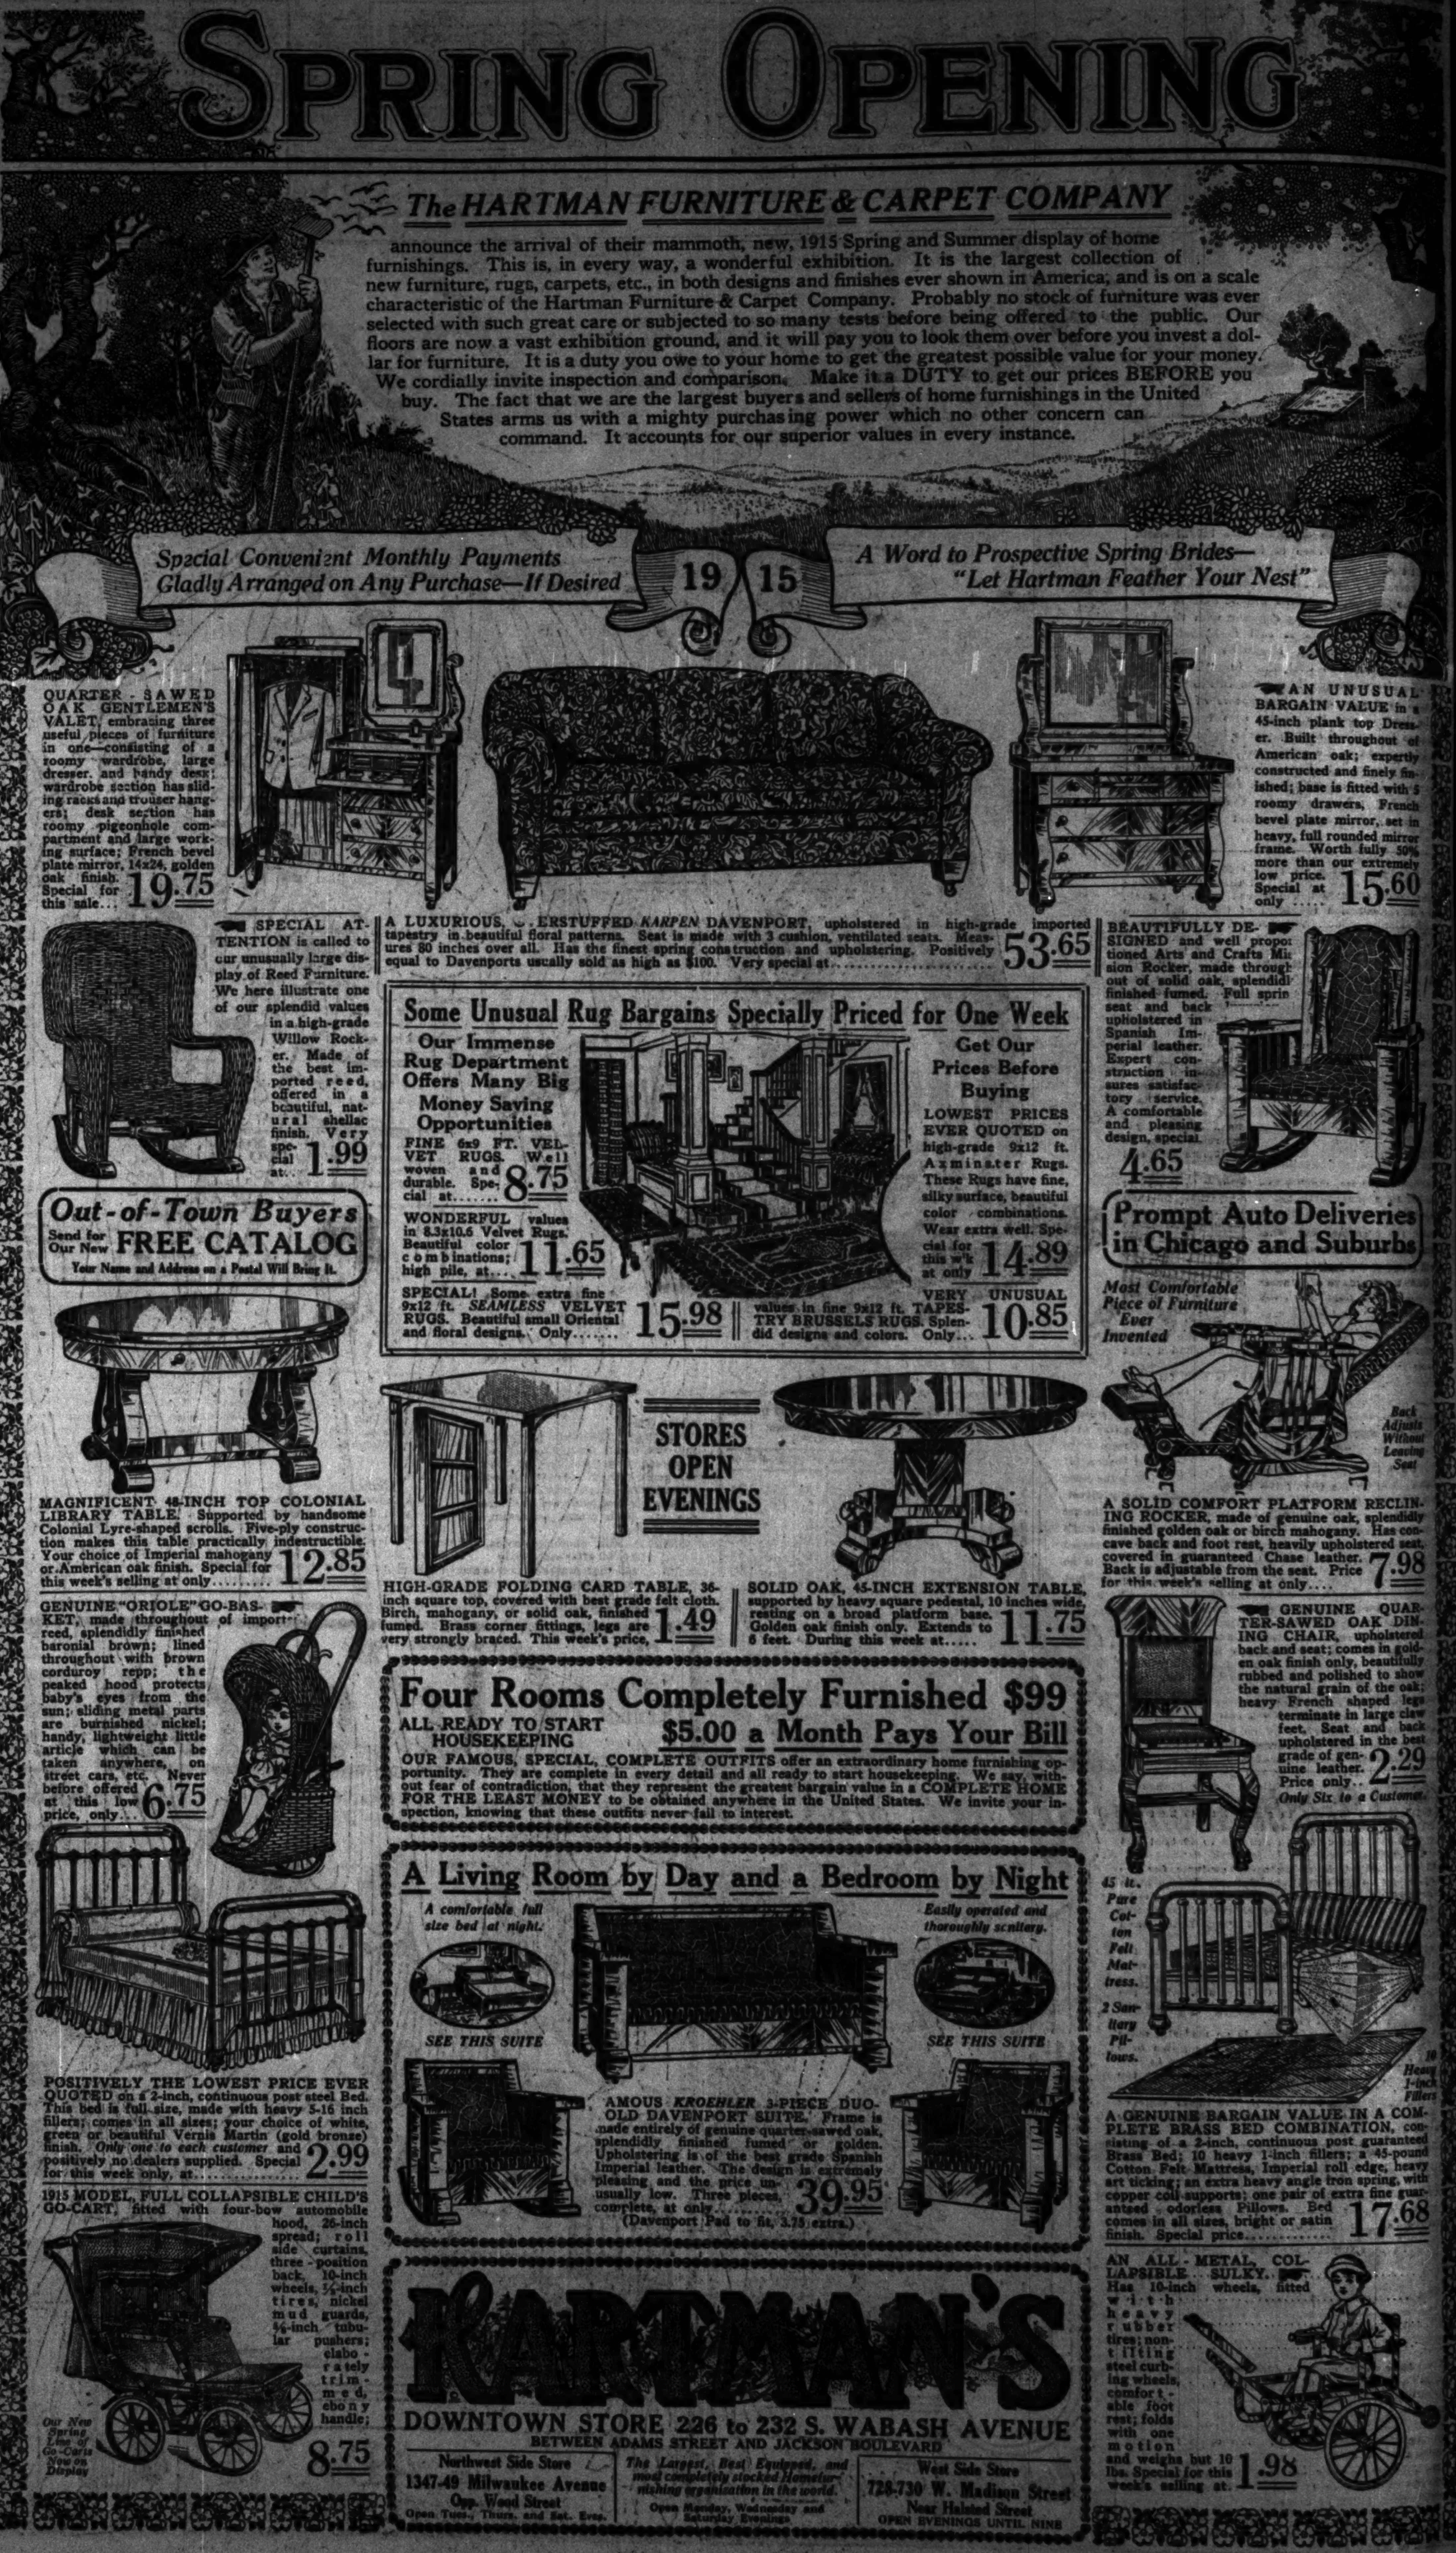
Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

COSTIVE BOWELS, HEADACHE, COLDS, TAKE CASCARETS

No headache, sour stomach, bad cold or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Furred Tongue, Bad Colds, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.—Advertisement.



SPRING OPENING

The HARTMAN FURNITURE & CARPET COMPANY

announce the arrival of their mammoth, new, 1915 Spring and Summer display of home furnishings. This is, in every way, a wonderful exhibition. It is the largest collection of new furniture, rugs, carpets, etc., in both designs and finishes ever shown in America, and is on a scale characteristic of the Hartman Furniture & Carpet Company. Probably no stock of furniture was ever selected with such great care or subjected to so many tests before being offered to the public. Our floors are now a vast exhibition ground, and it will pay you to look them over before you invest a dollar for furniture. It is a duty you owe to your home to get the greatest possible value for your money. We cordially invite inspection and comparison. Make it a DUTY to get our prices BEFORE you buy. The fact that we are the largest buyers and sellers of home furnishings in the United States arms us with a mighty purchasing power which no other concern can command. It accounts for our superior values in every instance.

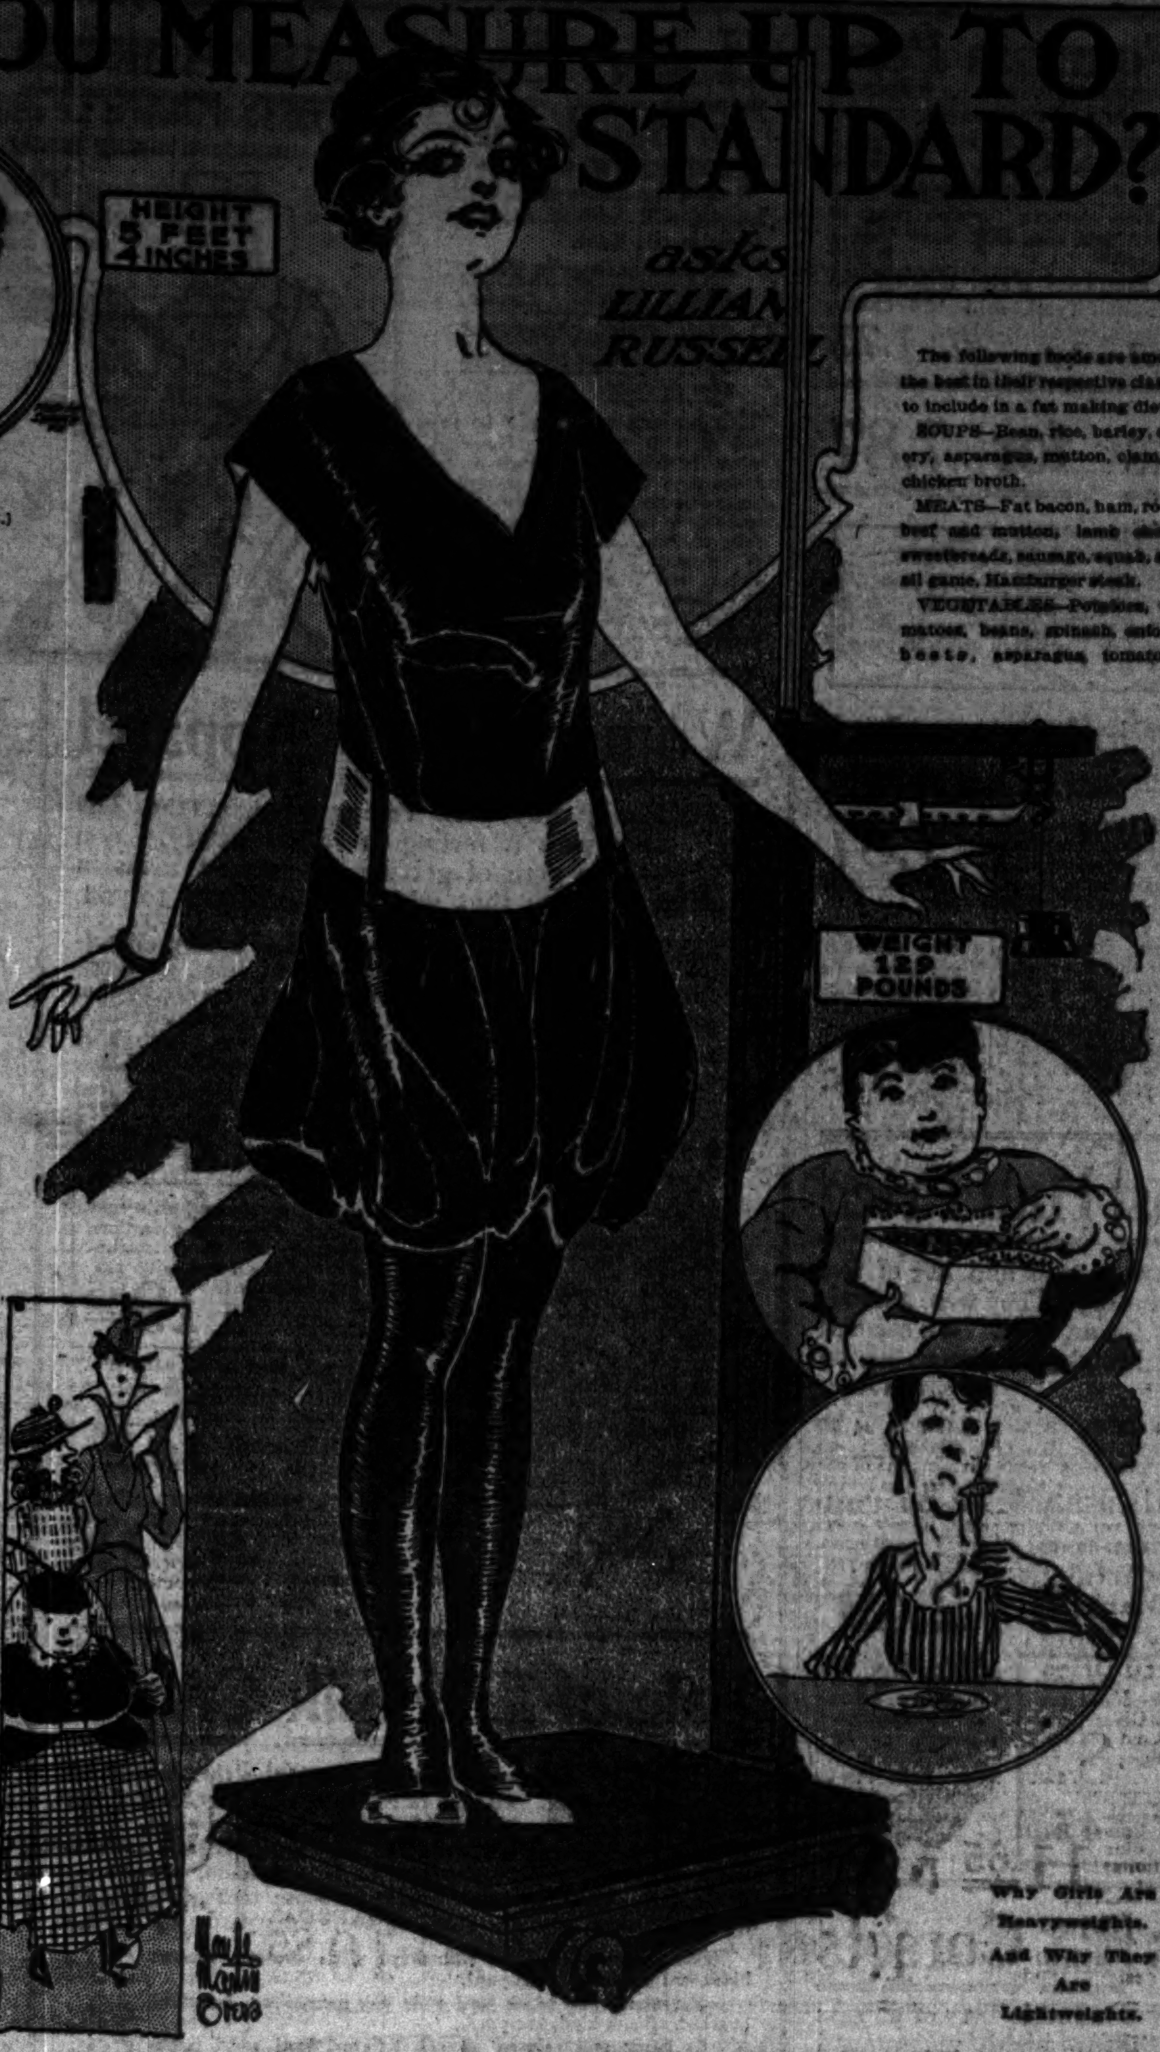
DO YOU MEASURE UP TO STANDARD?

asks LILLIAN RUSSELL



Why Girls Are Heavyweights. And Why They Are Lightweights.

(Copyright: 1915: By Lillian Russell.)

HOW do you average up according to the weight table on this page? Are you too thin? Or are you too fat? Are you in earnest about wanting to add on or take off the extra pounds necessary?

Paradoxical as it may seem, the two most essential things necessary to both adding on and taking off avoirdupois are the same—correct diet and exercise.

I shall not dwell at length in this article on diets and exercise for reducing, because many valuable, practical, and tried hints have been given in this column so recently. But for the girl whom the small brother calls "Skinny," and who causes the rest of the family apparent worry for fear she will "blow away," I shall tell what kind of food is fat producing, on my medically indorsed theory that nearly 90 per cent of thinness may be corrected by the right diet, even though you are a victim of worry and sleeplessness, overwork, and other contributing causes. Proper feeding will in a reasonable time offset these ills.

Make up your mind, therefore, that if you are twenty-five pounds below the average for your height and age you are undernourished and the remedy lies in a mixed diet of fat meats, cereals, and vegetables, with plenty of the real fat foods. You must know just what are fat producing foods. You don't make fat by increasing the amount of food you consume unless that food is fat producing. Some of the heaviest eaters I have known have been men and women who looked as if they never had a good square meal. It isn't how much you consume, but what kind of food you consume, that will give you the desired weight.

Quite a percentage of thinness is due to incorrect diet since childhood. If this is the case with you, you will find flesh building a little harder work, because you will have to overcome dietary irregularities of years. But your case is anything but hopeless if you are otherwise physically sound.

Most thin folk are "poor fat eaters." They say fat is hard to digest. But this is really a prejudice. Fat isn't hard to digest. You can learn to digest enough fats, properly taken, to fill out the most cavernous hollows if you have a mind to.

Of course, moderation is as necessary in this as in other remedies. If you were to start in violently with an attempt to consume all the butter, cream, olive oil, and bacon in sight, at the end of the first week you would be possessed of an aversion for these fat producing foods that you probably never would overcome. A reasonable daily excess of fats added to your regular maintenance diet is the best way to go at flesh building. And let your regular maintenance diet be properly proportioned as to wholesome cereals, vegetables, and meats.

Butter is the most easily digested fat. You might gradually increase the quantity of butter at a meal. Cream, olive oil, and bacon fat are among the other more easily digested fats, and the use of these foodstuffs might be increased daily. There is no such thing as "just as good" substitutes for fats for fattening purposes. Your ultimate success in gaining flesh will depend on how well you can accustom yourself to actual fat producing foods.

The following foods are among the best in their respective classes to include in a fat making diet:

SOUPS—Bean, rice, barley, celery, asparagus, mutton, clam, or chicken broth.

MEATS—Fat bacon, ham, roast beef and mutton, lamb chops, sweetbreads, sausage, squab, and all game, Hamburger steak.

VEGETABLES—Potatoes, tomatoes, beans, spinach, onions, beets, asparagus, tomatoes, lettuce with oil dressing. (Plenty of butter and oil should be incorporated in preparing these.)

FARINACEOUS—Oatmeal, mush, hominy, rice, whole wheat bread, cornmeal, cornbread, milk toast, biscuits and muffins, gems, graham and oatmeal crackers.

DESSERTS—Sago, milk, tapioca, custards; all cooked fruits with fresh cream; rice with fresh cream, ice cream, and apple pudding.

DRINKS—Milk, chocolate, cocoa, and water. (Olive oil after each meal.)

I might add that American cheese and cream cheese and eggs in every form except fried should be included in your diet.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

THERE is one custom among American young women and girls which is unattractive and should be avoided, and that is the habit of patting, smoothing, and arranging the hair in public. Dress your hair so carefully before you leave home that it needs no attention when you go out into the world. If you have many unruly, short hairs wear an invisible net over your coiffure or use so many invisible hairpins that it is held quite compact and close. But do not prink in public. It is bad form. And handling the hair is the most objectionable form of prinking.

MAY: It is pleasant to be invited to parties where your friends are asked, but if you are not included in the hostess' list for that particular occasion you can do nothing about it. No, do not go to see her or ask her to your house in the hopes of so acquiring a belated invitation. Have too much self-respect to give the matter a second thought and do not make it a topic of conversation with your intimates. Probably this particular hostess plans asking you some other time. At any rate don't take matters of this sort to heart. There are so many really serious problems in life!

M. R.: I do not think I would send your man friend a present on his birthday. If, however, the impulse is strong to show him some friendly recognition of the event make your gift a good, worth while book, either a classic or a modern book of essays.

JAMES G.: If you know the young woman well enough to ask her to go to the theater with you alone—and that shows a certain measure of intimacy—you probably know her well enough to ask her if she minds going and returning in the cars with you. It is foolish to spend money in ways you can't afford. If she is the right sort of girl she will go gladly with you in the cars to the theater, understanding the motive that actuates you to offer that form of conveyance.

* *

MRS. VAN S.: In making a first call or a party call on the three women of one household of whom you speak leave three of your cards and four of your husband's—the fourth one being left for the man of the family. For other less formal calls one of your cards bent in the middle would do. Bending it indicates that you are asking for all of the women.

What Fascinated Me Most.

What one thing more than any other fascinated you most about the man or woman who fascinated you most? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

His Feet Were All Right.

He wasn't at all good looking; was almost homely, in fact. However, all defects, in my eyes, were remedied by the fact that he was the best dancer I ever met. Dancing with him surely was a pleasure I never cared to miss.

A Good Listener.

She had such a fascinating way of listening to everything I would tell her. I was struck by her evident interest in my relations, of my ambition, and future. Her small, pleasant face would reflect all the emotions that played over mine in the course of my narrative of the hopes of my life. She impressed me, and still impresses me, as being the only girl in the world to whom I would care to relate all my troubles and sorrows.

She Couldn't Cook Them.

It was her glossy dark red hair and the way she did it up. It looked like a pile of Parker house rolls browned to a T. Indeed, it so fascinated me that I married her, and my fascination has since had a relapse.

What Beauty Tricks Transformed You?

Did you transform yourself from an ugly duckling by a beauty trick? Write and tell me what that beauty trick was. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Address Lillian Russell, Chicago Tribune.

Tooth Out in Front.

The perfect horror of going to a dentist made me ugly and old looking because I had one tooth out in front. I met a young woman one day with a tooth out in front identically like mine. I then realized how badly mine made me look. I paid a belated visit to the dentist and at little expense and pain had the tooth replaced and others polished or filled. Now my friends compliment me on looking young again.

Bathed in the Dew.

My grandmother gave me a recipe that I've found infallible. During the summer months I bathe my face every morning with dew that settles on the clover. I then walk briskly for half an hour. I am 54 years old, but my face is fair and unlined and my form supple and girlish.

H. G.

With Hair Curlers.

I cannot resist the temptation of telling you of my little beauty trick. I have beautiful chestnut brown hair and gray eyes. I always dressed my hair neatly. Although I have many short ends, I always pin them in so none would go astray. And I dress accordingly. But no matter what I wear or how I dress my hair all my friends would ever say was, "How very neat you look." How I longed to hear some one say, "How pretty you look."

I laid awake many a night thinking of some way to make me look attractive as well as neat. One day I bought a set of hair curlers. I put up my hair that night, which happened to be Saturday night, and, lo and behold! my dream was realized. For the next day everybody remarked my changed appearance.

Curling my short ends instead of pinning them in softened all my features, my eyes especially. The curled ends made them large and dreamy. I now can wear all the lace and frills that I please. Everybody says that I look like 16, when I really am almost 25.

Did You Ever Know a Great Spender?

Did you ever know a great spender—one whose idea was that the cost meant nothing so long as he was having a good time? Write on one side of the paper, and if your letter is published you will get $1. Address the Spenders' Contest, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. No manuscripts returned.

"Coal Oil Johnnie."

A number of years ago when the oil boom was on in Pennsylvania I knew a man who sold his land on which oil was found for $150,000. His escapades caused him to be known as "Coal Oil Johnnie." He was a wonderful spender. He would put $10,000 or $15,000 in small bills in a satchel, jump a train, and go to some distant town or city and proceed to "open her up." Many a saloon he bought and gave to some stranger drinking at the bar with him. He gave many a beggar a hundred dollars. Once he bought a jewelry store and gave it to a chap who was admiring a watch in the display window. In about a year "Coal Oil Johnnie" was broke.

"Bang!" Went Salary.

He was a machinist and received $125 per month. A carnival was visiting our town this particular summer and he went to see the sights. He spent his whole month's pay trying to knock over the "nigger babies." He only received three cigars for all his money and he never even kicked about it.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Used to Have a Rosebud Mouth.

My husband is a dentist, and before we were married I went to him to have my teeth fixed. He was so gentle and kind to me that I couldn't help loving him, and he said: "Your little rosebud mouth is so small I can hardly work in it and I am so afraid of hurting you," etc. Three months after our marriage he again fixed my teeth. This time he yanked my mouth open and yelled, "Keep your mouth open if you want that tooth fixed. It certainly is big enough."

Bright Sayings of the Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The stories may be sent in either by children or their parents. The only condition is the story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Tommy was intently watching his mother pack up some of his baby clothes, which he had long since outgrown and which she was making ready to send to a needy family. Everything went well until his mother started to pack two little blue sleeveless undershirts, when Tommy strenuously objected. "Why, Tommy," his mother said, "you can never wear them again. They're too small." "I know that," said Tommy, "but I'm gonna save 'em for my own little boy."

My husband was trying to do some "stunts" which he had seen at the show the night before and our neighbor's little boy was much interested in watching him. After a few minutes, the child came to me and said, "Do you know, I think your husband is an awfully cute little rummy?"

She's Society Thief.

At the age of 17 I was turned out, a "finished product," from a select school for young women. While a student I, like my classmates, learned to drink.

I drank because I liked it. I was duly presented to society, and on that night partook so freely of the punch that I was carried to my room—drunk.

Mother drank. All our set drank. Father did not. He was busy earning money for us to spend. When I had been on the matrimonial market four years and no young man asked for my heart and hand mother began to take notice. I had had plenty of admirers—too many—with whom I drank and talked roughly. I can now see, fifteen years afterward, that no man desires such a wife.

My fifth season out mother told me that I had to get married—anything—for I was getting old. I was 23, yet I was older in vice than twice my years would warrant. Father failed in health, was taken to a sanatorium, and mother and I tried hard to keep up with our set. We had little or no money, and we sold our jewels. When the money was gone we were up against poverty.

I went to a reception given to the governor that night and drank freely. I stole two necklaces and four pins. Later I disposed of them for $6,000. I was a thief. Concealing the notes in my muff I went home and secreted them in an old hat box in my closet. Then, to make it appear plausible, I reported the loss of a diamond pin at the governor's reception, and duly described the same (a myth) to the detective. The thief was never discovered.

Mother and I became poorer and poorer. I still had a part of my $6,000 hidden away, and one day in a sleepy little suburb I purchased an old tumbledown house with ten acres of land, and later mother and I moved out to our new home.

I told her I had saved my allowance for years and sold my rings. Then father came home, shaken, old, incapacitated for work, but happy that he had such a far seeing daughter. I buckled down to work and have held to it for fifteen years. I have paid back—under the cloak of anonymity—the $6,000 that I stole. But I am nevertheless a thief, and the thought tortures me. I still drink, but not as I did before. Now it is only on Saturday nights when I drink myself into a stupor and try to forget.

Slept in Shower.

It was 12 o'clock one winter night and we all were at a party. It was too late to go home, so we were obliged to sleep at the house. My place was in the bathroom and I had to take it because it was the only place left. I made myself comfortable in the tub by putting a pillow at one end and a quilt around me, and dropped into slumber. Whether it was something I ate or something I drank, I don't know, but at any rate I began to dream that I was going swimming and was taking a shower beforehand. Subconsciously I turned on the shower attachment on the tub and when I awoke with a gasp there were several of the guests bending double with laughter, while the water poured down upon me.

Insure Your Business

Advertising will "insure" your business, Mr. Merchant. A business that is not built upon advertising depends upon either location or personality. Such a business may be swept away by a death or the expiration of a lease.

But the advertised business becomes an institution. It has an individuality and personality of its own, which accident will not take from it.

When an ordinary business must be disposed of, the assets consist of stock and fixtures.

The advertised business has the added asset: good will. It has crystallized its reputation and made its very name a thing of definite value.

And the best part of it is that this valuable insurance may be obtained at less than no cost at all. The premiums in the way of advertising bills, if properly expended, are quickly regained through increased sales.

It is practically a case of eating one's cake, yet having it intact, for the permanent benefit grows as the temporary benefits are enjoyed.

There are many businesses that have been built up and "insured" by Tribune advertising. It will pay any merchant or manufacturer to write the advertising manager of The Tribune and ask for further information about business insurance.

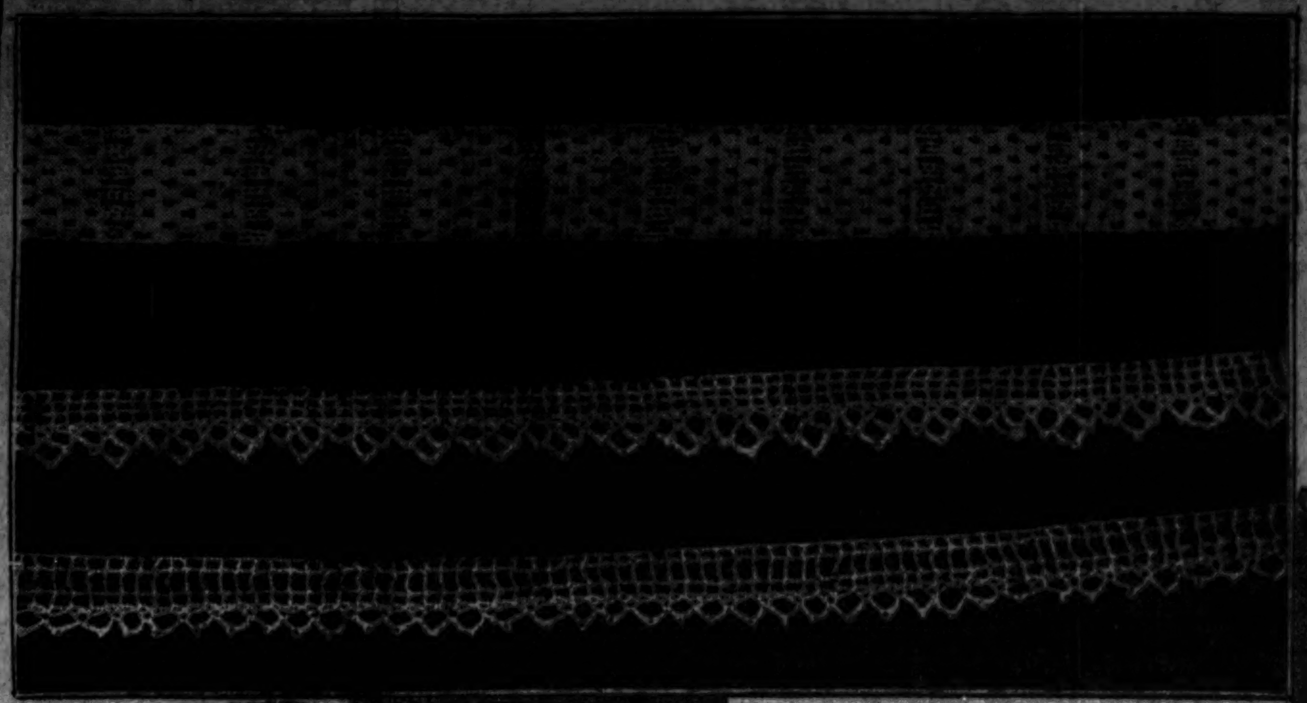
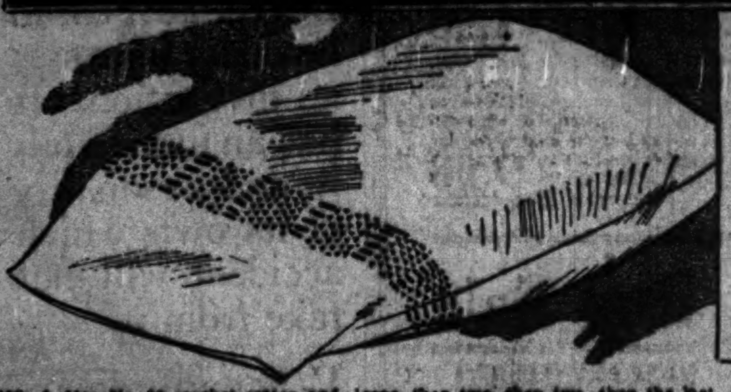
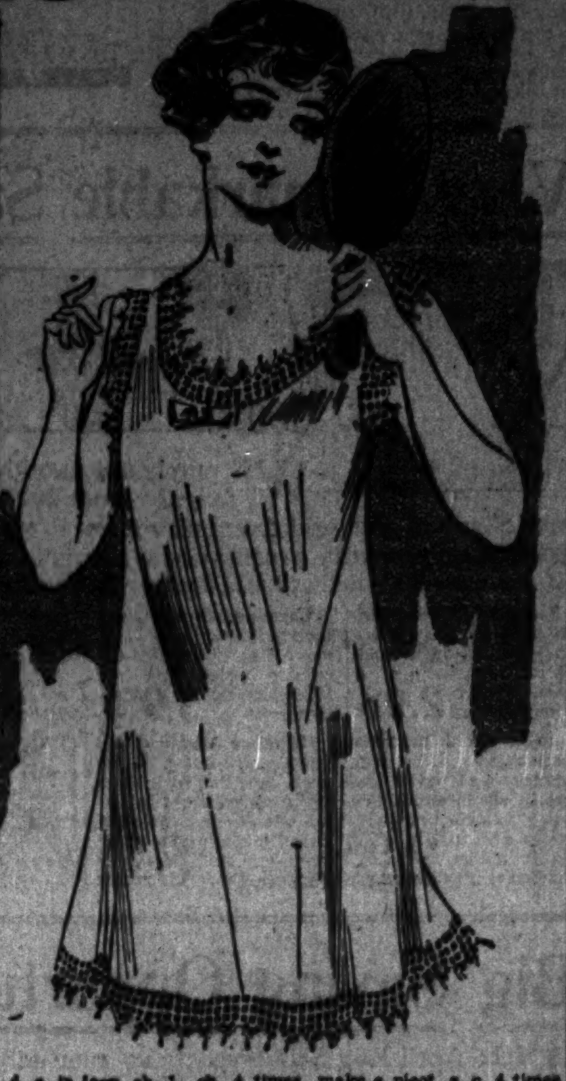
CROCHET EDGING and INSERTION for LINGERIE TOWELS and PILLOW CASES





Mrs. J. Ricker of 6726 Sheridan road is the winner of the $5 prize this week. These are crochet edges with ribbon run through them and also a crochet insertion for sheets, pillow cases, and towels.

Are you a clever needlecrafter? Have you any original embroidery designs or original crochet and lace patterns you have used yourself and which you have found attractive and satisfactory? THE TRIBUNE will pay $5 for each design published. These designs must be strictly original. Full instructions should accompany crochet and lace patterns. Address Fashion Editor, CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.



NO. 1—Use No. 20 crochet cotton and No. 7 steel crochet hook.

Make a chain of 24 sts.

First row—Make a d. c. in 7th st. of ch., 2 d. c. in next ch. st., skip 1 st., 1 d. c. in next st., 2 d. c in next st., skip 1 st., 1 d. c. in next st., 2 d. c. in next st., skip 1 st., 1 d. c. in next st., 2 d. c. in next st., skip 1 st., 1 d. c. in next st., 2 d. c. in next st. This makes five shells. Ch. 1, make a d. c. in last st. of ch.

Second row—Ch. 3, 2 d. c. in ch., 3 d. c. in next space between shells, repeat to end of row, making six shells.

Third row—Ch. 5, 3 d. c. in space, make 4 more shells of 3 d. c. in each space, ch. 1 d. c. in last d. c. of lower shell.

Fourth row—Ch. 5, 2 d. c. in space, 3 d. c. in each space to end of row.

Fifth row—Ch. 5, 3 d. c. in space, make four more shells of 3 d. c. in each space, ch. 1, d. c. in last d. c. of lower shell.

Sixth row—Ch. 4, put thread over needle three times, crochet all stitches off the needle by drawing thread through two loops, then two, then two; thread over three times again, draw through two loops, then two, then two, then the last two. Repeat between each shell to end of row.

Seventh row—Ch. 5, 2 d. c. between shells, 3 d. c. in next space between shells, repeat to end of row. Make every 6th row like directions given for 6th row, by throwing thread over needle three times.

Third row—Ch. 2, d. c. in d. c. ch. 2, d. c. in d. c., ch. 2, d. c. in loop, ch. 1, d. c. in same loop, ch. 7, fasten back in small loop beside large loop, s. c. over loop 4 times, ch. 7, slip st. in loop near picot, s. c. over ch. 4 times, make a picot, s. c. 4 times over ch., 1 s. c. over next loop, make a picot, s. c. 3 times more over rest of ch.

Fourth row—Ch. 1 d. c. in loop, ch. 1 d. c. in same loop. This makes one complete figure of three loops. Continue from here on same as second row. Use Nos. 70 and 100 crochet cotton.

Love Letters

This department appears every other day in "The Daily Tribune."

Home and Prison.

A young husband and father is in a federal prison. Nearly every day the mail brings him a love message from home.

"O God, what the word 'home' means to a man in prison!" the prisoner writes. "Such messages come as an immediate response to an 'S O S' call sent out to just one heart in all the world, and as well as that tomorrow's sun will rise in the east do I know that her love will be mine always. You do not wonder, then, that I am happy in my present condition, despite this terrible cloud which is now our lot and that to both of us the anticipatory pleasure of my return to wife and baby helps me mightily to wear a smile throughout the livelong day. O it is such a good old world after all."

His wife's letter follows:

"My Own Dearest: This flower promises to carry some of my love to you, for it is just like our wedding flower and the fragrance of a sweet pea always brings back to me such a sweet memory.

"I don't know just what it will tell you, but I am sure you can hear some word from it, for I've had it very close to my lips, and now it comes as a messenger to the sweetest husband and daddy in all the world.

"We are having grand weather now, so each day you may know I am out of doors watching our sweet baby as he prattles along over the yard. You never saw such handsful of trash as he brings in to me; sometimes it will be a fruit jar rubber, a stick and a rock, or string; again it will be something else just as boyish. I always take on over it greatly, for it is so sweet to me—everything connected with baby.

"Dear daddy, we do wish you could see us now playing around here and there. For if you were here with us that would make our world complete. We are trying to be patient until you come home, but we are making an awful botch of our efforts.

"Take good care of your dear self, my sweetheart, and love us heaps and heaps.

"A world of love from your wife and baby to you."

The following is a copy of a reply from him:

"To My Precious Wife at Home: Yes, your wonderful letter came Sunday, just as you planned it should. I knew on Friday that you were writing to me. I thought of the corner in the library where you were sitting, and of how sweet you looked and I could see a tear come trickling down your cheek and fall upon the sheet before you, and how you laid aside your pen for the moment and went to the piano and then I listened and could hear you softly playing and could see upon your lovely face that sweet, sad smile and which told me that your brave heart was listening to the heavenly voice within assuring you that your lover would be coming home before long.

"Then I followed the letter on its journey through one state and another and still another, until it was placed in my waiting hands. Do you reckon I seize your letters as eagerly and read them with as keen an interest as I used to when we were only sweethearts? Oh! A hundred times so, my love, and it is so because I'm coming to more fully realize how great is the depth of your love for me. These months since I left you and our precious baby boy seem like so many years, and more to me. But though the days seem like weeks, and weeks like months, and months like years, every moment in its passing makes my love for you all the stronger. I stop in my work because I think it is your voice I hear. I stop anon when eating, because I think I see you across the table and in my dreams, love, I am restored to you in all the glorious relations of our former happy home.

"And, sweetheart, do you remember how I carried away one of the baby's runover, wornout little slippers and one of his little socks? Well, I have them before me now and the tiny sock, constantly reminding me tenderly and forcibly of the little angel in our home, is used as a bookmark in my Bible.

"How I kiss them and how I love them, because they speak to me of home and wife and baby! A trinity which dares all the evil spirits of earth to put one straw in my pathway!

"Until I see you, my love, good night.
"Ever THINE OWN."

"The Tribune" will pay $5 for every original love letter published. No letters copied from a book or magazine will be considered. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune." Letters must be written on only one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

BREAK A CHILD'S COLD BY GIVING SYRUP OF FIGS

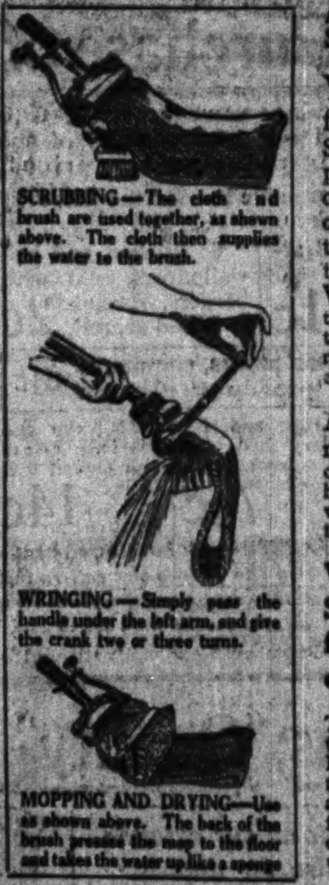
Cleanses the little liver and bowels and they get well quick.

When your child suffers from a cold don't wait; give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, snuffles and has caught cold or is feverish or has a sore throat give a good dose of "California Syrup of Figs" to evacuate the bowels, no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

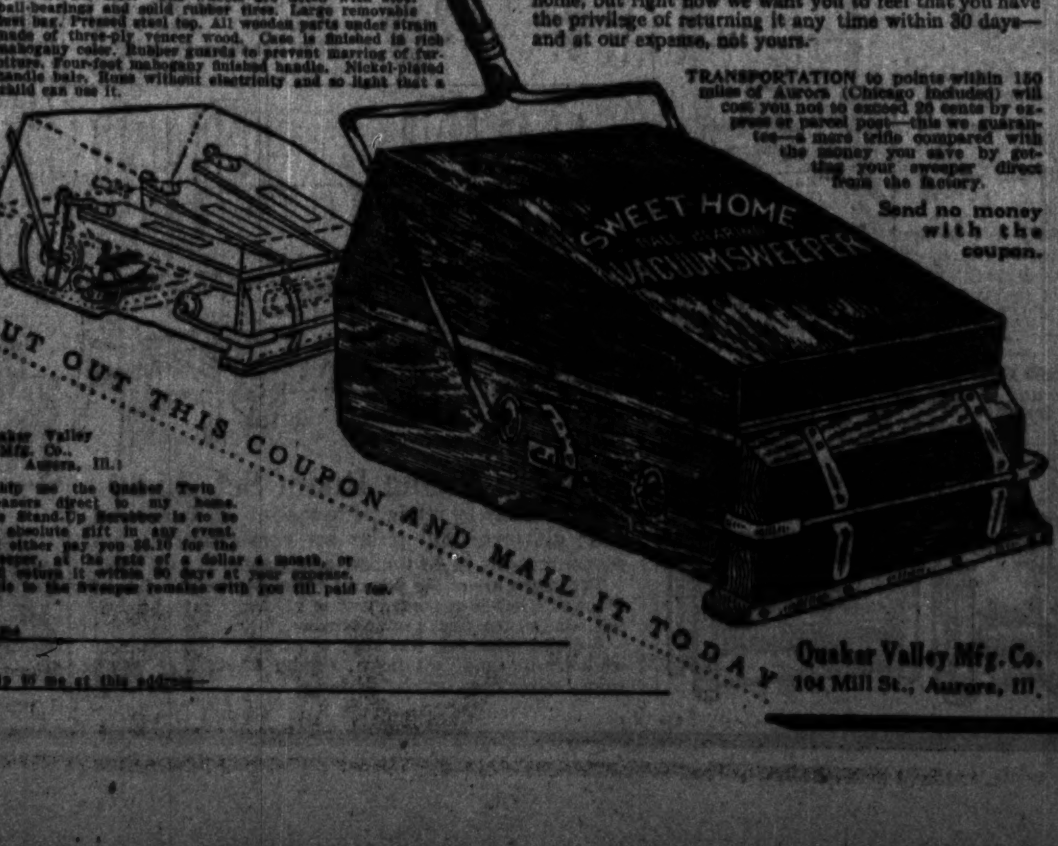
Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."—Advertisement.



SCRUBBING—The cloth and brush are used together, as shown above. The cloth then supplies the water to the brush.

WRINGING—Simply pass the handle under the left arm, and give the crank two or three turns.

MOPPING AND DRYING—Use as shown above. The back of the brush presses the mop to the floor and takes the water up like a sponge.



SWEET HOME BALL-BEARING VACUUM SWEEPER
CUT OUT THIS COUPON AND MAIL IT TODAY

AN ABSOLUTE GIFT

To Thrifty Home Queens Everywhere

From the Company Whose Factory-Shipment Plan Knocked the Underpinning from the High Prices of Vacuum Sweepers and Placed the "Sweet Home," the Monarch of them All, Within the Reach of EVERY HOUSEWIFE IN AMERICA.

A Quaker Stand-Up Scrubber now goes FREE with every Sweet Home Sweeper, and both go without the payment of a cent in advance.

You will remember, Madam, that prior to our first newspaper announcement that we would ship the Sweet Home Ball-Bearing Vacuum Sweeper for $6.10—the same price that a merchant would have to pay if he bought a carload of them—no Vacuum Sweeper worthy of the name had ever been offered you, either by a dealer or canvassing agent, for less than ten dollars, and that the prices ranged from that upward to twenty dollars. We knew we were offering you a better Vacuum Sweeper at a lower price and we didn't have to guess at the result. When the stream of orders began to pour in upon us, it was clear that no miracle or accident had happened. It was the natural and logical result of our factory shipment plan whereby we save about forty per cent in expenses and give our customers the benefit.

Another gratifying result has been achieved. The tremendous increase in the factory output has brought about a corresponding decrease in the cost of production. In accordance with a time-honored Quaker-Valley principle, tested during eighteen years of direct dealings with home-makers, we shall turn this saving due to increased production over to the public; therefore,

With every Sweet Home Ball-Bearing Vacuum Sweeper, which we are still shipping direct from the factory to the home for $6.10, we will hereafter include, absolutely free, a Quaker Stand-Up Scrubber

Thus you will have the Quaker Twin Cleaners—the Scrubber for the porches, the kitchen floor, and all other bare or linoleum covered floors, and the Sweet Home Sweeper for the rest of the house. Don't you see what this will mean to you in keeping your house sweet and clean 365 days a year, instead of having a general cleanup twice a year? Don't you see what an eternal relief it will be from the drudgery of scrubbing and the unwholesome, dust-laden atmosphere of the broom and dust pan? Try it for a month and then ask yourself if you want to go back to the old way. The trial won't cost you a cent.

Don't send us a cent in advance. Simply sign the coupon at the foot of this announcement and return it to us. Shipment of the Twin Cleaners will be made promptly direct to your home. If you are pleased and delighted, remit a dollar in 30 days and a dollar a month till $6.10 is paid; if not, retain the Stand-Up Scrubber as an absolute and unconditional gift and return Sweeper at our expense.

Note in the X-ray picture below the three powerful bellows pumps, the swiftly revolving brush which can be raised or lowered by a simple movement of the lever at the side. The wheels are fitted with steel ball-bearings and solid rubber tires. Large removable dust bag. Pressed steel top. All wooden parts under strain made of three-ply veneer wood. Case is finished in rich mahogany color. Rubber guards to prevent marring of furniture. Four-foot mahogany finished handle. Nickel-plated handle bale. Runs without electricity and so light that a child can use it.

We know, of course, that you will not part with the Sweet Home Sweeper after you once have it in your home, but right now we want you to feel that you have the privilege of returning it any time within 30 days—and at our expense, not yours.

TRANSPORTATION to points within 150 miles of Aurora (Chicago included) will cost you not to exceed 20 cents by express or parcel post—this we guarantee—a mere trifle compared with the money you save by getting your sweeper direct from the factory.

Send no money with the coupon.

Quaker Valley Mfg. Co.,
Aurora, Ill.:

Ship me the Quaker Twin Cleaners direct to my home. The Stand-Up Scrubber is to be an absolute gift in any event. I'll either pay you $6.10 for the Sweeper, at the rate of a dollar a month, or will return it within 30 days at your expense. Title to the Sweeper remains with you till paid for.

Doris Blake Says

"Honesty isn't the best policy in married life. Keeping up the sweet old lies is a better one."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Aren't Any "Old Maids."

"Dear Miss Blake: When may a girl be called 'old maid'? When may a man be called 'old bachelor'? DAVE."

There are no "old maids" nowadays. There are plenty of bachelors, but until a man has white hair he won't admit that he's out of the running. Therefore a girl of 40 is just in her prime.

Sent Her Valentines.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have known a young man a year this Valentine day. He has sent me valentines each year and is now in Michigan. His birthday is not far off. Can you please tell me if I should send him only a card or some remembrance such as a book. He writes to me all the time. B. A. A."

Unless you have received especially kind attentions from the man, I don't believe I would send him any gift for his birthday. As a general rule, men do not like to receive gifts that would obligate them in any way to a girl who is nothing more than a good friend. However, you might send him a birthday card or a nice, warm congratulatory letter, either of which I am sure he would be most happy to receive.

Here's Meaning of "Agnes."

"Dear Miss Blake: What does the name 'Agnes' mean? What does it mean? I keep thinking and thinking. What does Agnes mean? I wait. "A. L. J."

The name Agnes, according to Webster's dictionary, means chaste and pure.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

Don't Ruin Your Hair With Hot Curling Irons

A hot curling iron will ruin any woman's hair. It makes the hair dead, singed, brittle and burnt, besides giving it a decidedly disagreeable odor. The "short hair" and untidy [illegible] "scolding locks" that annoy so many women may be traced directly to the use of a hot curling iron.

Kurlo, the new hair curling liquid now so widely used, does away entirely with using a hot curling iron. Not only does Kurlo make the hair curl easily, but it brings out the true lustre of the hair, removing all excess oil and makes curls that stay in position. Saves the cost and time of marcel waving, too.

This reliable toilet formula, made by the Regent Manufacturing Company, Detroit, is easily prepared. Obtain from your druggist a 4 oz. package of Kurlo and dissolve in a pint of hot water. Use the solution cold by dipping the comb in it and combing the hair. The hair dries in about five minutes and the curls formed while still damp by twisting the strands of hair around kids or a slightly warmed curling iron, last all day. Try Kurlo and you will never be without it.

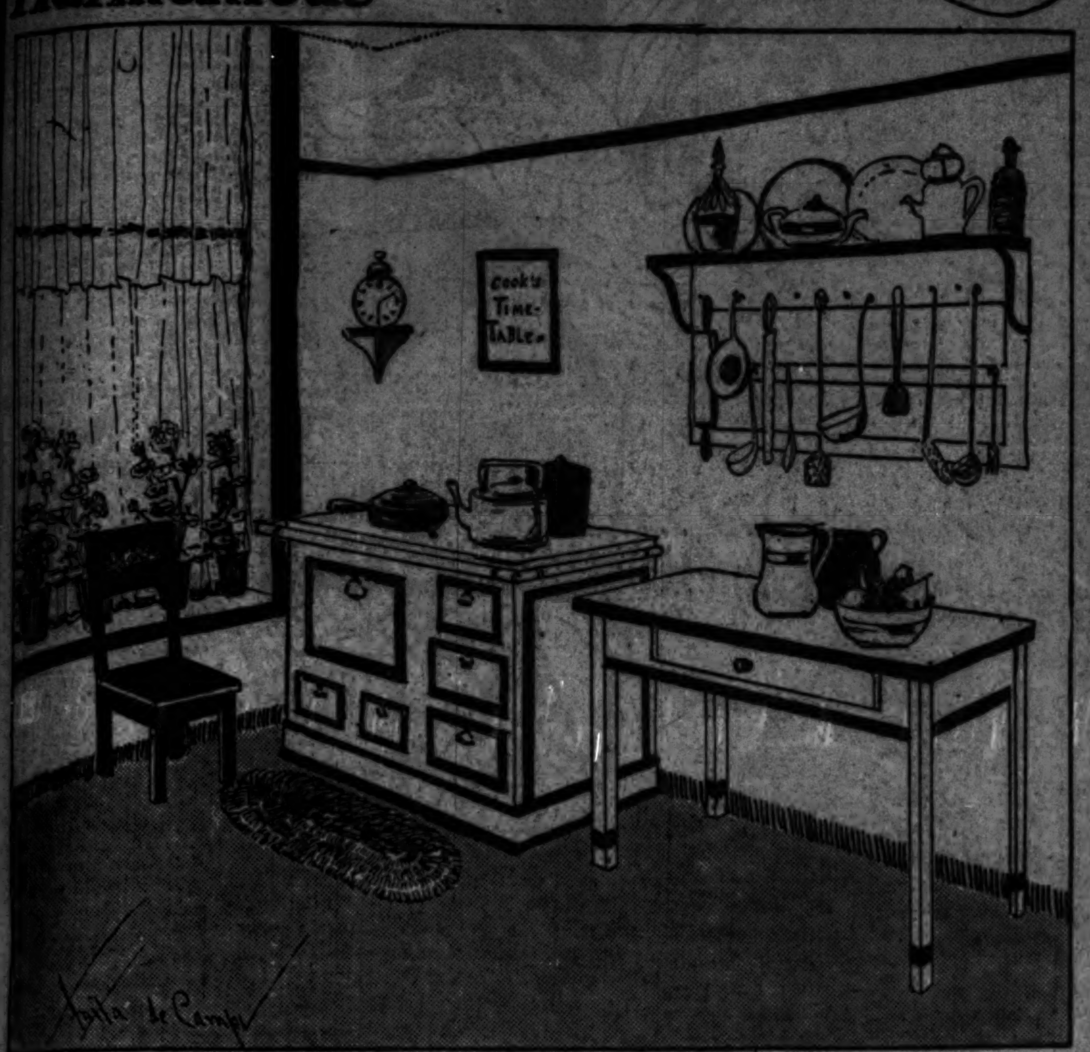
The Home Harmonious

COLOR SCHEMES for the KITCHEN

Anita de Campi



In a charming kitchen the young housewife is seen to good advantage.

THE kitchen in the average small city apartment is virtually furnished by the landlord. Icebox, cupboard, and gas stove are all installed. The essentials, then, that remain to be bought are a kitchen table, two chairs, and cooking utensils.

The utensils should not be bought at random. Certain metals and colored enamels go far towards making an excellent foundation for a decorative scheme. There is every reason why a young woman who intends to do her own housework should carefully consider her surroundings in the kitchen so that she may not while putting forth her best domestic endeavor be seen at too serious a disadvantage by the only man on earth.

Utensils of one sort should be decided on and whenever the assortment is added to the selection of the same sort of metal should be adhered to. It may be gray, blue, or white enamel, or it may be beautiful aluminium. The first cost of aluminium is more, but it is less expensive in the end, as it outwears all the others. In foreign and southern kitchens much copper, brass, and good brown earthenware are found, for here the supremacy of casserole cooking is well understood.

If the kitchen floor is painted a great deal of scrub work is avoided. A small square of oilcloth directly in front of the stove is almost indispensable. Some certain handed young women prefer washable rag rugs. These may be had for a dollar.

Several of the big stores have contrived a list of kitchen necessities. These lists vary in price and length from $25 for sixty-five articles to $140 for ninety-eight articles. Part of the $25 list is given here: trial.

KITCHEN.

Table.
Chairs [2].
Pans—Covered, Berlin, 5 quart; sauce, 2 quart; covered, Berlin, 6 quart; sauce, 5 quart; sauce, 8 quart; lipped sauce, 1¼ quart; pudding, 2 quart; jelly cake, tin [2]; octagonal cake, tin; muffin, 6 cup, tin; pie, tin [2]; fry.
Tea kettle, 4 quart.
Teapot, 2 quart.
Coffee pot, 2 quart.
Preserving kettle, 12 quart.
Roast pan, 11x11 inch.
Colander.
Frying skillet.
Dipper.
Ladle.
Basting spoon, 14 inch.
Cook fork, 14 inch.
Skimmer.
Soup strainer.
Potato masher, solid woo
Spoon, 15 inch.
Can opener.
Cake turner.
Paring knife.
Coffee strainer.
Dishpan, tin, 14 quart.
Soap dish, wire.
Roll towel holder, wooden.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

PANTRY.

Rolling pin.
Flour sifter.
Salt box, porcelain.
Salt and pepper shakers [2].
Biscuit cutter, tin.
Egg whip, wire.
Apple corer, tin.
Chopping bowl.
Chopping knife.
Grater, round, tin.
Tea cannister.
Coffee.
Milk pan, 2 quart.

Taking this list as a basis for economical furnishing we will add a few simple things to it. Near the stove have a plate rack. It is to hold things that are in daily use, such as the tea pot, coffee pot, etc., so that they may not be left standing on the stove. Along its lower edge should be a row of brass hook nails for cooking spoons, forks, wire spoons, strainers, etc.

Ask your grocer for a wooden box to be used as an herb garden window box. Parsley will grow in it the year round. Chives and other savories will be worth planting and watering in it.

Paint the sides and legs of the table and paint the chairs, platerack, and flower box to match your kitchen woodwork. Have sash curtains on your lower and upper windows made of cheese cloth. A single width will do. Granted that you have two windows, six sash curtains will be needed, as the two lower ones should be washed once a week.

Summing all up, the cost of the kitchen need not exceed $35. Figure this way:

Equipment	$25.50
Plate rail	.75
Rug or oilcloth	1.00
Cheesecloth, at 5 cents	.30
Clock	1.00
	$28.55

This leaves a margin of $6.45 for gold fish and bowl, at 10 cents each; copper kettle, herbs, geraniums, or other small perquisites.

Of the $500 with which we proposed to plan the furnishings of a five room apartment, we will carry a balance of $465 with which to equip the other four rooms of the honeymoon flat for the new June bride.

[To be continued next Sunday.]

THE GARDENER AT WORK

The Garden Editor will give expert advice on planning gardens, organizing garden clubs, and planting flowers, vegetables, or shrubs. Address The Garden Editor, "The Tribune."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

The Arbor and Trellis.

FRENCH cottage gardens are never without a leafy arbor to rest in when the gardener has an hour of leisure. The construction of an arbor is simple. It may be done with a few lathes nailed or wired together in a boxlike shelter, large enough for a bench or two or three chairs. By means of a network of strings or wires rapidly growing vines may be trained over it.

At this time, before outdoor weeding and working in the ground takes all the day, a few hours should be used in building an arbor. It will be one of the pleasures of the summer mornings and evenings.

A temporary pergola, really a screen roof on four posts, is easily built. Of course, the structure in grounds owned should be more substantial. But better far a temporary arbor or pergola with its ornamental vines grown from seed than none at all.

Vines should be chosen for their leafy habits and rapid growth. Most familiar among these are the wild cucumber and the morning glories. Both have flowers and if treated with consideration make delightful arbors.

Packets of seed of morning glories cost only a nickle. Wild cucumber seeds must be planted in the fall, but the plants are so numerous it would not be hard to find some sprouting in your neighborhood. The Japanese hop is most reliable.

Jack and the beanstalk vine is a splendid grower. The balloon vine, balsam apple, balsam pear, cypress vine, canary bird vine (yellow flowers), scarlet runner (red bean flowers), and the great family of gourd vines grow from seed.

Squash vines with large leaves and big yellow flowers will cover an arbor, but supports must be provided for the squashes.

PIMPLES SPREAD ALL OVER HEAD

Severe Itching and Burning. Red and Sore. Kept Awake at Night with Itching. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Head All Healed.

3506 N. Hamilton Ave., Chicago, Ill.—"My scalp trouble began on the lower part of my head with severe itching and burning, forming into lumps or pimples which spread all over my head. These would itch something terrible, getting red and sore and after some time they got hard. My trouble always seemed to be worse. Nights when I would take down my hair and comb it the scales were so thick that I would have nothing but scales in my comb.

"I had had the trouble six months when I heard about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. The itching had kept me awake at night but when I used the sample I had better rest. I bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and bar of Cuticura Soap and used them every night and morning for four weeks. My head was all healed and I would never wash my head now with anything else but Cuticura Soap." (Signed) Miss Helen Beyer, July 30, 1914.

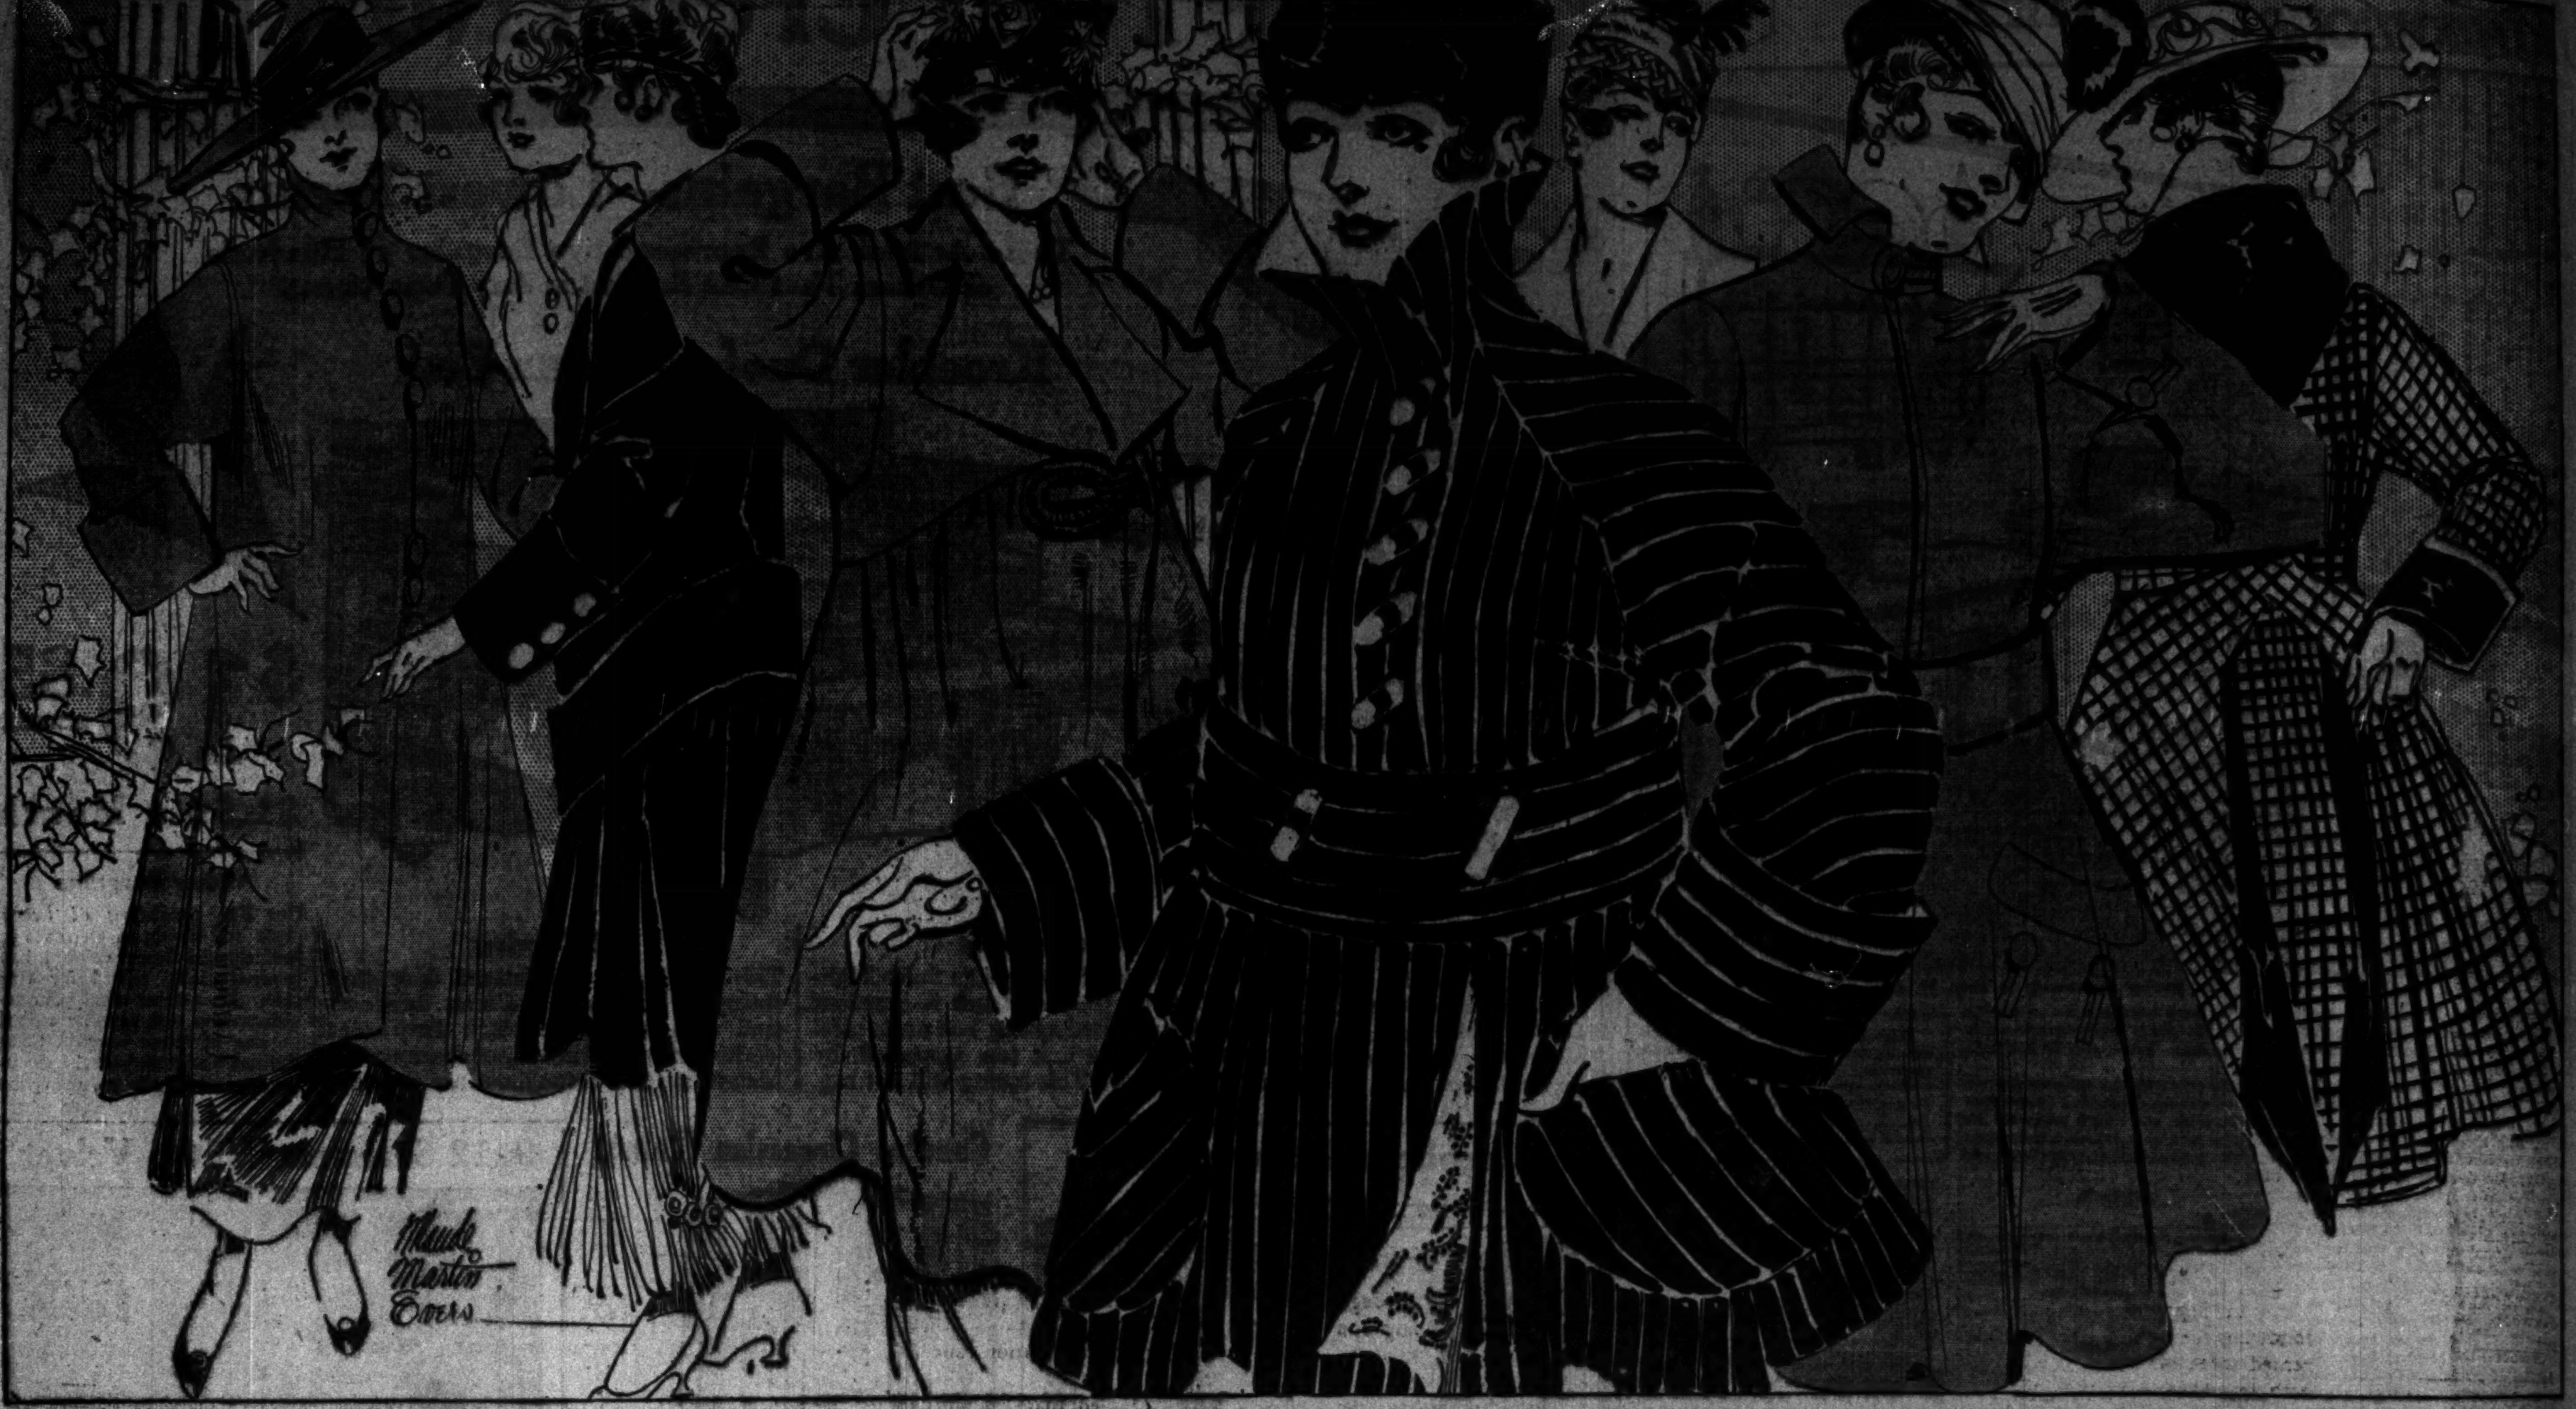
COATS FOR ALL OCCASIONS MAY BE "MOYEN AGE," "EMPIRE" OR MERELY "1915" IN OUTLINE, Says Louise James



1. One of the 1915 line coats which fall in a straight line from the shoulder to the uneven hem. The neck is high, the cuffs are wide, and the bottle green of the Yama cloth makes for the extreme modishness of this garment.

2. As near to the moyen age as a coat can be is this wide belted model with the new cap effect in the back. It is of gabardine and lined with a striped charmeuse.

3. A splashing coat of Belgian blue with a striking ornament in the front. Revers add to the attractiveness of this empire model.

4. A stunning nattier blue corduroy with a vivid flowered lining. It has one of the new fitted necks and handsome gold buttons.

5. A buckskin covert whipcord coat, rainproof, with buttons of the same.

6. A degree of snugness at the waistline is glimpsed here in this black and white checked [illegible] coat lined with white satin.

PERHAPS the most conspicuous characteristic of the separate coat this spring season is that while it is straight and loose in every line it is at the same time most punctiliously tailored. And perhaps the most interesting feature of these same coats is the wide variety permitted in their style. They must be smart. That is a necessity. But they may be a number of different shapes and still possess the right to be called eminently fashionable.

The accompanying illustrations bear out this point well and show the complete difference in the coat styles.

Coats for every occasion, for morning, for afternoon, and for evening may be empire, moyen age, 1915 in outline, or flaunt a natural line of the waist. The individual woman may indulge her individual preferences to the full. If she still admires the moyen age effects which have been worn considerably this last winter she may continue to wear them and rest assured that she is by no means passé. I have seen stunning examples of these moyen age models in motor and traveling coats. One especially good looking one was of Belgian blue gabardine. Absolutely severe and tailored in every line the only touch of frivolity lay in the gayly colored lining. It was of charmeuse brightly flowered in huge rose pattern.

Again there is nothing prettier and more effective than the empire style, particularly in the case of the afternoon and evening coat. Shirring may mark the long shoulder line of the high belt. Velvet will be fashionble this summer, as it was last, and already silk coats for afternoon and evening are seen with large velvet collars and cuffs and in combination with gabardine and bengaline for the garment proper.

Again, if neither of there styles appeals to the woman in question, she may have a coat with the perfectly normal waistline, as shown in the drawing. Many of the suit coats are showing this nipped in normal waistline without the belt, but in the case of the outside, separate coat, it is generally belted if possessing a natural line of the waist.

Back trimmings are an interesting feature of many of these separate coats. The hood in the back is to be seen on some of the dressier models, and again the slit lapels are shown in the back from the waist down and lined with a contrasting color from the coat proper.

I have seen this last note strikingly carried out in a white corduroy coat. It was belted in black velvet and then opened from the line of the waist to the hem directly down the back. Black velvet lapels gave the finishing touch to this opening and a striking note to the coat as a whole.

Still again, if one prefers, the coat need not suggest in any way a hint even of a belt. Where this straight line is carried out, the shoulder effect is usually narrow and the bottom part of the coat flares considerably by contrast.

Colors in coats are growing more and more vivid as the season grows mature. From France, peculiar as it may seem, comes the latest dictum in shades and combination of shades. For whatever they may be wearing there they are coming to brilliancy here. Instead of black and white, which is the favorite color scheme of Lewis in Paris, come duplications of it in blue and white, in [illegible] white, and in the striking bottle green and white. These combinations are usually seen in stripes, good sized stripes, too, without any evidence of coloring in unostentatious simplicity. I have seen a stunning sportsman's coat made up in both this bottle green shade and Elizabethan pink, in the new Yama cloth, a cloth which slightly resembles chinchilla and yet which is not too warm for spring and summer. The shoulder line was cleverly narrowed by a ruse in the cutting of the sleeve, while the hem of the coat was of uneven length, reaching the knee at its longest places and touching the [illegible] at its shortest.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IT is pleasantest to write of the newly sprouting green things suitable for salads and other eating, but a miscellany of recipes is given below because requests have come for each recipe given. Yet it is a pity not to mention anew, for the benefit of those to whom the plants are accessible though not used, how eatable and refreshing are the tender shoots of such things as beech and maple and birch and flagroot, with the fronds of ferns, and how serviceable and palatable as food are many of the young weeds.

In an old cook book under the head of "English Bamboo" it tells how to make pickle out of the young shoots of the elder. If any one has access to a book now out of print, "Salads and Sauces," by Thomas J. Murrey, she will find out what a large number of the neglected things are eatable. There are the young leaves of the plantain, sometimes called "Star of the Earth." Mr. Murrey mentions dock under the name "Patience," and says that it is called patience dock or garden patience, and "it is found growing spontaneously by roadsides and waste places. It is an excellent vegetable prepared as dandelions or spinach. The young leaves mixed with sorrel and served with a bacon dressing afford a good country salad."

And there is the sorrel whose ternate leaf has been regarded as a symbol of the trinity. It is much used in France in both soups and salads—in cooking it almost melts. The cultivated sorrel (sow seeds in April or May) can be especially recommended as a salad for the vegetarian since vinegar should be omitted in preparing the dressing. The common field sorrel is used in vegetable salads, and the camper puts a few of its leaves in his sandwich. Mr. Murrey says that the French not only eat sorrel because it is pleasant to the taste but because they believe it good for the health. And he adds in this connection: "Most of us eat nowadays to satisfy hunger or tickle the palate, whereas our fathers saw medicinal virtue in every beast of the field and in every herb that grows."

The root of the evening primrose is peeled and eaten with a little salt and cracker and cheese. The young leaves of the shepherd's purse are used as salad or the whole plant is cooked as spinach. In April and May it may be gathered growing spontaneously about cultivated lands, and, though not so excellent as the cultivated plants, will yet be found of good quality.

Of the milkweed Mr. Murrey says: "Gather the young milkweed shoots, wash them in cold water, break off the few leaves that have started, or, if preferred, they may be cooked with the shoots; tie the shoots in small bunches and boil them twenty minutes in water slightly salted, drain, and serve with a plain salad dressing; if not to be had, a melted sauce may be substituted."

Tomato Rabbit.

Not long ago was printed a contributed recipe for a tomato rabbit under the name "Blushing Bunny." It seems that is also called "the party dish," also "red rabbit," and for some absurd reason "Rum Tum Ditty," or so says the following recipe, which I have been requested to print. Some people consider this more appetizing than the plain cheese rabbit, or one started with milk and butter. This is, of course, a matter of taste, for though the tomato rabbit has been in use some years, it is more of a novelty than the other.

Here is the recipe in question: Pour the contents of one can of tomato soup into the blazer of the chafing dish or into the upper part of a double boiler. When hot, add one pound of cheese cut in dice (better grate it on the frying basket turned bottom up) and cook until cheese is thoroughly melted, stirring constantly in the same direction. Add seasonings to taste and one egg slightly beaten. Stir well for a few minutes and serve hot on crackers or toast.

Yellow Split Peas.

Yellow, like green, split peas may be cooked without previous soaking, but whole peas require some soaking always, and much longer cooking. If the whole peas are started to soak in hot water three hours of soaking is quite sufficient. Shake a cup of yellow split peas in a colander to remove the dust, pick them over, wash thoroughly, and put on to cook in four cups of cold water. Bring slowly to the boiling point, skim thoroughly if you do not wish them to harden in the cooking, and then add one medium onion cut in quarters and one sliced carrot. Cover and cook over a simmering burner turned half down if that amount keeps up the gentle movement. They may be done under two hours if cooked gently enough. To make a fine purée put the porridge through a sieve and heat up over a hot fire in frying pan till dry, stirring all the time and having added butter or bacon fat generously to season.

Replies to Queries.

EVA RAWLE: I do not pay for recipes. In sending out recipes you should inclose stamped and addressed envelope for their return, as in the case of any other manuscript. A gingerbread requiring three eggs I consider rather expensive.

TO CORRESPONDENTS: I am glad to give all the general information I can, but I cannot write out pages and pages of recipes for any one person. One, or at the most two, is about all I can put into one letter.

Marion Harland's Helping Hand

by Marion Harland

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"MAY I suggest to my fellow readers what I think is a good plan? Make a scrapbook of the Corner. I have noticed that several shut-ins have written requesting cards, etc. Now, my plan is to write and get their addresses, and then paste the addresses in the scrapbook under the request. Many times we cannot send what is asked for, but how often does the very thing wished turn up later. I hope a few readers will try this plan, for I am sure they will like it. This is the first time I have written to the Corner, but I hope you will use my suggestion, for I am sure it will be of help to some of the others. READER."

Come again early and often if you have more such useful and practical suggestions as this. I may add that the keeping of such a scrapbook would be valuable in more ways than one. It would enable the one who has it to give freely from time to time as she has opportunity without having to write again for the name of some one who might be helped by her gifts, and it would also simplify my work in the line of repeating addresses. I would like to know if any one else has tried this plan.

Offers an Air Cushion.

[illegible]

"I saw in the Helping Hand Corner that Mrs. C. P. W. wished an air cushion. I have one and would be so glad to give it to her. MRS. E. B. W."

Mrs. C. P. W. has already been supplied with the air cushion she asked for and so I print this letter here, confident that some other sufferer will see it and be glad to avail herself of the kindly offer.

Baby Needs a Carriage.

"Do you think there would be some person who has a baby buggy that is no longer of use? It doesn't matter about the condition, as I could fix it up. I hope you will find some one who does not need a buggy any longer. MRS. H. D. D."

It has been some weeks since we had the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of a baby carriage. Some baby must have outgrown his into uselessness so far as he is concerned, and the mother should be glad to get it out of the house. It could hardly be better bestowed than upon the present applicant.

Offers an Abdominal Support.

"Please send me the address of Mrs. G. L. E., who wants an abdominal support. I have one in good condition which I can send her. MRS. R. M. P."

Mrs. G. L. E. had already been supplied with such a support as she needed before this kind offer came to hand. I put it here in the full persuasion that some one else who requires such an appliance is sure to see the chance thus presented to her and to write to me for the address of Mrs. R. M. P.

Invalid Wants Chair.

"I received the name and address of Mrs. L. E. B., who desired embroidery pieces to work, and I sent her several, which she gratefully acknowledged a few days ago. She gave me the name of another shut-in like herself, poor and rheumatic, who would be glad of some pieces to embroider or some fancy work of almost any kind. She has not walked for five or six years, and greatly desires a rolling chair. She is 60 years old and her initials are Mrs. H. H. G. "A. L. A."

Another helpful Cornerite who has evidently done her part to brighten the life of one shut-in and is passing on her efforts in behalf of some one else. I hope that the embroidery or other fancy work may be found for Mrs. H. H. G., and I wish with all my heart that the invalid chair or rolling chair might also be sent to her. I know the cost of transportation, even by freight, is a good deal, but I know, too, that there are generous souls and pockets, and I trust these may be moved by the appeal of this 60 year old invalid who has not walked for five or six years and must long for a change of scene and a sight of outdoors.

Dissolves, Does Not Burn Away Superfluous Hair

It is no longer necessary, in removing superfluous hair, to burn it off with any of the present day depilatory pastes, powders and liquids. The new way is simply to dissolve away the hair. This is done in a very remarkable and easy manner by applying some of the wonderful toilet preparation, known as the new Sulfo Solution to the hair. Immediately it begins to dissolve and disappear and in a few minutes can be completely wiped off with a cloth, leaving the skin as clear and clean as though there had never been a superfluous hair. The wonderful feature about Sulfo Solution is that it is as harmless as water, leaving no burn, redness or irritation such as is inevitably the case when other depilatories are used. It is soothing to the skin, never fails and cannot harm the most delicate skin. It is used in a moment. Any drug store can supply you with the Sulfo Solution. It is sold at all drug stores at $1.00 a large bottle, or sent direct by the manufacturers, Cooper Pharmacal Co., Thompson Bldg., Chicago.

Lillian Russell Says OF Her Own
Toilet
Preparations

Springtime never fails to furnish its ordeal to the woman who is watchful of her complexion. It is the season when it is unsafe to allow any cessation in the task of caring for our personal appearance. Strong winds, which roughen the skin and make it ugly and uninviting, require careful and scientific combating, and the astringent healing properties of My Own Smooth Out Cream offer safety and positive prevention of the cause. Consistent application, I have found, never fails to develop a skin of lovely quality and texture, defying wind and sun. It is $1.00 the jar at your toilet counter. Sincerely,

Lillian Russell

Lillian Russell's Own Toilet Preparations are sold at all leading Department Stores and over [illegible] Drug Stores in Chicago where the better toilet preparations are sold, or Miss Russell will send them direct upon receipt of price.

HOME WORKERS' BLUE LIST.

Guaranteed Advertising of Home Products and Service.

ENERGY, ABILITY, ADVERTISING

"Let me teach you to make your own clothes, three hours, 50c," is no doubt a familiar advertisement to you. Have you ever wondered what success this home worker was having? Her first intention was to restrict this work entirely to her own home, but so many calls came from women who wanted to take the lessons at their own homes that three days a week were set aside for them, lessons 50c an hour. Besides filling this time she has twenty pupils enrolled for afternoon lessons the other three days, several private lessons in the morning at $1 each, and two evening lessons—just about all any one home worker can manage. By keeping her advertisement in almost every Sunday, the "graduates'" places have been filled as they have dropped out; $2.75 has covered the cost of advertising for the month, and you can easily figure how satisfactory an income has resulted from this investment.

An unusually large number of women are wanting to learn how to make their own clothes this spring. Surely there are many more home workers who could devote some time to teaching their less fortunate sisters. If you are one of these, or are wanting to make money at home, write or call Room 1742, The Home Workers' Blue List, care of "The Chicago Tribune."

Choosing the Best Class of Room Renters

The 7th and 8th Prize Winning Stories

LYDIA S. POWERS,
winner of the seventh prize of $10 for the best true story of success from Tribune "Room Renting" advertising.

MRS. EMMA N. HAYES, winner of the eighth prize of $10 for the best true story of success from Tribune "Room Renting" advertising.

In September, 1913, I opened a rooming house on the south side of Chicago. Through following the ads in your paper I had found a strictly modern six flat apartment building and rented three of the flats, each having eight rooms and three baths. I occupy three rooms with bath myself, and in the following have deducted from the investment and expenses such amounts as should properly be charged against my own three rooms; in other words, the figures cover only the twenty-one rooms and eight bathrooms which constitute my business establishment proper.

Since I intended to cater to a better class of people, I bought a good quality of furniture and other fixtures, investing all told $2,520. My rooms bring from $3.50 to $7 per week and my income would be $451 per month if all rooms were filled all the time. There are, however, vacancies which average $5 per month, making my actual income so far $446 per month. I managed to keep vacancies so low by letting every patron's week end on a Saturday, which enabled me, even if a patron would stay out his week without giving any notice, to have an ad in the paper on Sunday morning. This arrangement has the additional advantage of necessitating only one trip per week to the bank with the money collected.

As to my expenses, I pay per month:

Rent	$188.50	Replacing linen, curtains, etc.	$ 3.25
Electric light	9.00	Repairs to furniture, etc.	.50
Replacing Tungstens	1.25	Insurance, taxes and incidentals	1.25
Gas (for cooking only)	1.30	Advertising	1.75
Maid service	26.00	Telephone pays for itself.
Laundry	15.00
Redecorating	16.50	Total	$264.30

These figures are based on facts. Notice the low cost of advertising, which amounts to only two-thirds of one per cent of the total expenses.

There are, of course, other means of advertising than through the daily papers, but on the strength of the above figures I may say that it is the cheapest and most effective way. It is also the most convenient. In selecting a paper I asked myself just these two questions: "Which paper or papers reach the class of people I want for patrons?" and "Which paper has the largest circulation among that class of people?" Watching the people at the news stands, in the street cars and the elevated trains answered that question in favor of The Tribune. Therefore, I am using The Tribune exclusively and I dare say that it has kept my rooms filled to the highest degree of capacity that can be expected.

Let me add that I haven't found my occupation the drudgery it is usually painted. Although I have only one maid, I have plenty of spare time for myself, thanks to a carefully worked out routine in cleaning rooms and delivering packages and mail, extension phones on each floor, and a bell system which, without taking a single step, enables me to summon anybody in the house to the phone or door.

Trusting that this letter will prove of interest to your readers, I am,

Yours very truly,
(Signed) LYDIA S. POWERS,
721 Oakwood Blvd.

About four years ago I suddenly found myself facing a problem that was serious. That is how it appeared as I viewed my circumstances. Being left without support was not an uncommon situation, but I, a widow of middle age, lacking the strength required in business fields, found it a problem, indeed. I had observed what other women had done, and finally decided that I might succeed by renting rooms. My resources were a slender pension and the furniture in a small flat. But, unknown to me, I had a partner that I want to tell you about.

I rented a large flat, secured what additional furnishings were necessary, and advertised in The Tribune. The ad was prepared with the aid of a most courteous solicitor, whose suggestions made it clear—and saved money for me. This solicitor might easily have taken advantage of my inexperience and induced me to use a great number of lines, and thus, perhaps, increase his commissions. Instead, he went to considerable trouble to see that I was getting the utmost for my investment. This co-operation I appreciated much.

There were four rooms to let, and during the first morning I rented one. Early in the afternoon I became busy answering the telephone calls of other newspapers. They had noticed my ad in The Tribune, and, after they had offered very attractive prices, I gave them permission to print it also. They told me that if I expected one ad in one paper to do the work, more advertising would do it quicker and surer. I believed them, and soon had the ad in two papers besides The Tribune. But I received no response through these other papers, while The Tribune had sent renters for all my rooms before the third day.

This lesson was firmly and finally impressed when, several times later, these other papers persuaded me to use their columns and then printed either the telephone or house number wrong. These errors they offered to correct, but it was not now necessary—the room that was vacant had already been filled through The Tribune. While dealing with The Tribune I have never once been bothered by a mistake in an ad or a dispute over charges. So, the last times I advertised and other papers, observing, telephoned to copy, I informed all of them: "You are wasting your time calling me up. I have never had any returns from your paper, and intend to advertise only in The Tribune."

All the lodgers coming to me through ads have been via The Tribune. Yes, another paper did send a few applicants, but not a desirable class. I have often remarked to friends that I could tell a "Tribune man" when I open the door, and, to prove my claim, made it a point to ask how they learned of my vacant room.

When I started my renting venture I was somewhat fearful about whom I might be taking in, but I am happy to be able to say that my lodgers have been a most desirable kind—ones I feel safe to leave at liberty in my flat while I am away.

Recently some friends were arranging to rent out rooms. Knowing of my success, they came to me for advice. Among other suggestions I insisted that they use only The Tribune "Room" columns, for, I said, when everything was considered, they would prove the best investment. And when they remarked about my enthusiasm over The Tribune, I replied: "I have a good reason to be enthusiastic—and so will you. A newspaper that is able to keep every one of my rooms from remaining idle for as long as a week for four years is a genuine partner to me."

Love Letters of a Lonely Girl

This is the fourth of a series of "Love Letters of a Lonely Girl" which will appear every Sunday in "The Sunday Tribune."

DEAR Dream-You: So many things have happened me this last week that I've been caught in a skein of tangled impressions which I can hardly find words to unravel for you. I've had a proposal of marriage, the offer of work with real pay for my mornings only, and a wonderful gift—the dearest, cunningest, cutest Pomeranian doggie you every saw. Bonnie Dandy is his name, and this is how he came to be mine:

You remember the little actress of whom I spoke in my last letter, and that she was temperamentally attractive to me? Well, she seemed to feel the same towards me and grew very friendly and confidential. Her name is Jennie; she, too, is all alone in the world and making her way. She is understudy to the leading woman of one of the big theatrical companies playing here. Her position must pay well, for she is always exquisitely groomed and gowned with all the extravagant detail comprising "elegant simplicity" about which one hears so much but seldom sees. The only discordant note of her attire is a big gold mesh bag with jingle-jangles attached; it seems too loud somehow.

We had chatted at the table or in the parlor only until night before last, when she came to my room very late, perched herself up on the side of my bed, and looked me over with an intent, new, and impersonal sort of way. Bonnie Dandy was with her.

"Are you ever lonely?" she asked. "Yes, indeed—dreadfully so," I replied. "Well, don't let it get you—fight it. Make friends as fast as you can; get any sort of work to keep you busy; live in memories of your childhood until you become rooted firmly among new friends here. It will be a long, hard road—I know. I, too, was in exactly the same position you are: an orphan, alone and friendless in a big city. The loneliness got me. I lost my standards, accepted the Bohemians that came my way as friends, and awoke too late. I was a bit of a fool and weak. Please don't think too badly of me. I've told you, that you may be spared the rocks of foolishness and loneliness which shipwrecked me. And here," thrusting in my arms Bonnie Dandy, "take him as a gift; you need him more than I do. I'll get me a bulldog; like 'em better, anyway."

With a half sob and before I could thank her she had rushed out of the room, with a wave of her jeweled fingers, and into the waiting taxi. Next morning I found Bonnie Dandy's basket, cushion, brushes, and Teddy bear at my door. But no address or word of good-by, even for me! And that's the story of how I came to have my Bonnie Dandy gift, dear You! Already he has helped the loneliness; he has such cute ways of making himself understood, and is as dainty and fastidious as his long pedigree warrants. And he has adopted me, I know, into his heart—he trails me about everywhere, brings his Teddy bear or ball, inviting me to play with him, or snuggles up close beside me as I read or write to you. Aren't you glad, dear, that I have a playfellow? With Dandy for my walks and you for my talks, I can fight the terrifying loneliness better.

And O, dear You, will you please be just a little bit jealous when I tell you about the proposal of marriage? I hope so. It was that handsome, debonair Spanish student, of whom I told you. Very ardently and in a manner grandiose and eloquent, he asked me to become his wife. At present he was in exile and poverty and had little to offer me. But his father had castles in Spain—and as soon as he had completed his electrical course here he would take me to old Barcelona, that "heaven of strangers."

He pictured the courtly reception of me by his father and mother, their glorious castle gleaming under the tropical moon, a countless retinue of peons for my service, until I was almost carried away with a desire to play up to the part and promise to become "my lady," just to see how the picture would end. I told you he looked like a moving picture hero! He certainly played the part perfectly, supplied a gorgeous setting, a tale most thrilling, and pictured with gestures dramatic. Some one in the next parlor was softly playing the "Contes de Hoffman." I think the music went to his head a bit; or it may have been the subdued lights, propinquity, and a little loneliness, too. He is very young—only 22. I swallowed the laughter that arose within me at his volcanic and unexpected love making and gravely told him I was thinking of entering a convent, but that I would be a good chum or sister to him always, grateful for the honor he proffered me. He kissed my hand and bowed himself backwards from the room, with tragedy on his beautiful boyish face!

Next morning at breakfast he wore a gorgeous new scarlet cravat with the becomingness of which he was much concerned. A huge cameo pin was thrust through it at the most telling angle. He was very eager for my approval of both. Glad to escape what I had feared would be an embarrassing moment for us both after the night before, I praised the scarf warmly. But his vanity demanded tribute to the cameo also. "Wasn't it fine?" "But isn't it a little large for——" I hesitated. "O, but you see, it was given me by a lady—it was her bracelet—I couldn't change it—for she——" He caught himself just in time not to further disclose the romance of the cameo. He even blushed a little, remembering, I saw, his words to me of the night before: "the one star arisen in the firmament of his life," etc.

But he looked so like a boy caught stealing forbidden jam that I laughed outright, not finding it in me to be severe. "Never mind," I said soothingly, "I'm accustomed to the gallantry of men. I'm from the south, you see, where the men all propose to you to add laurels to your debut; but no girl ever takes advantage of their chivalry. I understand you, you see," and I smiled at him reassuringly. He smiled a little in return, relieved, but uncomfortable still. Now he sits at another table beside an attractive young widow. From the closeness of her bronze head to his black one, I'm sure he has found a sympathetic soul as a foil for his ardent temperament.

And my work—I must tell you about that before I say good-night. The artist person who followed me through the library one afternoon sketching me, and at whom I was so indignant when I found him at dinner beside me that same evening, has turned out to be a real for sure artist, with a big studio uptown. He had gone to the library to find a type for what he hopes to be his masterpiece in painting. And mine, he says, is the face for his great Madonna! He confessed to deliberately following me for the purpose of getting me to sit for the picture. The work will be for only three hours each morning, for which he will pay me $3. That will make $18 the week for me, you see. And all my afternoons for myself. Think of that, dear you, and be glad with me. I had begun to worry, for my little reserve fund is melting away, and a girl needs so many things beside mere shelter and food. Now I shall have some pretty clothes and books, and Dandy boy a new toy and ribbon, too.

And dear you, do you know the artist person is not at all what I imagined him to be. Not a bit flirtatious or flippant, but dignified, gentlemanly, and very earnest. It was just the lure of his art that made him follow me, you see. I've quite forgiven him now. And then, too, he is old—35, I should guess, at least. His hair is gray about the temples, his face sometimes haggard almost when he gets very serious. But his eyes are wonderful; deeply sympathetic, but sometimes almost oriental with an inscrutable sort of expression I don't understand. Not a handsome man, and a very reserved one. But he seems to draw people to him. Every man, woman, and child here seems to find a bond with him somehow. Perhaps it is because he is so interested in people himself.

To me he is a revelation—about people, I mean. He pointed out to me as interesting people that I'd never even noticed before, although I've been here for weeks! An old, old man who sits half way down the dining room, he told me, was an octogenarian numismatist, worked every day from 9 to 5, and was much more interesting than the antiques in which he dealt!

As soon as I got upstairs I looked up the meanings of those two big words and have enlarged my vocabulary and understanding. The dear old 80 year old man, dealer in rare coins, has eyes like sunny bits of blue sky shining between drifts of winter snow. All that the artist person showed me. I should never have looked at people like that. But he seems to find something interesting in every face he sees.

And we have started a guessing game at table. That of guessing the occupations or vocations of people from their faces or bearing or manner or clothes—perhaps I should say from their characteristics. The artist person says that all people become like their work—great or small. Either big and broad and noble, or narrow and ugly and sordid, as their life work may mint them. Isn't that a queer idea? But the guessing is great fun. One man whom I guessed to be a banker the artist person said was a traveling man. "Too breezy, genial, and unreserved for a banker," he observed—and it proved he was right. And one woman whom I'd always believed a rich widow, she dressed so beautifully and wore so many diamonds daylight and lamplight, too, the artist person said, "No, she's a modiste." But he wouldn't tell me how he knew. I do hope he won't turn out to be one of those dreadful people who are always right—I should be afraid of him.

But the guessing game is great fun and Mr. Wellington Holme, the artist person, a most interesting vis-à-vis at dinner. That is, most dinners. He goes away each Friday and doesn't return until Monday. He says he goes to his bungalow for the week end to rest. But he never speaks of his people. Perhaps, like me, he has none. I would like to know, but I dare not ask him. His bearing does not invite questioning. Sometimes he looks very sad when he drops into a mood or is off guard. Maybe he, too, is lonely. It seems everybody in the world is lonely one way or another.

Even the little dancer, who was always laughing, seems lonely since Jeanne left. I no longer hear sounds of laughter and clink of glasses which used to reach my rooms evenings from hers on the next floor below. She is very quiet now, and I feel a little sorry for her. But I just can't like her! She has a thick, stubby nose and Rosetti shaped lips which look always as if they would drip blood when she spoke. Something about her hurts and offends, ever her quiet—I wonder what it is? It's so seldom I see her that civility is easy, but I'm glad she dines out most of the time.

These are the things of the week, which, as I said before, were a tangled skein of impressions which as yet I cannot assort—I can only share them with you, dear.

My emotions, too, are as varied and tangled. My heart aches for Jeanne. It is heavy with sorrow, not blame, for her, for I have never yet faced life absolutely penniless, so cannot if I would judge. I shall always love her for uncovering her wounded life that I might benefit and escape the abyss of her loneliness. And to give me her precious Bonnie Dandy to chase away dark hours, too! That was as gorgeous as her talk to me was unselfish. Only God can judge shipwrecked girls.

But spring is in the air—my heart and my body are young and I have work! With it arises hope on happy wings. Little giggle-gurgles arise when I think of the Spanish student and I smile—but it's rather a wistful smile, too. O! how I wish the castles in Spain had been real and their cavalier you: dear, big, brave you, come to claim little me! I'll give you three—no, one—guess as to what my answer would have been.

It's growing very late. Bonnie Dandy is yawning to be put in his basket bed for the night. And I must get my beauty sleep. Tomorrow I go for my first sitting for that, to be, great Madonna of Mr. Wellington Holme, and I must look my best.

I blow you a good-night kiss from my finger tips. Happy dreams, dear you. Your Ruth.

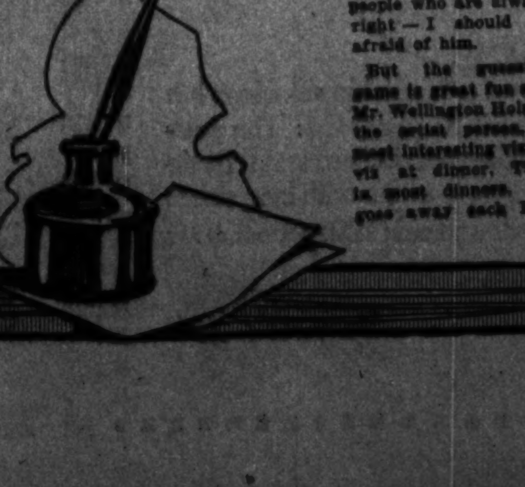
"Very ardently and in a manner grandiose and eloquent, he asked me to become his wife."



Comment by Mme. X.

By Mme. X.

A BACKWARD look at the last seven days shows a rather placid social landscape lit up with the many colored splendor of the two Junior league evenings at Orchestra hall.

The precision and perfection with which amateurs do things nowadays is a cause for wonder and praise, especially when one contrasts their achievements with those of preceding epochs. It used to be the axiom that the only people who enjoyed amateur performances were the performers themselves. Families and friends sat in the audience with tense muscles, throbbing pulse, and bated breath until the final drop of the curtain gave them surcease from pain. But nowadays the training is so thorough and exacting and the standard is so high that the possibility of any slip or mishap is almost eliminated and even the nearest relation can look on with pleasant equanimity.

The Junior leaguers of 1915 kept up with the past achievements of this brilliant young organization. The stage of Orchestra hall—a rather unamenable piece of architecture—never looked so attractive before as it did on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. The audiences demonstrated once more a certain pleasing provinciality about Chicago, as everybody knew everybody else. It was like a great big family party.

There was only one thing that struck a jarring note. Let us hope that in future it will be possible to dispense with the voting contest on the merits of various features of an entertainment; that the money so raised can be acquired in some other way. It is a rather painful sight to see the young, eager contestants for favor standing on the stage waiting for appreciation. It is not even as if merit invariably won the day. Those competitors whose families and friends have the longest purse are the surest winners. In Seattle the daughters of four railway presidents were each in a different group on an occasion similar to that of the Junior league shows. The doting papas ran the voting contest up to $15,000. It is graft of a highly specialized and gilded form. There are other more attractive ways of winning the shekel for a good cause from the pockets of loyal, well to do relatives.

In various ways the Junior leaguers coined money those two nights by selling candy, flowers, programs, and posters, and Mrs. Charles E. Brown cleared $450 off her sale of cigarets and chances in the $50 worth of tobacco. Uri Grannis drew the winning numbers from the basketful of coupons and William Brown Jr.—no relation to the Dames des Cigarettes—was the lucky winner.

A sure sign of spring is the recrudescence of the Garden club at its first open meeting of the season, which is to take place next Friday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker. Evening was selected rather than a daytime hour, so as to give an opportunity to the men indirectly connected with the organization to be present.

Herbert Gleason will speak on "An Evening with Burbank,' a lecture which has attracted much attention in the east. Mr. Gleason spends his summers with Burbank, the wizard gardener, at the latter's place near Pasadena. The talk will be illustrated with colored stereopticon pictures made by Mrs. Gleason.

The Garden club is giving financial and moral aid to the City Gardens association. It has subscribed $100 and is pledged to raise an additional $350 to pay the $450 salary of an expert farmer to superintend the fifty acres which the sanitary district is lending to the City Gardens association to be turned into truck gardens by the otherwise unemployed.

This land lies along the north branch drainage canal, just west of Foster avenue. For the thousands who daily pass that locality on the Northwestern trains it will be a delightful change to watch that unsightly district made to blossom and bring forth fruits and vegetables, while the project offers hope and healthful labor to many a disheartened mortal.

The work will be the first of its kind on a large scale in this country and will be modeled on the acres and acres of municipal gardens which make the outskirts of Hamburg and other German cities an inspiration to the rest of the world.

Interested in raising this $350 fund are Mrs. Joseph Cudahy, chairman of the committee, and Mrs. Charles Pike and Mrs. Hugh McBirney.

The City Gardens association has put new hope into many a man. One of its last summer protégés who was a lamp lighter by profession—an occupation which means many hours of leisure—became so enamored of gardening that he gave up lamplighting and is now a successful and prosperous truck farmer.

The Garden club is going to continue its campaign of last summer to protect and preserve the trees on the north shore. Mrs. Tiffany Blake is the president of the society and actively interested in the organization are Mmes. William G. Hibbard, Walter Brewster, George Higginson, (its first president), Edward L. Ryerson, Cyrus H. McCormick, and Hugh McBirney.

Speaking of providing work for the unemployed, Mrs. Henry M. Hubbard, who, with her husband, has been spending the winter in New York, has been deep in a sort of double headed philanthropic enterprise there, the like of which we have not here.

Her brother, the Rev. Dr. Herbert Shipman, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, has all winter thrown open the rooms of the parish house in East Forty-fifth street to unemployed men from 10 in the morning until 3 p. m. and provided them with work at 10 cents an hour and a noonday meal. The task is making every conceivable kind of bandage for the Red Cross. Two hundred and twenty-five men a day have there found a refuge and employment.

The Ritz-Carlton donated the daily bowl of soup for each man and from other sources have come gifts of sandwiches, pies, and other food. Three hospitals sterilize free the bandages, and one of the helpful features is the realization of the men that, unfortunate though they may be, they are working for men still more to be pitied.

A group of women, of which Mrs. Hubbard is head, spend each day there directing the work and serving the luncheon, and at the end of the day's work Dr. Shipman stands at the door and shakes hands with each one of the 225 men.

They come from all classes. One of their steadiest and best workers was an educated young civil engineer, who spoke five languages and whom hard times had simply stranded in New York without friends, funds, or influence. One man who applied for work was turned away because he had an infected finger. He came back the next day with a little package, which he showed Dr. Shipman. It was the finger, which he had had cut off at a hospital so that he would be qualified for rolling bandages.

Every day 4,000 yards of gauze and 400 yards of unbleached cotton are used in this church work shop. The materials cost $60 a day. The wages amount to over $600 a week. It takes money to run such an enterprise and New York has given to it liberally. Mrs. Edward Breitung, formerly of Chicago, gave $1,000 to it.

St. Bartholomew's church and the city of New York carried on similar schemes to aid the unemployed.

Chicago seems backward in its handling of a like situation. The fine work of the emergency employment bureau of the Chicago Woman's club and the work of the women of the Eli Bates house show that women here are more alert than men to handle such a crisis.

Among the visitors here last week was Count Renee de Montjou, who is at the head of a group of French officers detailed to buy supplies and horses in this country. Pleasant and comfortable as the work is, they all feel it a hardship to be sent away from France now.

The count has two sons in the war, one in the artillery service and the other attached to the aviation corps. The latter writes his father that every morning at 5 he flies from Paris to the battle line 150 miles away, scouts all day there, and returns in time to dine and spend a pleasant evening in Paris. Modern warfare is not all hardships.

As usual, it is the women who pay the piper. Count de Montjou's 17 year old daughter writes entreating her father to let her come over and join him in the well warmed hotels of America where there is plenty to eat, as her mother economizes so that she, the daughter, declares she doesn't get enough food for her body or enough coal for her fireplace.

Friends of the famous English artist, Glyn Philpot, are rejoicing over the fact that, although he enlisted and trained for active service, the military authorities assigned him to drawing maps in the home office, a fairly safe occupation. Recently there was need for some one to paint the names of the soldiers on their individual lockers. To Glyn Philpot was assigned the job, and the man generally acclaimed the greatest English artist of his generation acquitted himself with distinction at this humble task.

He spent considerable time here in the autumn of 1913 visiting Mrs. John A. Carpenter and Robert Allerton. He was enthusiastic about this country, its splendid spaciousness and spirit, but his particular panegyrics were called forth by our Pullman car porters. He thought they were the most stunning and paintable things in America.

After his return to London, one of his most famous achievements there was reminiscent of his American trip. It was a salon in the house of a multimillionaire where he painted a marvelous frieze of white bulls being led by coal black men on a golden background. It was said to be striking, original, and beautiful.

Mr. Philpot's portrait of Miss Isabelle McBirney is one of the notable works of art in Chicago.

Much a la mode now in eastern, southern, and western resorts is the custom for women to carry canes. At Atlantic City, Palm Beach, Hot Springs, White Sulphur Springs, and in Southern California, milady takes her walking stick when she walks abroad.

These can be as severely businesslike and uncompromising as the men's sticks or they can be ornamental. At White Sulphur Springs Mrs. Prescott Lawrence of New York, who has just come up from Palm Beach, sported a smart black ebony cane with a spreading gold top to it and a black tassel dangling from a gold rimmed hole that pierced the cane near the top. She wore chic outing garments, soft, untrimmed felt hats, loose bright checked coats, with big pockets, and flaring at the bottom; short skirts, high laced tan boots and the largest, most lustrous solitaire pearl earrings ever seen and very becoming to her soft, colorless skin.

Daily the afternoon promenaders on the Lake Shore drive grow in number. Let the fair pedestrians give a watering place air to the scene by carrying walking sticks. The custom adds to the pleasure of a stroll when you have learned to use a cane and not to trip over it or catch it in a passerby's garments or hair.

Mrs. John Casserly, who is leaving Chicago possibly permanently, is planning a delightful musical enterprise for next winter. This is a quartette composed of herself at the piano, Nikolai Sokoloff, the Russian violinist; a cellist from New York, and a second violin not yet selected. She meditates establishing herself and her quartet either in New York or San Francisco.

Mrs. Casserly and Mr. Sokoloff have imparted a delightfully musical atmosphere to Chicago society this winter. Their departure from among us will be a distinct loss.

Last Sunday's table d'hôte luncheon at the Casino was one of the merriest, most informal affairs on the club's chronicle. A strongly Italian flavor was imparted to the occasion by a delicious dish of spaghetti à la Milanaise, which Count Bolognesi prepared personally and of which all present partook with gusto. He also contributed some excellent chianti to the feast, and, to cap the Italian climax, Daddi, the well known tenor, sang Neapolitan melodies with delightful verve and spirit, the company joining in the choruses.

DYER

Miss Alice Cudahy, the daughter of Mr and Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy of 22 Banks street, was one of the debutantes of the season and took part in the Junior league entertainment last week as the leader of the Frivolite group, giving all the latest of the ballroom steps, including an intricate series of fox trot figures. She spent the early part of the year in Florida with her mother and sisters. Mrs. Walter C. Dyer of 5009 Blackstone avenue is one of a group of south shore women who have banded together in a somewhat unique organization. Being members of the Plymouth Congregational church in Fiftieth street, near Drexel avenue, they propose to beautify their church, and for that reason are engineering various entertainments to accomplish their purpose. Mrs. George W. Mathews Jr. of 3324 Michigan avenue is treasurer of the guild, which conducted a most successful charity ball at the Metropole in February.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Mrs. Henry Halbert Deming, 4850 Greenwood avenue, announces the engagement of her daughter, Margaretta Otis Deming, to Edwin Fiske Sherman of Providence, R. I. No date is set for the marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Hancock, 1239 Asbury avenue, Evanston, announce the engagement of their daughter, Frances, to Thomas Leonard Daniels, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Daniels of St. Paul, Minn.

The engagement of Miss Grace Gray, daughter of Mrs. Sarah A. Gray, 4021 Sheridan road, to Irving Tower, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Tower of Evanston, is announced.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Robinson of Oak Park announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Lillian Robinson, to Frank Wade, also of Oak Park.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Clara Louise Dixon and Dr. Frank Howard Richardson of the Long Island College hospital, Brooklyn. Miss Dixon is a daughter of the Rev. A. C. Dixon, head of the Metropolitan temple in London, formerly of the Moody church in Chicago.

John H. Bradshaw, 1021 Forest avenue, Evanston, announces the engagement of his daughter, Agnes Boynton, to Robert Pettit Waller of Cooperstown, N. Y.

The engagement is announced of Miss Helen Louise McGill, daughter of Mrs. George Frederic McGill of 6115 Greenwood avenue, to Dr. Carl H. Christoph, son of Dr. and Mrs. C. O. Christoph.

The Rev. and Mrs. F. M. Williams of 2253 Calumet avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Dorothea Frances, to Rudolf Karl Kind of Dusseldorf, Germany.

Announcement is made by Mrs. A. S. Burr of Bement, Ill., of the engagement of her daughter, Amelie Compton, to Francis Edgerton Manierre, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Manierre of 100 Bellevue place.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Volmer announce the betrothal of their daughter, Janet, to Albert Henry Thorpe.

WEDDINGS.

Mr. and Mrs. George Kinnear of 3842 Washington boulevard announce the marriage of their daughter, Libbie, to Noble A. Brigham on May 6.

Three Chicago schoolmates—the Misses Ruth Gregory, Virginia Chandler, and Dorothy Stirling—are to be bridesmaids for Miss Julia Lord Barry of Montclair, N. J., at her marriage on Monday, April 19, to Dr. Edward Whitney Bodman of Chicago. Miss Edith Barry, a sister, will be the maid of honor. Dr. Bodman will have Wallace Campbell for his best man, and the ushers will be his two cousins, Herbert L. Bodman and George M. Bodman of New York, and Charles Barry, brother of the bride. The wedding is to be celebrated in the afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dummer Barry, 83 Fullerton avenue, South Montclair.

Invitations were issued Wednesday by Dr. and Mrs. Charles Spencer Williamson of 1351 Dearborn avenue for the marriage of their daughter, Mary Josephine, to Carl Henry Zeiss on Saturday afternoon, April 24, at 4 o'clock in the Episcopal Church of the Ascension. At home cards are inclosed for after Oct. 1 at 156 East Superior street.

The marriage of Miss Mildred Childs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Childs of 1519 Hinman avenue, Evanston, to Eugene Miles Prentice will take place on Saturday at 8:30 at the family residence. The Rev. Timothy Prescott Frost, pastor of the First Methodist church of Evanston, will read the service. Miss Jeannette Prentice, sister of the bridegroom, will be maid of honor, and the matron of honor will be Mrs. Harry James Coons. Olive Bucks of Aurora will be the bridesmaid and Miss Marie White Clark will sing. John Roland Childs will be best man and Frank A. Childs will be master of ceremonies.

The marriage of Miss Louise Ruth Dorsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dorsey of Gilberts, Ill., to E. Brewster Stewart of Elgin will take place on Wednesday at 6 o'clock at the country residence of the bride's parents. Miss Marie Dorsey will be maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Maureen Love and Miss Mary Ruth Hodge. Frank Astor of Elgin, W. T. Hodge, and Stewart Dorsey will be the men attendants.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Bender of 2640 Lake View avenue announce the coming marriage of their daughter, Sylvia Louise, to Milton S. Guggenheim on Wednesday at the Blackstone.

PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick Jr., the latter formerly Miss Dorothy Linn, who have been spending their honeymoon in Spain, sail for home on Tuesday. They will remain in Chicago a few days before going to their new home in Wichita, Kas.

A son was born Wednesday to Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey B. McCormick of 2645 Sheridan road, Evanston. Mrs. McCormick formerly was Miss Marion Deering.

Mrs. Secor Cunningham, 999 Lake Shore drive, gave a small luncheon and bridge party Tuesday, complimentary to Mrs. Ware of Grand Rapids, mother of Mrs. Herbert E. Schwarz of 845 Lincoln parkway.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Chatfield-Taylor, who have been south for a number of weeks, have arrived at the Shoreham in Washington to spend some time before coming to Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey J. Blair, 4830 Drexel boulevard, who have been at Atlantic City, returned a short time ago to Chicago and Mrs. Blair left again Wednesday for New York. Miss Mildred Blair is in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Earling, 1400 North State parkway, are expected home the latter part of the week from Virginia Hot Springs, where they have spent the last fortnight.

Mrs. John S. Miller and daughter, Miss Janet Miller, 1443 Astor street, have returned from Virginia Hot Springs, where they went two months ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Vincent O'Brien, 450 Oakdale avenue, announce the arrival of a baby girl. The child has been named Jean and is the second in the family, the first being a son. Mrs. O'Brien was formerly Miss Louise Waller.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Valentine of New York, formerly of Chicago, are to open their country place, "Danforth Lodge," at Oconomowoc this summer. For two seasons the family has had the Breese place on Long Island, but this year they are coming west. Mrs. Valentine will pass through Chicago the early part of May to have the place put in order.

Mrs. R. W. Stevens of Highland Park is giving a series of luncheons the first on last Friday and the second next Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin L. Winchell, 1100 Lake Shore drive, who have been east for a fortnight, returned home on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. David E. Dangler, 61 East Oak street, returned on Tuesday from St. Paul, where they have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Shepard.

Mrs. Edward A. Leicht, 2416 Lake View avenue, who has been at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., has returned home.

Mrs. Charles Fuller of Winnetka was hostess Monday afternoon at a tea given in honor of Mrs. Marshall Schoenthaler, who recently moved to Winnetka, the family having built a home near the Indian Head club.

Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher M. Dobyns have leased the house belonging to Leonard Roach, 288 Sheridan road, Winnetka, and will take possession May 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Letts have taken the Paxton house at Lake Forest for the summer, and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tyson have taken the Foster house for the season.

Eames MacVeagh has returned after an absence of several months spent in Washington with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh.

Mrs. James M. Walker, 1720 Prairie avenue, has gone to Trion, N. C., for a few weeks.

Mrs. Elisha Whitehead and daughter, Miss Virginia Whitehead, have returned from California and are staying with Mrs. Whitehead's elder daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Rockwell, 1260 Lake Shore drive.

Mr. and Mrs. George Higginson Jr., 713 Rush street, will move to their summer home in Winnetka May 1.

Mrs. William G. Hibbard Jr., 1637 Prairie avenue, will return from New York next Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. William de Burg Whyte of New York and their little daughter, Amice, are visiting Mrs. Whyte's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic T. Vaux of 1520 Astor street. Mr. and Mrs. Whyte have just come from the south.

$1 BRINGS THIS Olson Vacuum Cleaner to Your Home

FREE Rug Cleaned FREE

THE Olson Vacuum Cleaner and Sweeper lightens your housework; saves carpet cleaning bills; does the work of six brooms and old-fashioned carpet sweepers; sucks out the dirt and sand imbedded in your rugs without raising any dust. Requires no electric current—needs no power; is ball-bearing, runs with the slightest push—a child can operate it, and its air suction is equal to a $60.00 to $100.00 electric cleaner. Built of steel, will last a lifetime; 8 in. high, 19 in. long, 12 in. wide; nickel-plated, beautiful mahogany finish—a genuine bargain at the regular retail price of $10.50. This week you can get this up-to-date, latest improved Olson Vacuum Cleaner direct from the factory for $1.00 down and $1.00 a month for five months.

Your Rug Cleaned Free

Fill out the coupon below and we will send a demonstrator to your home who will clean a rug or room carpet without charge—just to show you how the Olson Vacuum Cleaner and Sweeper actually sucks up dust and dirt out of your carpets and rugs, and even off the floor beneath your carpets.

Remember that sweeping with a stiff broom or old-fashioned carpet sweeper shortens the life of your carpets and rugs. Beating a rug on a line breaks the warp and takes out the natural stiffness, causing it to wear out much quicker than it should.

The Olson Vacuum Cleaner and Sweeper keeps a home dustless—and dust is known to be a disease breeder. This Cleaner conveys the dust out of the house; it isn't stirred up at one spot only to settle in another.

Run over your rugs or carpets once or twice a week with an Olson Vacuum Cleaner and Sweeper and you will keep them practically as clean as new and you will never have to take them off the floor. The time required for cleaning, sweeping and dusting is cut from hours to minutes, and these hours can be devoted to rest, recreation and study.

The Olson Vacuum Cleaner and Sweeper is guaranteed for ten years. Mail the coupon today sure, because our staff of demonstrators is very busy—and "first come, first served."

News of the Chicago Women's Clubs

By Inez Travers.

THE election of officers of the Chicago South Side club shows the following result: President, Mrs. William F. Van Buskirk; first vice president, Mrs. Frank J. Hathway; second vice president, Miss Ida F. Powell; recording secretary, Mrs. Charles F. Roff; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. C. Lanahan; treasurer, Mrs. T. G. Hislop.

The club has also added a new department of civics, of which Mrs. L. H. Moff is chairman and Mrs. G. J. Magenheimer secretary and treasurer. For the last two years the club has maintained a civics study class in order that its members may become intelligent voters and citizens and because it was such a success and so well attended the club decided the department of civics was a necessity.

Before the addition of the new department there were only three—philanthropy and reform, of which Mrs. William H. Hapfield is chairman; art and literature, with Mrs. Frederick L. Brown as chairman; and home and education, headed by Mrs. Hiram J. Slifer.

It was the Chicago South Side club that obtained the amendment to the law which abolished all winerooms and all separate rooms connected with saloons and rooming houses that are shut off from public view. Even screens that partitioned groups at tables from public view were abolished, thus removing moral dangers to young girls.

The club hired an investigator, who, in the character of an habitué, visited 478 saloons between the hours of 10 p. m. and 1 a. m. and reported to the club. A committee formed at that time and not yet dissolved enlisted the help of the city council and passed the amendment to the law.

That was in June of last year, and the committee is still following up the work and intends to do so in the future. There are five members of the committee, including its chairman, Mrs. Emily M. Harper. The other members are Mmes. Henri C. E. David, Russell H. Opdike, William F. Van Buskirk, and W. H. Hapfield.

The programs of the art and literature department are always arranged with great care and thought and with the progressive spirit that moves all the enterprises of the club. The club is affiliated with all of the larger organizations and contributes to many of the charities. The fruits of its work for the Red Cross were sent to the suffering women and children of Belgium.

Several new committees have been organized by the club, one to study federal, state, and municipal law with the view of making it a matter of interest and betterment to the club. It will be known as the legislative committee. A committee on conservation will endeavor to create interest in the Lincoln highway and the conservation of birds, flowers, and trees.

MRS. THEODORE LAIST

MRS. FRANK PORTMAN

MRS LUCILLE ADAMS FINNEGAN

MRS H. W. SHERMAN

Members of the Edgewater Drama Study club will present two plays at the Bryn Mawr theater, Bryn Mawr avenue, near Broadway, tomorrow evening. "Cranford," by Marguerite Merington, will be played by a cast composed of Mesdames Henry F. Furter, Henry J. Ross, Theodore Harbeck, Frank J. Reed, Frank Portman, Theodore Laist, Charles Milroy, H. W. Sherman, and Lucille Adams Finnegan. In "The Burglar," by Margaret Cameron, Mesdames Furter, Harbeck, Reed, Sherman, and Finnegan will appear. The plays will be staged under the direction of Donald Robertson. Mrs. Philip B. Price is president of the club.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS.

"The Troyan Women," said to be the world's greatest peace play, will be given this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Blackstone theater under the auspices of the Chicago branch of the Woman's Peace party. The play will be given by the Chicago Little Theater company. The play, which was written by Euripides and first played in 415 B. C., has been selected by the Woman's Peace party from the world's entire dramatic literature as "the most vivid, the most poignant, and the most beautiful illustration of war's utter futility." Miss Jane Addams will make a farewell address in connection with the performance. She will leave this evening for the east, preparatory to sailing for The Hague for the woman's international peace congress, which opens April 28.

The Chicago Woman's club will meet Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the assembly room, Fine Arts building. President Henry Noble MacCracken of Vassar college will speak on "Some New Humanities in the Woman's College." President John S. Nollen, Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, and other educators, will take part in the discussion. The literary study class will meet on the morning of the same day in the assembly room. The program will be in the hands of the forestry class and will be given by Jens Jensen on the subject "Local Color," illustrated by the stereopticon. The class in modern philosophy meets tomorrow at 2:15 p. m. Miss Esther Wilsowsky will summarize the work of the year on "The New Vitalism." The board of managers will meet Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The education department will give a spring luncheon on Saturday. Three concerts are given this afternoon in Fullerton hall, the Art institute, at 3, 4:15, and 8 o'clock.

The next regular meeting of the Baron Hirsch Woman's club and co-workers will be held Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. at the Auditorium hotel.

The alumnæ of the Academy of Our Lady will meet Tuesday at the Hotel La Salle.

A child welfare conference will be held in the Lewis-Champlin school on Tuesday by the Illinois Congress of Mothers and Parent Teacher organizations. Mrs. William F. Young will preside.

A minstrel dance will be given by the Kappa Beta Gamma association next Saturday evening in the rooms of the Chicago club in the Stevens building.

Tomorrow afternoon and evening there will be presented at the Little theater in the Fine Arts building, a series of Shakspearean scenes by eighteen young women under the direction of Miss Grace Hickok. The entire proceeds are for the benefit of the Esther Falkenstein settlement.

Mrs. James H. Stansfield of Oak Park was chosen president of the Illinois Society of the United States Daughters of 1812 at its twelfth annual meeting in the Hotel La Salle last week. The other officers chosen for 1915 were: First vice president, Mrs. E. G. Ingersoll; second vice president, Mrs. William Reed; recording secretary, Mrs. E. G. Tryor; registrar, Mrs. Amos Walker; historian, Mrs. Lee Bolte.

Folk dances, "The Awakening of the Flowers," and a costumed wedding, illustrating old Russian myths, will be the features of the spring festival and flower carnival to be given tomorrow evening at the Chicago Beach hotel for the benefit of the Argus Philanthropic club. Bishop Samuel Fallows will give the opening address and Dean Walter S. Pond of SS. Peter and Paul's Episcopal cathedral, and the Rev. H. Prince of Epiphany church will speak. Mrs. Daniel Munro is the president and founder of the club and Mrs. Elton J. Arnold, 4713 Kimbark avenue, is the general chairman, assisted by Mrs. George W. Dixon, 2706 Michigan avenue, and Mrs. Robert H. Hunter, 1625 Hyde Park boulevard.

Invitations are being issued by the Mid-chapter of the Alden Kindred of America, descendants of John Alden and Priscilla Mullins, for an illustrated lecture on the Pilgrim movement in England, Holland, and America to be given in the lecture room of the Chicago Historical society, 632 North Dearborn street, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Preceding the lecture many of the members of the chapter and their friends will take dinner at 6 o'clock at the Alexandria hotel.

Mrs. D. Harry Hammer was reëlected president of the Mothers' Relief society at the annual meeting in the Blackstone hotel. The other officers chosen for 1915 were: First vice president, Mrs. Sylvester Smith; second vice president, Mrs. Valdemar Michaelson; treasurer, Mrs. Oliver Belmont Sargeant; secretary, Mrs. Fred A. Palmer; directors, Mrs. F. E. Greene, Mrs. Leslie Mullen, Mrs. William Molt, Mrs. Alexander Dryburgh, Mrs. E. W. Greene, and Mrs. Hans Leafgreen.

Tea will be given by the V. F. A. club at the Hotel La Salle at 3 o'clock today. Mrs. F. H. Gansbergen, president of the ninth district of the Federation of Woman's Clubs, and Mrs. T. F. Hickey, chairman of social and industrial conditions of the federation, will be guests of honor. There will be a musical program.

The New Hampshire colony of the Illinois Colony club will hold the fort on Tuesday at 2 o'clock at the Auditorium hotel with a program of living pictures.

Alumnæ of various schools conducted by the Sisters of Charity, B. V. M., have inaugurated a series of monthly luncheons. The next luncheon will be held on Saturday at 1 o'clock in the ivory room at Mandel's. The following schools will be represented: Sacred Heart, St. Aloysius, St. Mary's, Our Lady of Lourdes, Holy Name, and De Paul, of Chicago; Chicago chapter of Mount St. Joseph's, Dubuque; St. Mary's academy, Elgin; and Our Lady of Angels, Lyons, Ia. Miss Margaret O'Connor, president of the National Federation of B. V. M. Alumnæ, is sponsor for these luncheons and invites alumnæ of the B. V. M. of other cities resident or visiting in Chicago to attend. St. Mary's alumnæ is in charge of the program for next Saturday and a card party will follow the luncheon.

Vol. 1. April 11, 1915. No. 14
By HAMILTON
THE "UNUSUAL"

A most unusual purchase for this time of the year, especially in view of advancing prices, has just been made by Revell & Co. It consists of a huge stock of domestic rugs purchased at a bargain.

Since 1840 The J. W. Dimick Co., makers of RIFTON CARPETS and RUGS, have been favorably known to the best dealers throughout the country. The decease of the founder of the busines has caused the disposal of the entire stock.

The firm of Revell & Co., has determined to dispose of the rugs quickly, consequently their profit represents but a reasonable advance on their good fortune.

Here is an opportunity to transfer your old rug and place several new ones at a low figure.

The Revell Rug Department occupying the entire third floor, has advanced to a first place among the rug stores of America.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Hosiery Display Feature in New York Easter Exhibit.

By Mme. Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Time was that in speaking of Easter mention was made of its religious significance. Now one speaks only of hosiery. Perhaps never in any recorded history has such a display of it been on exhibition as was offered in Fifth avenue on last Sunday morning. Why have fashion experts been discoursing on skirts? Why have they been doing over everything connected with the war from German visors and broken treaties and submarines into motifs for hats? Why speculate on whether the Victorian or the common sense shall dictate stayles? There is only one point on which they have been able to bring public opinion to a decision, and that is that costumes shall be short and footwear shall be conspicuous.

Even those experts on women's appearance who have spent a great many of their evenings in the front row of the musical drama expressed some little astonishment at the spectacle to which they gave their attention in Fifth avenue on Easter. Every self-respecting woman wore spats of a color that constituted the most unexpected and complete contrast to all of the rest of her raiment. The more conservative contented themselves with white, providing their dresses were black or some other highly contrasting color—and the truly adventuresome wore rose color, green, purple, and Prussian red.

Above these, blithely showing, was hosiery of entirely independent hue, owing allegiance neither to tone of skirts or gaiter. There were green ones with white stripes going round them, and others of the same shade without stripes. A first nighter, speaking with authority, said that the plain ones had stripes above the calves and the striped ones were undecorated in their upper lengths. Truly the task of description in this religious parade is appropriate to the theatrical and the fashion expert.

Time was, about and during the twenty-four hours preceding, when it seemed as if New York would have no Easter fashion parade. The big storm of the season descended on New York the day previous, and continued until far in the night. The sun got on the job early the next morning, however, and from the horizon issued a few running directions to wind and cloud, which resulted in the banishment of all signs of storm.

Shortly thereafter Mrs. Vanderbilt, Clarence Mackaye, with his two daughters, Cornelius Vanderbilt with his daughter, Cornelia, Mrs. Oelrichs, and others, took up their practice of years' standing, which is to walk up the avenue in the richest of spring raiment and the most optimistic of smiles.

Even those prominent in the woman's peace movement upheld the military styles, and all of the warring nations were represented in their characteristic modes.

One of decidedly the most tasteful was worn by Miss Mary Cass Canfield, and it consisted of a long old gold velvet tunic flowered in dark neutral shades of bronze and copper greens. It was made with a modish full ripple skirt, edged round the bottom with skunk fur. The skirt was of black cloth, and this also composed the short jacket. The whole costume was topped with a tiny black hat that came over her hears, from which dropped long oriental earrings.

Her mother, Mrs. Frank Griswold, wore a costume of dregs of wine cloth trimmed in fitch fur, and a hat of the same color in velvet, with a high garniture of wine colored feathers. Mrs. Oliver Harriman was very attractive indeed in a suit of dark blue cloth and a hat of Belgian blue rolling high on one side—like the North sea—and trimmed round the crown with a wreath of American Beauty roses.

The dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt wore black, since she is in complimentary mourning for her brother-in-law, William Douglas Sloane. Her little black hat was one of the new pointed tricorners and was trimmed in a big row of black crêpe lisse She wore black fox furs.

Battle-ship gray constituted the color of Mrs. Walter Damrosch's costume. Over it she wore a coat of baby lamb, topped by a tiny black straw hat. Mrs. Gretchen Damrosch, charming young prospective debutante, was in black velvet, winged with a blue straw hat.

Mrs. Stanford White made her first appearance in a long while. She was costumed in black velvet trimmed with black satin. Mrs. White never wears anything that is not black.

One vainly tries in looking on such a pageant to formulate some general truths. Individual descriptions may be all very well for running reading, but how is one going to dress? What is to become of the last year's frock that might be made over by some deft hand to look like Miss Canfield's Russian tunic? Never in this wide world was a general deduction more difficult to make. Never has there been such a warring of opposing fashions.

There is only one straight tip, and that is that all of the unfashionables are so eager to appear fashionable that the fashionables think it smart to appear very quiet and unfashionable indeed. The 400 therefore get hold of something with a warring name to it, like a Tipperary sailor, and deck themselves out in it in the full belief that they have sufficiently paid their respects to fashions and wars both. A decided style of the day is to appear sloppy, and that ought to constitute a real boon to home dressmakers.

For the rest, with the battle now raging between French and American fashions, and with Paul Poiret and other French generals of styles lying in the trenches along with their frontier, matters are taking their own course. There is the one accepted decree that costumes must be short, and it is supplemented by another pretty well established dictate that they must be full some place. Those skirts that do not go into a balloon just below the waist are pretty likely to do so below the knees, and in the places where they are not full they are extremely slender.

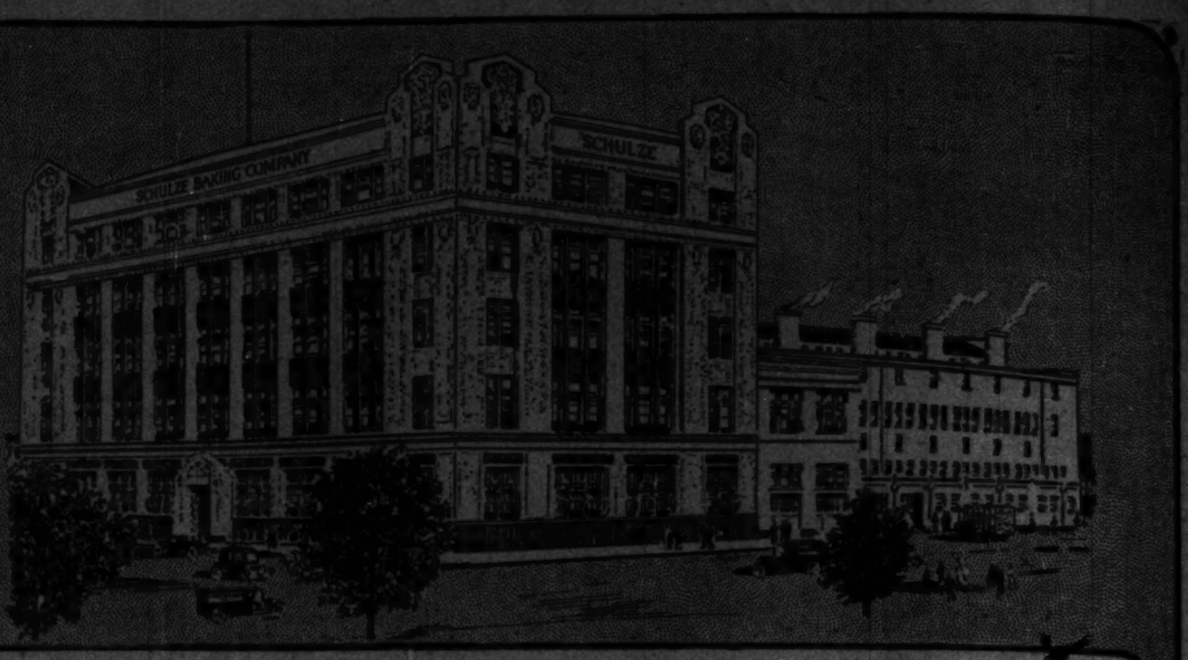
Wabash Ave. ALEXANDER H. REVELL & CO. Adams St.



New Home of Schulze's Butter-Nut Bread 55th St. (Garfield Blvd.) and Wabash Ave.

Visit this "City of Cleanliness" —the New Schulze Bakery

INSPECT the great new Schulze bread plant that your demand has created.

Beginning Monday, April 12, all Chicago will be welcomed to this world's greatest bakery that has been aptly termed a city in itself—a "City of Cleanliness!"

A wonderful, 700-window, sunlit, sanitary bakery that covers over 48,000 square feet of ground area and cost $600,000.00—located at 55th St., (Garfield Boulevard) and Wabash Avenue.

You enter "Cleanliness City," after a view of its graceful architecture, its attractive cream-and-blue enamel exterior, through the lofty entrance to a beautiful reception room where a collection of paintings by Wilson Irvine is now on exhibition.

Courteous guides will conduct you through the bakery.

You will marvel at the cleanliness—the absolute sanitation—the modern machines that do things "better than hands." You will note the high ceilings that insure perfect air circulation.

The air is washed by machinery—an entire change of atmosphere every 7 minutes.

You will admire the snow-white floors—the spotless walls.

You will see how the flour is cleaned and re-cleaned—sifted through sheet after sheet of finest silk.

You will wonder at the precision of the human-like machines that perfectly weigh and measure the exact amount of highest grade flour and the best yeast—the correct proportions of pure milk, filtered water, salt and sugar. You will approve the wonderful automatic mixers.

It makes the housewife's arms tired just to look at the great, high-speed kneading machines—where giant blades mix the dough with a thoroughness that home baking cannot equal.

You will admire the snowy sponge and the clean, white dough that is taken by automatic carriers from department to department—and comes up again and again for "proving."

You will see exactly how the dough is weighed, cut into loaves—and sent at last to the white-tiled ovens, heated by gas to 500 degrees—the secret of the dainty texture of Schulze's Butter-Nut Bread.

Then watch the crisp, golden loaves come out—and get an appetizing whiff of their goodness! See how they are wrapped in clean waxed paper, all ready for delivery—to the city in spotless wagons—to out-of-town customers in sanitary cartons.

Sunlight, fresh air, honest soap and water—eternal vigilance—keep the Schulze plant sweet and wholesome—a fitting home for Butter-Nut Bread. Come and see what sanitary science has done for bread-making. Learn why you can rely—always—on the Schulze label.

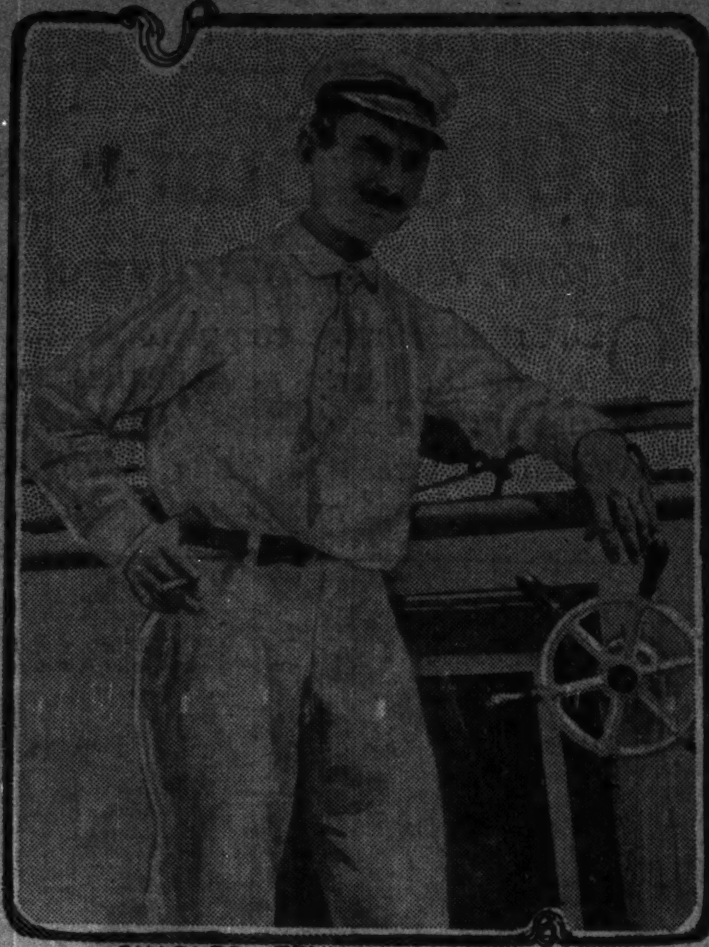
TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by FANNY BUTCHER



•CHARLES TENNEY JACKSON•

ECCENTRIC C. T. JACKSON.

THIS is the way Charles Tenney Jackson looks when he's expecting callers in his houseboat home in Louisiana. He has the reputation of being a most eccentric person, even for an author man. Once a year he goes to New York, sees his friends, has as frivolous a time as any other Bohemian, but all the rest of the year he lives in a houseboat among the lily pads of Barataria, La. People who live around there insist that Mr. Jackson is better posted on the history of the neighborhood than the natives themselves. Barataria has an interesting legendary history, which includes both bold pirates and hidden treasure. Last spring Mr. Jackson and several of his houseboat neighbors set out on a hunt for some of this buried treasure. They were gone for nearly a month. When they returned they were sadder, mosquito bitten, and wiser men. "John the Fool" (Bobbs-Merrill), Mr. Jackson's latest novel, is full of the "atmosphere" of Barataria. If you remember his "The Midlanders" and liked it, you'll not want to miss "John the Fool."

"What were the two best books you've read recently?" was the question asked in a most interesting canvass conducted by the New York World, which brought unexpected results. I append some of them. How would you answer the question?

William H. Taft: Trevelyan's "History of the American Revolution" and Thayer's "Cavour."

Irvin S. Cobb: "Quinnies," by Walpole. [He undoubtedly means Horace Annesley Vachell's "Quinney's"; Hugh Walpole has never written a book of that title], and "Ruggles of Red Gap," by Wilson.

Ellen Glasgow: "Youth," the volume containing "Heart of Darkness," by Joseph Conrad, and "Lord Jim," by Joseph Conrad.

James Montgomery Flagg: "The Turmoil," by Booth Tarkington, and "The Price of Love," by Arnold Bennett.

Julian Street: "The Turmoil," by Booth Tarkington, and "The Ladder," by Philip Curtiss.

Miss Belle Greene, librarian of the Morgan library: "The Romance of Leonardo da Vinci," by Dmitri Merejkowski, and "A Preface to Politics," by Walter Lippmann.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox: "Death and After," by Annie Besant, and "War Brides," by Marion Craig Wentworth.

Daniel Frohman: "Pan Germanism," by Roland G. Usher, and "The Eyes of the World," by Harold Bell Wright. [Mr. Frohman explains that he read "The Eyes of the World" not "because it was one of the best things to be had, but because I wanted to try to see what the best selling formula was. I found that it was simply an interpretation of the movie idea in fiction."]

J. B. Kerfoot of Life: "The New Movement in the Theater," by Sheldon Cheney, and "The Demi-Gods," by James Stephens.

Robert W. Chambers: "Quinney's," by H. A. Vachell, and "The Duchess of Wrexe," by Hugh Walpole.

Brander Matthews: "Criticism," by W. C. Brownell, and "The British Empire and the United States," by William A. Dunning.

Winston Churchill: "The Duchess of Wrexe," by Hugh Walpole, and "Life of the Fly," by Henri Fabre.

Irvin S. Cobb is resting up after the most strenuous six months that any one has ever spent. During those months he went to the war, got himself captured, and succeeded in getting back home without the loss of a pound, wrote for the magazines the most talked of articles about the war, revised them for his new book, "Paths of Glory" (Doran), and made a tour half way across the United States lecturing on the war. He deserves the vacation he now is having with the Edgar Selwyns and the Bayard Veillers. It takes the form of a five months' ramble through the far west, through the Grand Canyon, and eventually to the fair.

The death of Frederick W. Taylor a few days ago marks how short a time it has been since "scientific management" was put before the general public. It was in 1903 that Mr. Taylor first read a paper before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers explaining the methods he had been testing for years in a great Pennsylvania steel plant. In 1911 his first book, "The Principles of Scientific Management" (Harper), was published and followed a few months later by "Shop Management."

April 3 was the seventy-eighth birthday of that most genial of author-naturalists, John Burroughs. In some states the day was set aside as Bird day. In others quiet little commemorations were held. All nature lovers welcome a new book from his pen. "The Breath of Life" (Houghton-Mifflin) will be published April 27. "The whole gospel of my books," he has said, "is stay at home; see the wonderful and the beautiful in the simple things all about you." That is why his books mean so much to us.

Conan Doyle's theory of writing fiction is worth knowing. "Within the bounds of morality," he says, "all methods are legitimate. You are right to make your book adventurous, you are right to make it theological, you are right to make it informative, or controversial, or idyllic, or humorous, or grave, or what you will, but you must make it interesting. That is essential—all the rest is detail."

"A Volume of Translations of Poems by Emile Verhaeren, the Belgian Poet," is the lengthy title of a volume which is to come from the John Lane company some time this month. The translator, Alma Strettell, has supplied a biographical introduction. M. Verhaeren is such an important figure in the literary horizon of Belgium that this volume is sure to find a welcoming audience.

William Lyon Phelps of Yale in his "Essays on Russian Novelists" (Macmillan) says of "Sanine" (Huebsch) that it was "the most sensational novel published in Russia in five years." He thinks it "sinister and damnable in its tendency," and is "sorry such a book has ever been written." "But it cannot," he adds, "be blackballed from the republic of letters."

News of the Religious World

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

A STATELY church building with towers and roof intact but still remaining a vast dome within waiting for plasterer, decorator, and furnisher is St. Jerome's Catholic church, located at Lunt avenue and North Paulina street.

The pastor of the church is the Rev. Thomas F. Farrell, who has had charge of the parish only two years, but is familiar with every detail and step in the construction of the new edifice, which he expects to see some day complete in every appointment.

As one approaches the church from a distance its outlines appear as they will when the church is finished, but it will take probably until next October before the congregation will be able to move from the wooden edifice on the southern end of the church property facing Morse avenue, which has served for twenty or more years as the St. Jerome's church, into the new and larger structure.

The building is of the north Italian renaissance style of architecture. The material of which it is built is red tapestry brick with Bedford stone trimming. Charles H. Prindiville is the architect.

The most striking feature of the exterior decoration will be three figures of heroic size representing St. Jerome, the patron saint of the church, St. Augustine, and St. Gregory, which will be the principal ornaments above the main entrances to the church.

The ground occupied by the new and the old church buildings, the home of the Sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary and the home for the priests, is 159 by 119 feet, lacking but a few feet of a half a block.

The value of the property including the buildings is about $230,000. The new church building alone will cost $95,000.

The building is almost absolutely fireproof. There are no wooden frames in the windows. Every device was used to make an enduring structure.

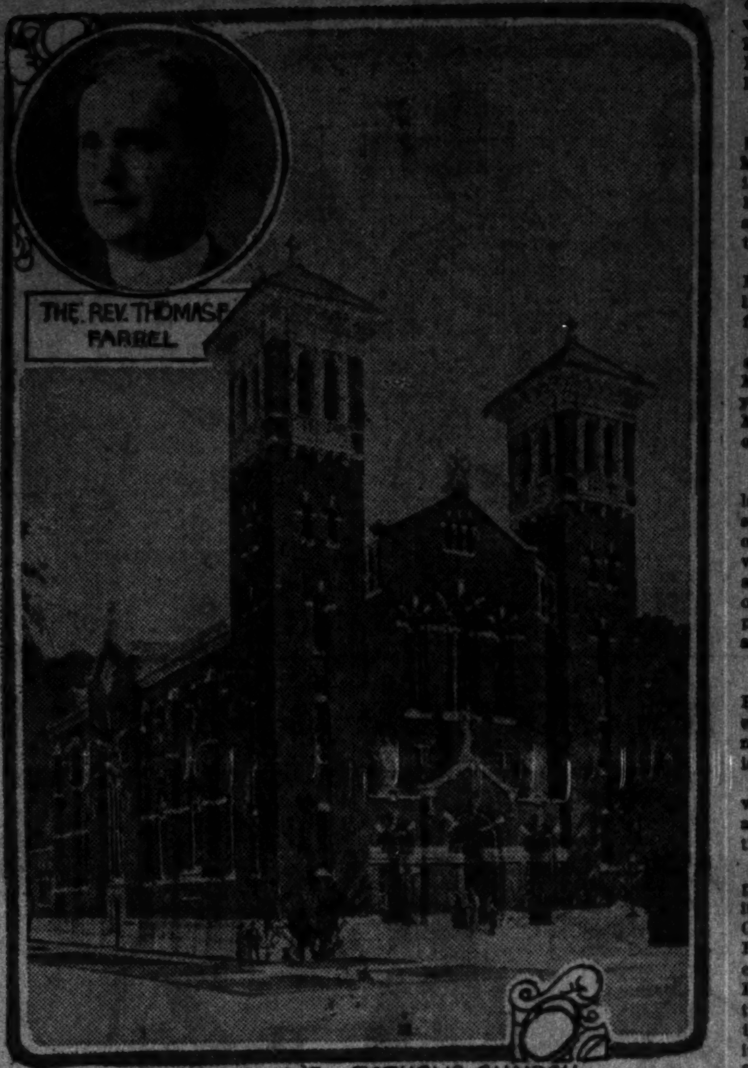
Father Farrell was born in Chicago and largely educated here. He attended the St. Patrick's Commercial college three years and St. Ignatius' college four years. He then went to Baltimore to finish his training. He was assistant priest at St. Elizabeth's church at Forty-first street and South Wabash avenue for sixteen years before his appointment to St. Jerome's.

Owing to the strike now on in some of the building trades the work of construction is almost at a standstill, although the carvers are busy chiseling the stone ornaments. Because of this lull Father Farrell is devoting some of his time to the cultivation of outdoor flowers.

"When I lived at Forty-first street and Wabash avenue," he said, "there was no chance for flowers or gardens. Rogers Park is still somewhat suburban and gardens and chicken raising are still in vogue."

When asked whether he found his training at the commercial college any advantage he answered that all useful knowledge could be put to use in some phase of church or parish work.

"Every priest has to keep a complete system of records," he said, "and I have found a knowledge of bookkeeping which I learned very convenient. Another practical lesson I found of value was in learning the way in which a pipe organ is built. I know the mechanical parts of an organ to a nicety. If a valve doesn't work properly or if one of the pieces of leather becomes too hard and inflexible I don't have to send for a workman to have it fixed."



ST. JEROME'S CATHOLIC CHURCH.

St. Jerome's Catholic church at Lunt avenue and North Paulina street, Rogers Park, is now under construction. The Rev. Thomas F. Farrell is pastor of the church. The building is under roof and will be ready for dedication, it is hoped, by next October.

The St. Jerome's parish was organized by the Rev. H. P. Smyth, pastor of St. Mary's church, Evanston, in 1893. Services were first held in a store. The parish has grown until the frame church erected after the store was outgrown has become too small.

The trustees of the church are Peter Phillip, a Rogers Park banker, and William P. Lawton, a member of a real estate firm.

The presidents of the various societies are: President of the Sanctuary society, Mrs. James M. Fay; president of the young ladies' sodality, Miss Katherine Maloney, and president of the Children of Mary sodality, Miss Agnes Green.

The Rt. Rev. P. J. Muldoon, state chaplain of the Knights of Columbus, has issued an official request that April 18 be observed as Knights of Columbus Sunday, when all members of the organization will attend the 8 o'clock mass in their several cities in a body and pray for permanent peace among the belligerent countries abroad and also in Mexico.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Bethel Evangelical Lutheran church, located at North Keeler and West End avenues, will be celebrated today with services at 10:30 a. m. and 3 and 7:30 p. m.

The Rev. A. Kaftschuck, the pastor, who has been pastor of the church for about twenty years, will have charge of the services.

The Rev. F. Bahr of Lena, Ill., and the pastor will occupy the pulpit in the morning. The Rev. T. F. Dornblaser of the Grace Evangelical Lutheran church, the Rev. Christ Knudten of St. Simon's church, and the Rev. B. Lederer of St. Peter's German Lutheran church will be the speakers at the afternoon service. In the evening the Rev. F. Werhahn of Trinity Lutheran church and the Rev. John Seibert of the City Missionary society of the northern Illinois synod will be the speakers. Several soloists will assist the Bethel church choir at the various services.

The Rev. R. C. Young of Crestline, O., has accepted a call to the Emerson Street Presbyterian mission of Evanston. He will enter upon his duties as pastor on May 1. The mission is a branch of the First Presbyterian church of Evanston, of which the Rev. David Hugh Jones is pastor.

Hard Winter Makes Visiting Nurse Problem Difficult.

By Mrs. Arthur T. Aldis.

FROM time to time it becomes necessary for the Visiting Nurse association to say to the people of Chicago, "We need money to care for the sick who ask this service."

Never have we asked in vain. Once, years ago, it was to put special nurses in a contagious hospital during a smallpox epidemic; once it was to start tuberculosis work; once it was to put on extra nurses to care for a serious scarlet fever situation; many, many times, as now, it has been for the general work of the association.

Just what is this work? Patient instruction in the laws of hygiene, domestic science, and sanitation; daily bedside nursing service to the sick and needy; the trained watchfulness and cares so necessary to the newly born, and the soothing and comforting of the last hours of the dying.

This is our task, and it is a mighty one. Every day by 8 o'clock seventy-three visiting nurses are at work in the districts. Of course there are many others in the city, school, infant welfare, tuberculosis nurses, etc., who do specialized work, but the district nurses of the Visiting Nurse association are the only ones who take all kinds of cases.

This winter, as every one knows, has been a peculiarly hard one. Thousands who have never before appealed to charity have been obliged to do so temporarily. The demand upon our nurses has been larger than ever before, and we have been at work for twenty-five years. The average number of new calls each day in January, February, and March was 128. As each new call is made within a few hours it was found necessary early in the winter to put extra relief nurses on duty, it was supposed temporarily. Here are the figures for the first three months of 1915 just past:

Number of nurses on the staff, seventy.

Number of visits of each nurse per diem, eleven. (This is too many for as good work as we should like to do, if we had the means.)

Number of patients cared for, 15,402.

Number of visits made, 56,441.

At a meeting of the board of directors held on April 1 it was found impossible to spare the extra relief nurses, as even with their help every nurse on the staff was doing her utmost to give the care so sorely needed by those unable to obtain it in any other way. The question was how to secure extra funds. It was decided to put our needs before the public.

We have endeavored to merit the confidence of our subscribers in our ability to spend wisely moneys intrusted to us. Each visit of nursing care costs 50 cents. Picture to yourself what it means. The nurse enters to find perhaps a 6 year old child restlessly tossing in fever, very likely fully dressed and covered with a feather bed. Every window is tight shut, washing is going on by a hot stove.

A glance at the patient, and the nurse asks, "Who is the doctor?" Often there has been none. One is summoned. Meanwhile what happens? The child's temperature is taken and found to be 103. A rash is observed. The nurse takes precautions. A separate room is demanded, and after considerable use of the art of persuasion is obtained. In a short time after the patient is isolated in a clean cot bed, supplied with all necessary linen from the association loan closet, refreshed by a bath, and everything possible done that the occasion demands.

The mother is given explicit instructions what to do and what not to do until the doctor comes. Sympathetic friends are warned they had better keep at a distance; proper disinfectants are left, with instructions how to use them, and the nurse leaves, promising to return in the morning or possibly the same day. Before doing so she communicates with the doctor to receive instructions; all this at a cost of 50 cents. It is a good investment.

Citizens of Chicago, we ask your 50 cents, as many of them as you can spare. Ask yourself the question.

We earnestly hope that many who have not heretofore realized the means at hand of giving this nursing care may enroll themselves as regular subscribers of the association, for any amount, large or small, in proportion to their means, as helping to realize the confident expectation of the board of directors that adequate support will be forthcoming.

"Me for 'GETS-IT' When I Have Corns"

Simple as Saying It; Never Fails

It does your heart good to see how easily and quickly any corn comes out when you put "GETS-IT" on! And then when you've gone along for years trying everything, when you've sat up nights wrapping up your toes in bandages, smearing on salves that rub off or swell up the corn, pasting on cotton plasters that make corns pop-eyed, slaughtering your toes with razors, jabbing them with knives, and pruning with scissors—and then you put on 2 drops of "GETS-IT" and see your corn fall right off—why, it's just looks like a miracle. Just try it. "GETS-IT" never fails. No pain, no trouble. Use it for any corn, callus, wart, or bunion.

"Look, 'GETS-IT' Makes Corns Fall Right Off!"

"GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Sold in Chicago and recommended as the world's best corn cure by Economical Drug Co., The Fair, Siegel, Cooper & Co., Home Drug Co., Ashland Drug Co., W. A. Wieboldt & Co., Independent Drug Co., Buck & Rayner, 3 Drug Stores, Rothschild & Co., Central Drug Stores, Consumers Drug Co., C. R. PRICELESS NEMO HYGIENIC FEATURES FREE

DEAR MADAM:—Last week we asked you to decide this question for yourself: When you buy a Nemo that you know is a big value simply as a corset, and receive hygienic features worth at least as much more without a penny of added cost—are you not getting SOMETHING, of great value to you, for NOTHING?

We are sure your answer will be "yes," though probably the idea never occurred to you before. Now that we've mentioned it, don't you think that all "wise women" should seek a good store where Nemo Corsets are handled intelligently, and solve their corset-problems by the Nemo method?

The value of Nemo hygienic features cannot be expressed in dollars or in words; nor are they of equal value to all women. To some they only mean better style and increased comfort; to others they mean freedom from pain and illness—in some cases the preservation of life itself.

A Favorite for Over Ten Years

Nemo Self-Reducing Corset, No. 403, was introduced in 1904. Always a favorite, it sells faster to-day than ever. It suits a certain type of full figure better than any other corset. It has the Nemo "bridge" (diagram 5), and the Nemo Lasticurve-Back (diagram 1), same as No. 322, described last week; also the improved Nemo Relief Bands (diagram 2), which give excellent abdominal support and reduction with greatest comfort, being now composed largely of semi-elastic Lastikops Webbing. No. 403 is best adapted to a full figure with flesh evenly distributed. Medium bust, long skirt—the "Military Shape." Fine coutil or batiste, sizes 22 to 36—$4.00. (Also in extra sizes, up to 44, at $5.00.)

Don't Think of Nemos as "Just Corsets"

They are in a class alone, secure from competition. They do things for you that no other corsets can do. They combine splendid style and complete comfort with real economy. Next week we'll tell you more about this "SOMETHING for NOTHING."

Prove It by the April Corset Sale

Third Floor—Center

Prove that even the best corset in the world will be harmful to you if it doesn't fit you correctly. Let our corsetieres demonstrate this fact to you by an actual fitting demonstration. Come and view the wonderful variety of models of R. & G. corsets we are exhibiting—and especially the R. & G. lace front corsets which we feature. No gown can fit its best over an ill-fitting corset. Why not avail yourself of the services of one of our expert corsetieres, all of whom are trained in the latest hygienic fitting methods, and have her help you choose an R. & G. lace front corset, explaining how it molds your figure and brings you ease and comfort if properly fitted and worn? For this unapproachable fitting service no extra charge is made.

R. & G. Lace Front Corsets

show the correct style trend—a corset is just like a tailored coat, its beauty lies in the way it is cut. That is the reason the R. & G. Lace Front corsets are so popular, they are built to fit your figure. They are supple, easy, graceful and cling to your form in a most pleasing, comfortable manner.

R. & G. lace front corset for medium and plump figures. The bust is full and medium high, the skirt is quite long, the boning is so placed that the corset sits lightly on the figure and gives no undue pressure. It can easily be worn by those who are quite sensitive to the average corset. This model is built along healthful lines, supporting every organ in its natural position. The lacing over the thighs gives spread to the figure when seated. Sizes to 30, at........ $5

R. & G. Lace Front Corsets, $1 to $5

If You Really Knew What Red Cross Shoe Service Means

Fourth Floor—Center.

we feel certain that you would insist upon wearing them—as so many women already do. The Red Cross service means that every woman may be fashionably shod and still wear absolutely comfortable footwear in correct sizes, for Red Cross shoes are made over scientifically prepared lasts that fit the foot perfectly, still at the same time preserve the lines of fashion that the well dressed woman demands

—all the new styles are ready for your choosing. Side lace shoes, colored cloth top shoes, either in button or lace style, etc. The new low shoes include the new Gladys pumps, with sand and putty color cloth quarters, just such styles as are favored most; still you'll never know that they're new shoes when you slip them on, for they feel absolutely comfortable at once. Let us fit you and you, too, will become enthusiastic about Red Cross footwear.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

APRIL 11, 1915.

Tour in Illinois; Roads Are Good.

For the convenience of its readers "The Tribune" has engaged the services of L. M. Steffens, an expert on the subject of roads and touring. Mr. Steffens will conduct a touring bureau. He is prepared to answer questions as to routes to any part of the United States. Queries should be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope. "The Tribune" will welcome suggestions as to routes or road conditions. If of general interest these will be printed. Address Automobile Editor, "The Tribune," Chicago.

By L. M. Steffens.

FOR touring Illinois enjoys a reputation as doubtful as the Argonne forest now has for picnicking. The slogan "Pull Illinois out of the mud," adopted three years ago by the Illinois Highway Improvement association, largely is responsible for the attitude of motorists toward the state. As a matter of fact, the main roads of Illinois are above the average. Discretion in the choice of routes is necessary, however, and to aid motorists contemplating state tours a map of the best roads is printed on this page. I have traveled over every mile of the roads shown on the map. Most of them are better than fair. The good roads movement has a strangle hold on the state, and the result is evidenced by the local improvement being done along the main traveled routes.

Five routes to the resort regions of Wisconsin are available out of Chicago. The first follows the lake shore north through Evanston, Wilmette, Glencoe, Highland Park, and Waukegan directly to Milwaukee. The route is being improved, and eventually, if the plans of the residents contiguous to it do not fail of fruition, will be a boulevard. Now it is not recommended unless the tourist is willing to sacrifice comfort for scenery. The best route to Milwaukee is the west road, which is a good road in dry weather. This route goes through Lake Forest, Corliss, and Racine. If the tourist wishes to avoid Milwaukee he may enter Wisconsin from Chicago via Wheeling, Wauconda, McHenry, and Richmond. This is the best route to Lake Geneva and Madison. The route through Addison, Elgin, Marengo, and Harvard is much traveled and popular. If the tourist is not particular about mileage a scenic and interesting trip is through Elgin, Harmony, Marengo, Belvidere, Rockford, Beloit, Janesville, and Madison, then to Kilbourn, Wis., and points north.

There are five trunk line routes to Mississippi, Iowa, and Missouri points. The first is to Dubuque, Ia., via Elgin, Marengo, Belvidere, Rockford, and Freeport. This route is gravel and macadam practically all the way to Freeport, from there on one has to be content with rough roads over hilly country. From Chicago to Clinton, Ia., there is a good road over parts of the Lincoln highway. This route from Chicago goes through Elmhurst, Geneva, De Kalb, Rochelle, Dixon, and Sterling to Dubuque. At Dubuque there is a route to Minneapolis, Minn., via Cresco, Ia., and Rochester, Minn. This is a good and well kept dirt road all the way. Chicago to Davenport via Naperville, Aurora, Somonauk, Mendota, Princeton, Sheffield, Moline, and Rock Island is the most direct and better way to go. At Davenport the Great White way and the river to river routes start. These two roads are the two preferable routes which are used for traveling across Iowa.

Chicago to Burlington, Ia., is another prominent route, for it passes within a few miles of Starved Rock park. From Chicago go through Naperville, Aurora, Somonauk, Ottawa, La Salle, Peru, Princeton, Sheffield, Galesburg, Monmouth, Oquawka, and Burlington. There is a strip of road between Oquawka and Burlington which is almost impassable in wet weather, for it is composed of a clay marsh of the Mississippi bottoms. From Burlington there is a route to Keokuk, Ia., where the great Keokuk dam is located, via Fort Madison. Chicago to St. Louis via Joliet, Morris, Dwight, Pontiac, Bloomington, Lincoln, Springfield, and Edwardsville. It is the most preferable and direct route. This trip gives the tourist an opportunity to visit the state capitol at Springfield.

There are four important routes entering Indiana from Chicago. From Chicago to South Bend, Ind., via Gary, Chesterton, and Laporte the route is practically gravel and macadam all the way. From Chicago to Fort Wayne go through Valparaiso, Plymouth, Warsaw, and Pierceton. Chicago to Indianapolis is an important route, for it is used extensively for driving to the automobile races at Indianapolis. This route goes through the following towns from Chicago: Valparaiso, Kouts, Winamac, Logansport, anad Kokomo. From Kokomo take the Range route via Westfield to Indianapolis.

Many tourists wish to visit Lafayette, Ind., when on their way to Indianapolis. From Chicago go to Hammond, Crown Point, Thayer, Enos, Morocco, Kentland, Goodland, and Remington to Lafayette. From Lafayette go to Frankfort and Lebanon for Indianapolis. To go to West Baden from Indianapolis follow route through Franklin, Columbus, Freetown, Leesville, Bedford, and Paoli.

The Starved Rock park trip attracted many tourists last year. This route is a well marked trail. The telephone poles are painted white, with a yellow band at the top and bottom, lettered "The Starved Rock Trail." From Chicago go west in Washington boulevard to the end, which is Marengo street, turn left, south to Madison street, go west in Madison street across the Desplaines river to Ninth avenue, Maywood; go north in Ninth avenue to St. Charles avenue, turn left, and go directly to the end of the road. Turn left and take next right on the Butterfield road, through Naperville, Aurora, Plano, Sandwich, Somonauk, and Wedron, then to Ottawa and Starved Rock. The total mileage of this trip is about 105 miles.

The cañons of the Illinois river are located here. The French, Wildcat, and Horseshoe are the largest and best known of these. The French, or Starved Rock, cañon is located in the ravine that divides Starved Rock from the "Maiden's Leap." It is the easiest of access and admitted to be the most picturesque. Its widest part does not exceed forty feet, the length about 300 feet. The rocky walls tower above for more than 100 feet and are festooned with mosses, vines, and shrubs.

Wildcat cañon comes next in attractiveness, and resembles French cañon in appearance, except that it is larger and more impressive. It is reached by following the river bank. The formation is wonderful, with its towering walls rising nearly 100 feet, covered with mosses, flowers, and hanging vines, while along its summit lofty pines and cedars raise their stately forms.

The Horseshoe, or Double, cañon is the largest of the Starved Rock series. It derives the name of the Horseshoe from the fact that the ravine winds around a hill, forming a semi-circle. The beauty of this creation is seen amid shades of foliage, a glen formation, that demonstrates the work of nature strongly.

The most prominent trails in the state of Illinois are the Lincoln highway, Starved Rock trail, National Old Trails highway, Burlington way, and the Cannon Ball trail. These highways have markings at all turns and crossroads which clearly direct the tourist to and from the different cities.

The Lincoln highway crosses the state through Chicago Heights, Joliet, Aurora, De Kalb, Dixon, and Sterling to Clinton, Ia.

The Starved Rock trail route is outlined above.

The National Old Trail route traverses the state between Terre Haute, Ind., and St. Louis. From Terre Haute it runs through Effingham, Vandalia, and Collinsville to St. Louis.

The Burlington way runs between Burlington and St. Louis. From Burlington it is marked through Fort Madison, La Harpe, Macomb, Rushville, Beardstown, Jacksonville, Medora, Alton, East St. Louis, and St. Louis.

The Cannon Ball trail is marked through Ottawa, Princeton, Sheffield, Kewanee, Galesburg, Bushnell, Macomb, and Keokuk.

The condition of the roads in northern Illinois—that is, from Chicago north to the state line, west to Rockford, south to Peoria, and east to the state line—is mostly gravel and macadam. In the southern part of the state the roads are composed of a black clay loam, which is bad in wet weather.

Mark New Road to Dubuque, Ia.

By Reed L. Parker.

A NEW route from Chicago to Dubuque, Ia., to be called the Grant highway, is being marked via the Lake street road to Elgin, Hampshire, Marengo, Garden Prairie, Belvidere, Cherry Valley, Rockford, and Freeport. Organizations along the route have agreed to improve the roads by dragging and grading this summer and will begin permanent improvement next spring.

The marker being used is a painted band twenty-one inches wide on the telephone poles along the thoroughfare. The upper and lower seven inches of the band are done in chrome yellow and the middle strip in black. Turns will be indicated with large black "R's" and "L's" on a yellow field. The marking which now is being done between Chicago and Freeport is said to be the most uniform and durable ever adopted for a similar purpose.

No route has been selected between Dubuque and Freeport. There are three good roads between the towns. The first touches Stockton, Elizabeth, and Galena; the second Scales Mound and Galena; the third Shullsburg, Wis., and Hazel Green, with a spur from Hazel Green to Galena.

The propaganda work for the highway is being conducted by the Grant Highway Improvement association. This association was formed in January, this year, after Malcolm Mackinnon of Milwaukee, secretary of the Lake to River Road association, urged its formation in cities along the route as far as Freeport. Mr. Mackinnon in the capacity of secretary of the lake to river road organization has developed a network of marked highways between Milwaukee and Chicago and Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

Residents along the route are taking keen interest in the road and much work already has been done on it. Many men of state-wide prominence are connected with the association. George D. Roper of Rockford is president and W. F. Woodruff of Rockford is treasurer. The Elgin Motor club is taking a keen interest in the affairs of the association and plans to erect two great columns at the Elgin entrances.

The Marquette Cement company has crowned Marquette hill, near La Salle, Ill., which is in the center of the Starved Rock touring section, with a mile of cement road. The cost of the improvement was in the neighborhood of $15,000 and was borne by the company. The road has been given to the state.

With its factories working to the limit of their capacity the Studebaker corporation was able last week to set a new sales record. The significant feature of the Studebaker situation is that it marks a continuation of the unprecedented March business.

We received last week a publicity story from the Marmon company of Indianapolis advocating a 1,000 mile race for stock touring cars. The idea was that of Howard Marmon. We don't believe the idea ever will be followed, but approve of it. A race of this length between cars selected at random from the salesrooms of dealers would put an end to much wrangling and prove, if nothing more, that one car is faster than another for a given distance and that the element of luck still is with the winner.

The Savage Tire company is planning two additions to the factory, the "factory to user direct" policy recently adopted by the concern having met with ready response.

G. H. Pearson of the Kissel Kar company advises motorists to buy new cars now. He doubts the company's ability to supply the demand later in the season.

P. D. Saylor, managing director of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Great Britain, was at Akron last week for a conference with factory officials on the foreign situation. His remarks at the conference should be of interest, especially to manufacturers of trucks. "There is a fine market in England now for one and two ton trucks," said Mr. Saylor. "Most of the English trucks go to the army, and business organisations have a hard time supplying themselves. I recently tried to buy a truck for the use of our company, but after a visit to several factories found it was impossible. There is no discrimination against Americans, although the 'made in England' movement has reached mammoth proportions."

If 'tis true the early bird catches the worm the Empire company should sell its 1916 product before July. The Ralph Temple Automobile company of Chicago has received its first consignment of 1916 cars from the Empire factory at Indianapolis. The new car, according to a list of specifications we received from Mr. Temple yesterday, is a bigger car and has a greater value at the same price than the 1915 cars.

After six lively sessions over the prepared roadways of five Pacific coast cities the members of motordom's "Suicide club" have nearly all packed up for the annual move eastward. Some of them are stopping off at Oklahoma City, where a 200 mile road race is scheduled for April 22; others have shipped direct to Indianapolis or to the eastern factories where they make their respective headquarters. A few of the resident California drivers remain at home, refitting their cars for the next invasion of the "big leaguers."

The close of the coast circuit marks a pause in the racing season which permits a résumé of the winter competitions.

Aside from added money paid to winners at Corona and Venice, the coast cities distributed a total of $45,800 in cash prizes to the circuit chasers. Of this sum Barney Oldfield, "master driver" and star of the Maxwell team, captured the largest total, $7,000. Barney got it in three bundles—$2,500 for his record breaking nonstop run at Corona, $3,500 for his win of the Venice Grand Prix, and $1,000 for his victory in the Borderland fair event at Tucson.

Second to Oldfield in total winnings was Darius Resta, the foreign pilot, with $6,000. Resta found the twisting, dangerous course inside the San Francisco exposition grounds ideal for his Peugeot, and was able to keep this sensationally light, speedy car running to the finish in both the Grand Prize and Vanderbilt. The Peugeot had failed to finish at Corona and San Diego. Resta also declined the issue at Venice and Tucson.

Eddie Pullen, the Mercer champion, first place winner at Corona and third at San Francisco in the Vanderbilt, follows Carlson with $5,500 winnings. Cooper and Wilcox of the Stutz team, with $5,000 and $4,000, respectively, are fifth and sixth. De Palma, last year's champion, had to be content with $2,000—fourth money at Corona and the Vanderbilt.

The victories of Oldfield and Carlson make the Maxwell the season's leaders up to date, with total winnings of $12,800. Cooper, Wilcox, Anderson, Grant, and Lewis, the Stutz quintet, were second with an even $10,000. Pullen, Ruckstell, and L. Nikrent with Mercers won $7,750. O'Donnell and Alley won $3,000 with their Deusenburgs.

FOR MOTORIST AND MOTORCYCLIST

By High

1. I would be obliged to you if you would tell me what kind of batteries are the best and who are manufacturing them? 2. What is the best power for light on a motor car, when you have to run long distances and cannot charge your batteries for extended time? 3. Is dry battery the only appartus that can be used as igniter? I would appreciate if you could furnish me addresses of manufacturers who make the best of above implements. Thanking you beforehand for your reply and your interesting lines in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, I remain,

H. H., Chicago.

There are any number of good batteries on the market. A wet battery is preferable, of course. Among the best of these is the Willard. The Willard has a station in Michigan avenue, south of Twenty-second street. 2. Batteries are continually charged when your car is running. 3. It is not. Dry or wet batteries may be used.

"Will you please give me the names of towns and cities through which the Lincoln highway passes in Indiana?

"J. G. B., Waukegan, Ill."

The chief towns touched by the Lincoln highway in Indiana are: New Haven, Fort Wayne, Churubusco, Merriam, Wolf Lake, Kimmell, Ligonier, Goshen, Elkhart, Mishawaka, South Bend, La Porte, and Valparaiso.

"What is the best route to Des Moines, Ia.? Is it possible to make the trip comfortably in a small car? If I have non-skid tires should I have chains?

"CHARLES BUTLER, Chicago."

Leave Chicago via Jackson boulevard to Lombard, through Geneva, De Kalb, Creston, Rochelle, Ashton, Dixon, Sterling, southwest to Davenport, through Galt, Lyndon, Denrock, Erie, Hillsdale, Watertown, Moline, Davenport. Cross the river at Davenport, continue northwest through Stockton, Durant, Winton, Moscow, West Liberty, Iowa City, Tiffin, Homestead, South Amana, turning slightly southwest at Marengo, through Ladora, Victor, Carnforth, Brooklyn, Grinnell, Kellogg, Newton, and Colfax to Des Moines. A small car should make the trip. By all means carry chains.

Actors; Public; Brady; "Life"; Movies; Scenery.

By Percy Hammond.

At Grand Rapids the other day the Drama league held a convocation in which the five stars of "The New Henrietta" set forth their impressions of the art of the theater. Miss Amelia Bingham, with the vehemence characteristic of a player in "The New Henrietta," told the ladies (according to the Grand Rapids News) that they were fearful and unappreciative; that the audience, not the stage, needed uplifting. Miss Taliaferro, girlishly effervescent, supplicated those present for applause, entreating them to "Loosen up a little bit so we'll know whether you like us or not." Mr. Crane, the symposiarch, said that he was in favor of the Drama league because it brought him into "closer touch with his market."

Until Mr. Crane made this statement I had supposed that propinquity of actors and public was a thing not to be desired and that the one possible disadvantage of the Drama league was that it caused the intimate relation between player and people. I have heard it contended by many showmen (none of them, however, of Mr. Crane's experience and sagacity,) that one of the major handicaps of the stage was this increasing familiarity. The argument was that if Mr. Crane, for instance, were to be constantly available for inspection in women's clubs and cafés, the multitude would tire of him ere long, or, at least, it would not be so keen to see him upon the stage. It was said that if more of the players were to be surrounded by the aura of mystery with which Mr. Frohman environs Miss Maude Adams, interest in them would be less dull. A scheme of living not cloistral but aloof, like that of Miss Eva Tanguay, was counseled to conserve the glamour which is an important asset to the theater and the performers therein. The manager of one star told me that he thought his appearance here in an open club meeting to which $1 admission was charged, made it unnecessary for many of those who attended to invest further. Their curiosity in the actor had been satisfied; they had none concerning the play.

The contents of Mr. Crane's argument to the contrary are not available, but the mere fact that he counsels fellowship and intimacy is enough for me. The players in their personal aspect add much to the joy of living. Most of them are decorative and they are all magnetic. A restaurant containing Mr. Robert Hilliard, for example, is brighter than one which does not. Mr. Louis Mann at a baseball game contributes the final thrill. Mr. Crane at a woman's club, execrating the "aside" and the "soliloquy" should at least be amusing. It is so much the better if the player is benefited, too, by getting close to his customers.

One thing is certain. Any actor is good if you've had tea with him.

MR. BRADY is an acknowledged master of the knack of scenic melodrama, and the effects he gets with mechanism, lights, and canvas are the best, not excepting those of Drury Lane.

Their day is about past, however, and Mr. Brady himself contributes evidence of their waning in "Life," his current spectacle at the Auditorium. No matter how shrewd a producer may be in his counterfeit of outdoor scenes he cannot cope with the cinema. His exteriors are palpably spurious, having a minimum of resemblance to the objects they seek to represent. His rivers, his trees, his skies, are mere daubed wood and cloth. In "Life" Mr. Brady accentuates these shortcomings of the spectacular scene painter by placing in juxtaposition with them actual things duplicated by the camera. There is a boat race in "Life" with many of the animated preliminaries reproduced via the films. Following this the curtain ascends on the scene mechanics' idea of an observation train. It is crowded with spectators and it moves, but it is no more like an observation train than "Life" is like life. Subsequent episodes, the actual boat race, and later, the automobile chase, are pictures much more plausible—the best, in fact, that I have ever seen in a theater. But they do not rank with the cinema in the production of illusions.

Mr. Buchanan's "Life" is earnest if not real and it affords great sport of one kind and another to the onlookers. The author is a promising young playwright, several of his comedies having given evidence of a gift of observation and of skill in putting it into play form. Neither of these qualities is visible in "Life." Nerve, I think, is the principal endowment utilized by Mr. Buchanan in this drama. Not insolence, nor contempt, but sheer nerve. It is a good exercise in imagination, however, to try to fit some of the happenings with anything possible. Only two things baffle me. I can't figure out why both the Yale and Harvard crowds are equally elated over the Yale victory, and I haven't yet discovered why all the villains attended that spiritualistic seance.

Mr. Brady, writes gently though unsuccessfully to explain, saying: "That the two boats are virtually abreast at the fall of the curtain on the tableau is an added, if subtle, touch of realism, and is, I believe, excellent regatta manners. Among the things I am not is an oarsman; so, I had these aquatic details attended to by James C. Rice, professional coach of Columbia university. The race ends when the pistol shot is heard, at which time Yale is ahead by half a boat's length. The flag-floats which scurry along the river after the shot show that Yale is the winner."

SIR JOHN HARE once said of Maj. Glover that he was the greatest dramatic critic who wrote in the English language. He was a fine critic, with a sane enthusiasm for the things he liked and a kindly though definite manner of deprecating the things he did not. He gave quarter in his day as a reviewer, but he asked for none later as a director of Mr. Mansfield's enterprises, or as the efficient man of the theater who superintended the Majestic for so many years. In the latter capacity he carried on the admirable tradition established by Mr. Kohl—a policy which made the Majestic the premier playhouse of its kind—a perfect vaudeville theater in those matters of service and appointment with which he had to do. He was a gracious, dignified, just, and literate showman, as was the founder of the Majestic, and his passing leaves but few of his class.

The federal department of justice, through its attorneys for the district comprising New York City, is conducting an inquiry with a view of obtaining grand jury indictments of the so-called "theatrical trust," and some of the prominent producing managers have been summoned to give testimony. It seems that there have been complaints by "independent" producers of inability to obtain theaters for their attractions. Charles B. Dillingham is one of the "trust" producers summoned. He says with regard for the matter:

"If I were to walk into the office of any manager controlling or booking a circuit of theaters and tell him that I desired a playhouse for one of my attractions, he would lock the door and kiss me!"

Mr. Dillingham's facetious hyperbole reflects the actual condition. Nothing is so easy to obtain just now as a theater or what is called "time." That this is less so in Chicago than elsewhere is due solely to the fact that there are fewer theaters in proportion to the playgoing population than in other cities. Of course, reference is had only to theaters where the best seats cost from $1.50 to $2. The prosperity of the Chicago theaters of that class in the present season has been due not at all to the fact that there is more theater going here than elsewhere but because the elimination from the $2-$1.50 field of the Colonial, McVicker's, Studebaker, and Chicago Opera house, has served to concentrate the business in the remaining houses.

MISS LEONORE HARRIS IN "LIFE"
PHOTO MATZENE

News of the Stage.

Miss Helen Ware was not considered when "The Revolt" was staged in New York, although her acting therein appeared to have the approval of those who saw the play in the American Music hall. She is to act for the camera in "The Price," her vehicle of three seasons ago.

Mrs. Oscar Lewisohn (Edna May) returned the other day to the stage long enough to sing the "Follow On!" song from "The Belle of New York" at a London benefit performance. She retired eight years ago. Other American contributors to the program were Miss Elsie Janis and Miss Laurette Taylor.

Robert Loraine, recovered from a gun shot wound inflicted by a good German marksman when the actor-aviator was flying above the enemy's lines, is ready to resume his activities for the allies' cause. Tales of Loraine's practical patriotism was uttered the other day to an English actor now in Chicago, with some added comment to the effect that a great many English actors seem to prefer the United States to home at this time in their country's affairs. The reply was blithe and bland—"Yes; but, then, you see, none of us regards dear old Loraine as a really good actor—what?"

A character in a play called "The Importance of Coming and Going," now in performance in New York, is a professional mortuarian—a fact which inspired one of Broadway's duly tagged first night wits to express his opinion of the play by saying: "It carries its own undertaker." The manager has placed the bon-mot in his advertisements in the daily newspapers; whether in cynicism or because he regards it as a "boost" is not known. The play was designed as a contribution to the uplift, and was used last week to dedicate the Bramhall playhouse, an addition to New York's rapidly increasing array of theaters seating less than 400 each.

There is a measure of unimportant coincidence in the fact that three of the present divinities of the Chicago theaters are alumnae of the chorus—Miss Leonore Harris of "Life," Miss Julia Sanderson, and Miss Elsie Ferguson. The Misses Harris and Ferguson were contemporaneously and associatedly of the ensemble, while Miss Sanderson went into the chorus after a season of stock company experience in what old time actors called "responsible parts."

George M. Cohan's chief disappointment as a playwright, "The Miracle Man," is not to be brought this far. He retired the play last evening.

Klaw & Erlanger, in association with George C. Tyler, have arranged to present the Holbrook Blinn company in "Moloch," a new play by Beulah M. Dix, author of "The Road to Yesterday," "Across the Border," and other plays. The play will be produced in Chicago.

Here are some facts and "near facts" about Miss Ferguson, the star of Hubert Henry Davies' "Outcast."

She is one of the few actresses of prominence who was born in New York City.

She was educated in a convent in France.

She began her stage career as a chorus girl.

Before she was 21 she played a leading rôle in a leading theater in London.

Her favorite recreation is dancing.

She has played in every state in the union except South Dakota.

Her beauty is of the Scottish-American type.

Her chief ambitions are, first, to sing in grand opera, and, second, to go around the world.

Her real name is Elsie Louise Ferguson.

And her duly registered cable address is "ELF."

Miss Marjorie Rambeau, who was to have played the title rôle in the Chicago run of "The Songbird," has been assigned to Prof. Anspacher's "The Unchastened Woman," in which also Miss Emily Stevens and Miss Christine Norman May appear.

The title of the next play from Mr. Belasco's workshop is "The Love Thought." The play is by Henry Irving Dodge, and in it Miss Janet Beecher will act as a woman physician.

German-American societies in New York are protesting against Mr. Frohman's impending war play, "The Hyphen." They say it misrepresents German-American sentiment.

Arnold Daly effected his revival of "You Never Can Tell" last week in New York despite Shaw's cabled threats of legal action against the actor. Called for a speech in the course of the evening, Daly said as to Shaw: "He hasn't an enemy in the world; but his friends don't like him." The honors of the performance were carried off not by Daly himself, but by George Giddens, as the sapient waiter.

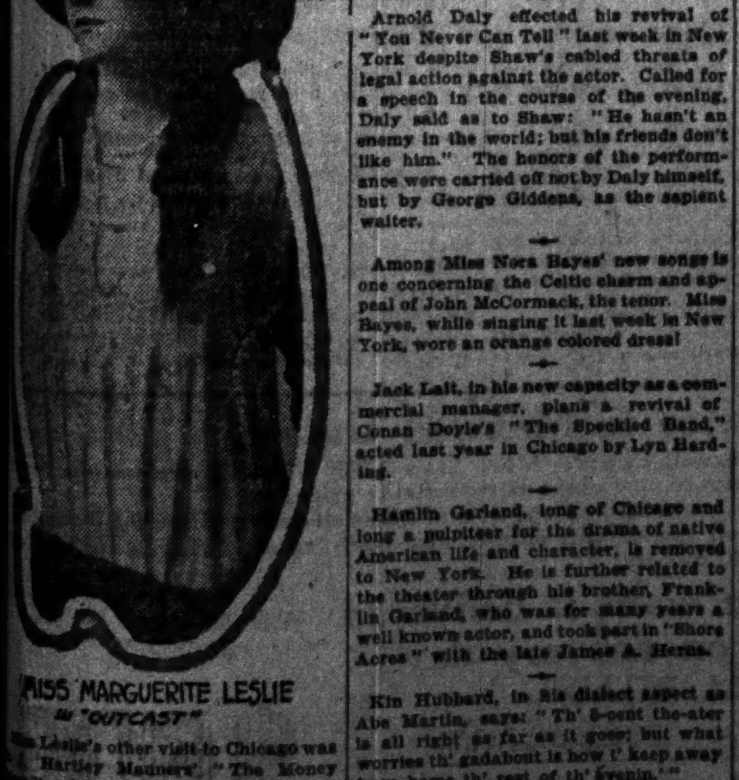
Among Miss Nora Bayes' new songs is one concerning the Celtic charm and appeal of John McCormack, the tenor. Miss Bayes, while singing it last week in New York, wore an orange colored dress!

Jack Lait, in his new capacity as a commercial manager, plans a revival of Conan Doyle's "The Speckled Band," acted last year in Chicago by Lyn Harding.

Hamlin Garland, long of Chicago and long a pulpiteer for the drama of native American life and character, is removed to New York. He is further related to the theater through his brother, Franklin Garland, who was for many years a well known actor, and took part in "Shore Acres" with the late James A. Herne.

Kin Hubbard, in his dialect aspect as Abe Martin, says: "Th' 5-cent the-ater is all right as far as it goes; but what worries th' gadabout is how t' keep away from home th' rest of th' evenin.'"

Those competent amateurs of the Chicago Hebrew institute will essay this evening two plays by Cosmos Hamilton—"Soldier's Daughter" and "Toller's Wife."



MISS MARGUERITE LESLIE IN "OUTCAST"

Miss Leslie's other visit to Chicago was in J. Hartley Manners' "The Money Moon," which few persons witnessed. Her autobiography follows: "I am of English birth and English and French education and the sister of Martha Hedman. I have killed a lion, played with nearly all the present day English actors, and learned American slang."

Cries of "Police!" for "The Natural Law."

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—We do not know Charles Sumner of Chicago, but we should very much like to hear his story of all that has happened to a drama he wrote and called "The Natural Law." The play was brought to New York this week, after having been forbidden further performances in Boston by the police authorities of that city. The Boston police are such a protection, the old dears!

Arrived here, the local police took a hand at a special performance given for their benefit and eliminated, I believe, one scene and a few lines from the script—either Mr. Sumner's script or those sections supplied by a naughty stage manager to please an eager producer.

After which the performance was officially O. K.'d and has been proceeding calmly on its way. Of course, we do not pretend to say what "The Natural Law" may have been when it was first shown in Boston, nor what particualr offense it gave to the censors of the local constabulary. We are, in fact, inclined to believe that whatever was taken away from it was well taken, for it is not missed, and we fancy we get the full import of the author's message from what is left. But we do say that if the offending portions of the story and their dramatic presentment were as sincerely conceived and acted as is the case with what remains, we very much doubt the judgment of the censors who did the cutting.

"The Natural Law," being, in this instance, the "law of sex attraction," is not alone a law that no one can deny, intimates Playwright Sumner, but one that frequently justifies itself if given a fair chance. To point his argument, he submits the case of an attractive pair of juveniles. The girl is engaged to marry a middle aged barytone physician with whiskers on his chin. She thinks she loves him, knows she respects him, and that it is her mother's wish she should be his wife. But, while the physician is away from her for several weeks, she meets and is uncommonly attracted to a handsome youth of her own age—a college athlete and a candidate for the Olympic games, sound in wind and limb, but not guaranteed to stand without conspicuous restraining influences. Being an artist, she paints the lad's picture in his track suit, and, being a girl, and its being April, when he tells her that he simply cannot exist without her, she consults her own feelings in the matter and believes him. Dark change to denote lapse of time. Next day she passes the physician his congé and promises to marry the athlete.

A few weeks later the time has come for the boy to sail for Stockholm or Berlin, or wherever the games are held that year, when he discovers that the sweetheart of his impulsive youth is in trouble. He really should stay behind and make her his wife. She turns to the physician as to her friend, and the physician calls upon the boy to do his duty.

Boy is willing, but he is just then most eager to make the games, too. One responsibility weighs against the other. He has trained hard and he is the hope of the team. Besides, couldn't the physician——

But when the girl catches him wavering between his "duty" to her and his desire to take part in a foot race, she renounces him forever. If his love does not prompt him to marry her, she will have none of him, come what may.

So the athlete sails away and the girl takes up her work as an artist. The physician, being an honorable individual with some breadth of mind, offers her the protection of his name, but she will not burden him. She might have accepted him finally, however, if the athlete had not come to her after his victory at the meet to plead honestly for a chance to make good as a man and a father. At first she will not listen, but when she sees his love tested and knows she must choose between the two men, she is drawn again to the representative of the natural law and is very happy.

The first audiences attracted to Mr. Sumner's play came to giggle and remained to applaud. It is not a perfect bit of work as drama, and the things its various censors have done to it are doubtless largely to blame for its structural unevenness. But it is honest, straightforward, interesting drama.

It appears that what Phyllis Neilson-Terry most needed to establish herself in America as an actress was a chance to use her top note as a soprano.

When she first came to New York and played Viola in "Twelfth Night"—and a very good Viola, we thought, even though it may not have been an inspired reading—she was rather coldly received by the noncommittal experts and not at all rapturously accepted by the public.

When she reverted to the playfully romantic heroine of "The Adventure of Lady Ursula," she was plainly out of her element, physically, at least, though there were none who would say she did not play the part well, or make its most telling sentimental and dramatic scenes effective.

Then it occurred to her present manager, Joseph Brooks, that if she were surrounded by an all-star cast she might score as Trilby in a revival of the Du Maurier success of twenty years ago. She had played the part in a London revival and introduced the novelty of singing "Ben Bolt" herself in place of relying on an off-stage queen of song.

In London Miss Terry is a child of the theater and a great favorite, both on her own account and because of the established popularity of her family. Over there, too, she is counted as rather exceptionally versatile, partly because of the range of parts she has played, taking her from modern comedy to the classics and back again, and partly because, as a girl in her teens, she studied for the operatic stage and graduated from her conservatory with honors.

Last Saturday night the revival of "Trilby" was made. Wilton Lackaye was again the Svengali, Leo Ditrichstein the Zou Zou, and Burr McIntosh the Taffy. George MacFarlane, the light opera baritone, supplanted John Clendenning as the Laird, Brandon Tynan replaced Alfred Hinckman as Little Billee, Taylor Holmes was the Gecko in place of Robert Peyton Gibbs, and Rose Coghlan played Mme. Vinard, vice Mathilde Cottrelly of the original cast.

The dramatic values of the old play are still remarkably well preserved. The appeal of its romance is elemental and its working out is mechanical and theatrical to a degree. Yet it has not the slightest difficulty, when well played, in holding the attention of a modern audience, and its success in revival was legitimately earned.

But the incident that guaranteed that success was Miss Terry's appearance as a prima donna. In the third act scene, when Trilby, as La Svengali, is led toward the stage of the Paris music hall under the hypnotic influence of Svengali the real stage is darkened. When the lights are turned up red plush curtains are stretched across the proscenium, and when these are parted Trilby and Svengali step out. He takes his place in the orchestra pit, she bows mechanically, staring apparently with unseeing eyes at the audience. The orchestra plays an aria from "The Pearl of Brazil" and Trilby sings. It is rather a difficult aria, but Miss Neilson accomplishes it beautifully, taking a flutelike D in alt (so we have it on the word of a perfectly good musical critic) at its conclusion.

Before the shrill echo of this top note had died away the opening night, applause that was both thunderous and spontaneous rang in the ears of the singer for the first time in her American experience. She bowed mechanically, still in character, and the orchestra picked up the first notes of "Ben Bolt." Her voice is light, high, and rather thin, and the old English ballade is not so well suited to it as the showy aria, but at its conclusion there was another demonstration, and Phyllis Neilson-Terry had arrived.

Of such moments are reputations made with our discriminating, art loving public. Next day the press and the commercial boulevards rang with the praises of the big English girl who previously had been merely tolerated.

RALPH MORGAN AND MISS CLAIBORNE FOSTER IN "KEEP MOVING"

Musical Statistics; Portentous or Not, as You Prefer.

By Ronald Webster.

PLAYING with statistics is ever a diversion dangerous and interesting: interesting because one may so easily arrive at obviously wrong conclusions, supported by fact; dangerous because one may become the victim of his own plausibility.

Mr. Henry J. Harris, writing in the latest number of the Musical Quarterly, resists the well-nigh irresistible temptation to excogitate dubious generalities from figures and percentages. Although by his asceticism he deprives his readers of much interesting theory, he offers in its stead a rare kind of consolation. By offering in convenient form the bare facts of the United States census, in so far as it concerns musicians, he has provided a cache whence one may draw ammunition for almost any purpose.

The American who wishes to impeach the musical fervor of the Germans, for instance, will be joyous to discover that though Milwaukee ranks high among the German cities of the world, it is twenty-seventh in respect to the number of musicians in every 10,000 of population. In Milwaukee there are not twenty-six musicians and music teachers in 10,000 residents. Chicago, with its large German population, can boast but thirty. Chicago is sixteenth in the list. It might be argued from this that the German is not a musical being.

The preacher of Americanism discovers to his satisfaction that among the 54,856 musicians in this country only a little over 26 per cent are foreign born white persons, about 42 per cent were born of American parents, and about 25 per cent were born in America of foreign born parents. Among those classified as teachers of music the foreign born amount to only about 10 per cent.

There is, however, one curious and puzzling set of figures. The census differentiates between the musician and the music teacher. There are, or were at the time of the census, about 20,000 more music teachers in the United States than there were musicians actually engaged in musical performance for a living. Whether it be that most of those who are being taught continually, continually cease taking lessons and buy mechanical pianos, thereby becoming part of the cultivated audiences at our concerts, or whether the census taker considered a teacher a kind of half developed performer, the documents do not state.

One thing the statistics do prove—that music has become a necessity in the densely populated districts. Since 1880, Mr. Harris points out, the population of the United States has doubled, while musicians have increased almost fivefold.

YOUR true concert goer, avid of music, who looks gloomily at the declining season, who sees an endless prospect of summer parks filled with perspiring crowds, and foresees the atrophy of his critical ear, must find satisfaction at any rate in having outlived the usual spring advent of political bands. Not being in any sense a humane man, the anguish of the concert goer is not lessened during a campaign by contemplating the employment of numberless thrifty trumpets and drums. A civilization which finds profit in such devices as electrical bells in an automobile decked with signs does not surprise him, for he is used to it; but he never ceases from suffering.

The attraction of the political brass band, he argues, moving from place to place in the loop, rudely outlining melodies with the cornet and approximating the harmonies with divers bleating and braying instruments, must be very real, else the wise politician would not use it. The concert goer is inclined to believe, perhaps, that the very inaccuracies of the performance flatter the multitude, giving them the opportunity of rectifying in their imaginations the errors of the honest bandsmen.

But one person has ventured to controvert the music lover. He declares that the band is popular because of its utility, not because of its music. And he shows that for years the populace has been trying to convince itself that music is not a futile thing.

"The saying which declares that music soothes the savage breast," he remarked, "is merely an attempt to make music seem less bootless to the man of dollars and cents."

The immortal composer of "Sister Susie's Sewing Shirts for Soldiers," listed several times in the week's best sellers, explains the new theory of the war songs and announces another song to tickle the marines. He says he expects to complete the trilogy with a song about the aviators. His name is Hermann Darewski, and he says that modern war has banished the picturesque panoply of fight and that "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and "The Royal Fusiliers" are anachronous.

"A song writer would have to be clever to give a good rollicking swing to a song whose theme was based on trench warfare or the exploits of howitzers and bomb dropping Zeppelins."

He says that the new theory is to suggest the horrors of war while making them laughable. "Think of home and laugh" is the trick.

His latest venture into patriotism about the sailor boys is:

Mother's sitting knitting little mittens for the navy,
Bertha's busy bathing baby Belgian refugees,
Sarah's shanting shirkers making guernseys for the Gurkhas;
O what busy bees all sewing, O so busy.

Dr. Muck's programs for the Boston Symphony orchestra's twelve concerts at the Panama-Pacific exposition show thirty-one compositions by men classed as German and twenty-one compositions by musicians of all other nations. Two works by Americans (Macdowell and Chadwick) will be played.

Fritz Kreisler has made more than $2,000 for Austrian relief through the sale of autographed photographs. In addition to this he has sent a considerable portion of his own large earnings to the Austrian Red Cross. Mme. Melba has been even more successful. At a series of benefits in Australia she earned almost $80,000 for the English fund, and she plans to devote the proceeds of her English tour to the same end.

Leo Ornstein, the "naughty boy" of pianists, composer of futuristic music, and maker of shocking noises, was so startling in his stimulation of interest that a manager has found him and expects to turn cacophony into kudos throughout the United States.

Baron Houssin de Saint-Laurent, French consul in Chicago, has organized, with the aid of Jenny Dufau and Herman Devries, a concert for the benefit of the Société de Secours Franco-Americain. It will be given at the Blackstone theater on the afternoon of April 25. Miss Dufau, Alfred Barthel, first oboe of the Symphony orchestra; Glenn Dillard Gunn, piano; Beecher Burton, tenor, and Hamilton Hopkins, baritone, are the soloists. Pupils of Mr. Devries will give the first act of Delibes' "Lakme."

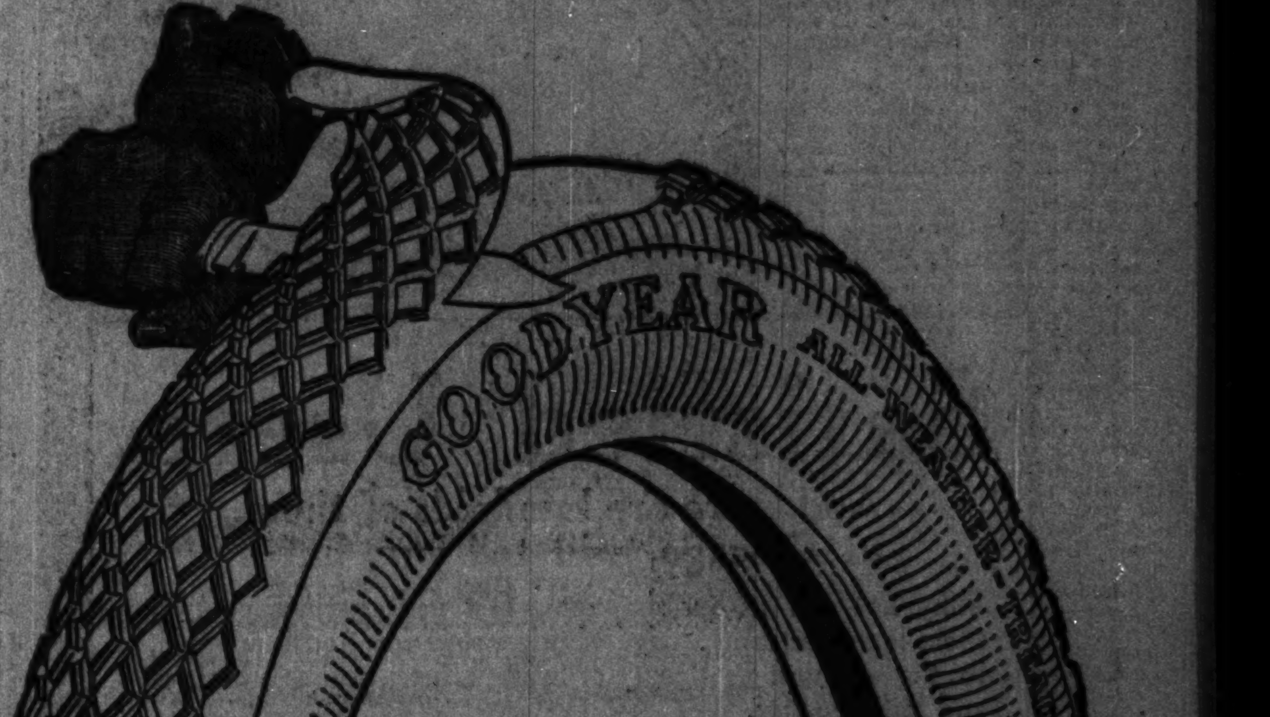
The first musical novelty in Paris since the outbreak of the war is an operetta entitled "Ma'mselle Boy Scout," to music by Gustave Goublier. The one number which the reporters in Paris feel important enough to mention is "The Capture of Przemysl" with a sneezing chorus.

Cadman has followed the lead of a number of prominent American musicians, introducing "rag time" into the last movement of his new trio in D major, for violin and cello and piano. "It is so skillfully handled that it is above any suspicion of being commonplace," according to the press notices. The Tollefsen trio played it last night in New York.

A German contralto, Mme. Ottilie Metzger, has found Germany unprofitable, and the empty Hamburg opera house somewhat oppressive. She is coming to America next season under the management of Haensel and Jones.

ALBERT SPALDING—Violinist Illinois Theater

Albert Spalding, the young violinist who has shown that to be a successful musician it is not necessary to have been born poor, is beginning to blossom forth as a composer. His "Alabama," a negro melody and dance, was heard in Chicago for the first time this season when he appeared at one of the ill fated Tiffin musicales. Zimbalist played it at last Sunday's Metropolitan opera concert. Spalding will play it today at the Illinois.



Suppose We Pared This Tire

Suppose this All-Weather tread—which is now double-thick—were pared to the thinness of the usual anti-skid. Do you think that the grips would endure and the tread endure as now? Or would it resist puncture like this matchless tread?

Suppose we used—as some do—one less ply of fabric. Suppose the whole tire were made lighter. Could the tire stand use or misuse as Goodyear tires do now?

Suppose we omitted our other exclusive features:

Our No-Rim-Cut feature—
Our "On-Air" cure to save blowouts—
Our rubber rivets to combat loose treads—
Our 126-piano-wire base for security.

All others do omit them. All of them are costly. One of them—our "On-Air" cure—costs us $450,000 yearly.

But could Goodyear Fortified Tires retain top place if we did not give those extras?

We're Adding Betterments

Instead of that, we are all the time adding betterments. We spend on one department $100,000 yearly to seek out new improvements.

Our All-Weather tread—always double-thick—has been made still thicker on some sizes.

We have added an average of 14 per cent to the thickness of our Inner Tubes.

And we are making our own fabric to secure an extra strength.

Price Reductions

Yet we have made big price reductions three times in two years. Our last—on February 1st—brought the total to 45 per cent. That is largely due to multiplied output.

Today you are getting in Goodyear Fortified Tires the best value ever known in tire making.

It is due to yourself that you get these tires. They are saving millions of dollars and millions of troubles, to motor car owners each year. And men know this. Last year they bought about one Goodyear tire for every car in use. Join these contented tire users. Any dealer will supply you.

She Will Play at Thurber Hall This Afternoon.

CECILIA BELLAIRE, PIANIST, IN RECITAL TODAY

News of Music and the Musicians.

Alice Woodfin, a music teacher in New York, has made an arrangement of "Alice in Wonderland" to some music of Schumann. She discovered by accident that with few modifications Lewis Carroll's verses could be made to fit certain compositions from the "Album for the Young." Kitty Cheatham will sing them at her last public recital of the season.

Pablo Casals, the cellist, who, the authorities of Orchestra hall modestly remark, "made so favorable an impression on the occasion of his appearance as soloist about two months ago," is the last soloist of the orchestra's season. Casals will play the Schumann violoncello concerto in A minor and Bruch's "Kol Nedrei." On the program also are Korngold's "Overture to a Play," presented two years ago by the orchestra, when the composer was only 15 years old; Oldber's rhapsody, "June," and Franck's symphony in D minor.

The unpleasant news comes that the war has diverted Paderewski from music. "I have not touched a piano since the war," he told a London interviewer. "I was deep in composition when the war began and tried to continue, but found it impossible. The tragedy of it has taken hold of me. My hands have grown stiff and would need three or four months of hard practice before I should care to perform in public."

Hugo Kortschak, the violinist, has given his name to a string quartet of which he is the first violin. Hermann Felber Jr., violin; George Dasch, viola, and Emmeran Stoeber, cello, complete the organization. It will make its debut April 21 in the Cesar Franck D major and the Haydn D minor quartets.

The Amateur Musical club, the Lake View Musical society, the Society of American Musicians, the Chicago Artists' association, the Chicago Women's Musical club, the Little Music Club of Evanston, the West End Co-Educational club, the River Forest Choral club, the Kenwood Matinée Musical, the Elba Musical club, Bush Temple Glee club, and the American Conservatory alumni are the constituent members.

Arturo Toscanini, conductor at the Metropolitan, will direct two symphony concerts in New York at the close of the opera season. Beethoven's "Pastoral" symphony, Brahms' second symphony, Debussy's "La Mer," Strauss' "Don Juan," Sibelius' "Ein Saga," and Roger Ducasse's "Sarabande" probably will have representation at the concerts. The engagement of the Metropolitan orchestra for a series of concerts at the Panama-Pacific exposition has been canceled.

Henry Erlinger, who conducted the afternoon programs at the Midway gardens last summer, will conduct a band of forty in evening concerts at the same place from May 22 to June 15. At that time the National Symphony orchestra, with Max Bendix, will begin its series.

Word comes from authentic source that Mme. Alma Gluck is expecting a visit from the stork. Her husband is Efrem Zimbalist, the Russian violinist.

The musical clubs of Chicago and suburbs have formed an organization called the Federated Clubs of Chicago and Suburbs, which will give a concert and reception on Thursday evening at the gold room of the Congress hotel. The purpose of the federation is to bring into closer touch musicians of the city and its environs, to aid the student department of the federation, and to defray the expense of publishing a "New Course of Study," to be used as a text book.

Mlle. Pavlowa's program when, on the afternoon of the 25th inst., she comes back to the Auditorium for a single performance, will be made up largely of dances not given in her December appearance in Chicago. Among them will be the new group called "Chopiniana," which was not ready for public exhibition then, although billed on two occasions. The special program for the 25th has been selected and arranged by the dancer's most perfervid Chicago adulant, Guy Hardy.

Simon Buchhalter, a Chicago pianist, has written a one act opera which he has named "The Love Knot." It received honorable mention in the prize competition won by Horatio Parker with his "Fairyland."

Miss Mabel Lee of Chicago will appear in a recital of songs of her composition on Thursday evening. Miss Anne Sullivan, mezzo-soprano, and George Gordon Beck, basso, will interpret the program, with Miss Lee at the piano.

The furnishings of Brahms' Vienna home are to form the nucleus of a permanent Brahms museum. It will be recalled that at a sale of Brahms' relics held a few months ago the stub of the last cigar he smoked went at 12 cents.

Harold Bauer and Ossip Gabrilowitsch are to join forces in a concert of compositions for two pianos at Aeolian hall, New York, on April 18.

The organ program at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall this evening, to be presented by Mrs. Katherine Howard-Ward, will include "Sunset and Evening Bells," by Federlein; Caprice "To Spring," by Matthews; "The Brook," by Derthier, and "Fanfare," by Shelley. Mrs. Rose Lutiger Gannon will sing the offertory solo, "O, For a Burst of Song," by Allitsen. The quintet and choir will sing "Souls of the Righteous," by Noble. Leslie's "When Peaceful Night" and Beethoven's "Hallelujah Chorus" from "Mount of Olives" will be sung by the choir.

Rossetter G. Cole has dedicated a rhapsody of his composition to Harold Henry, the pianist. Mr. Henry has added it to his repertory.

Rudolph Ganz has dedicated two of his own songs to John McCormack and will assist him in their presentation at the tenor's next New York recital.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective.

They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by every one, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

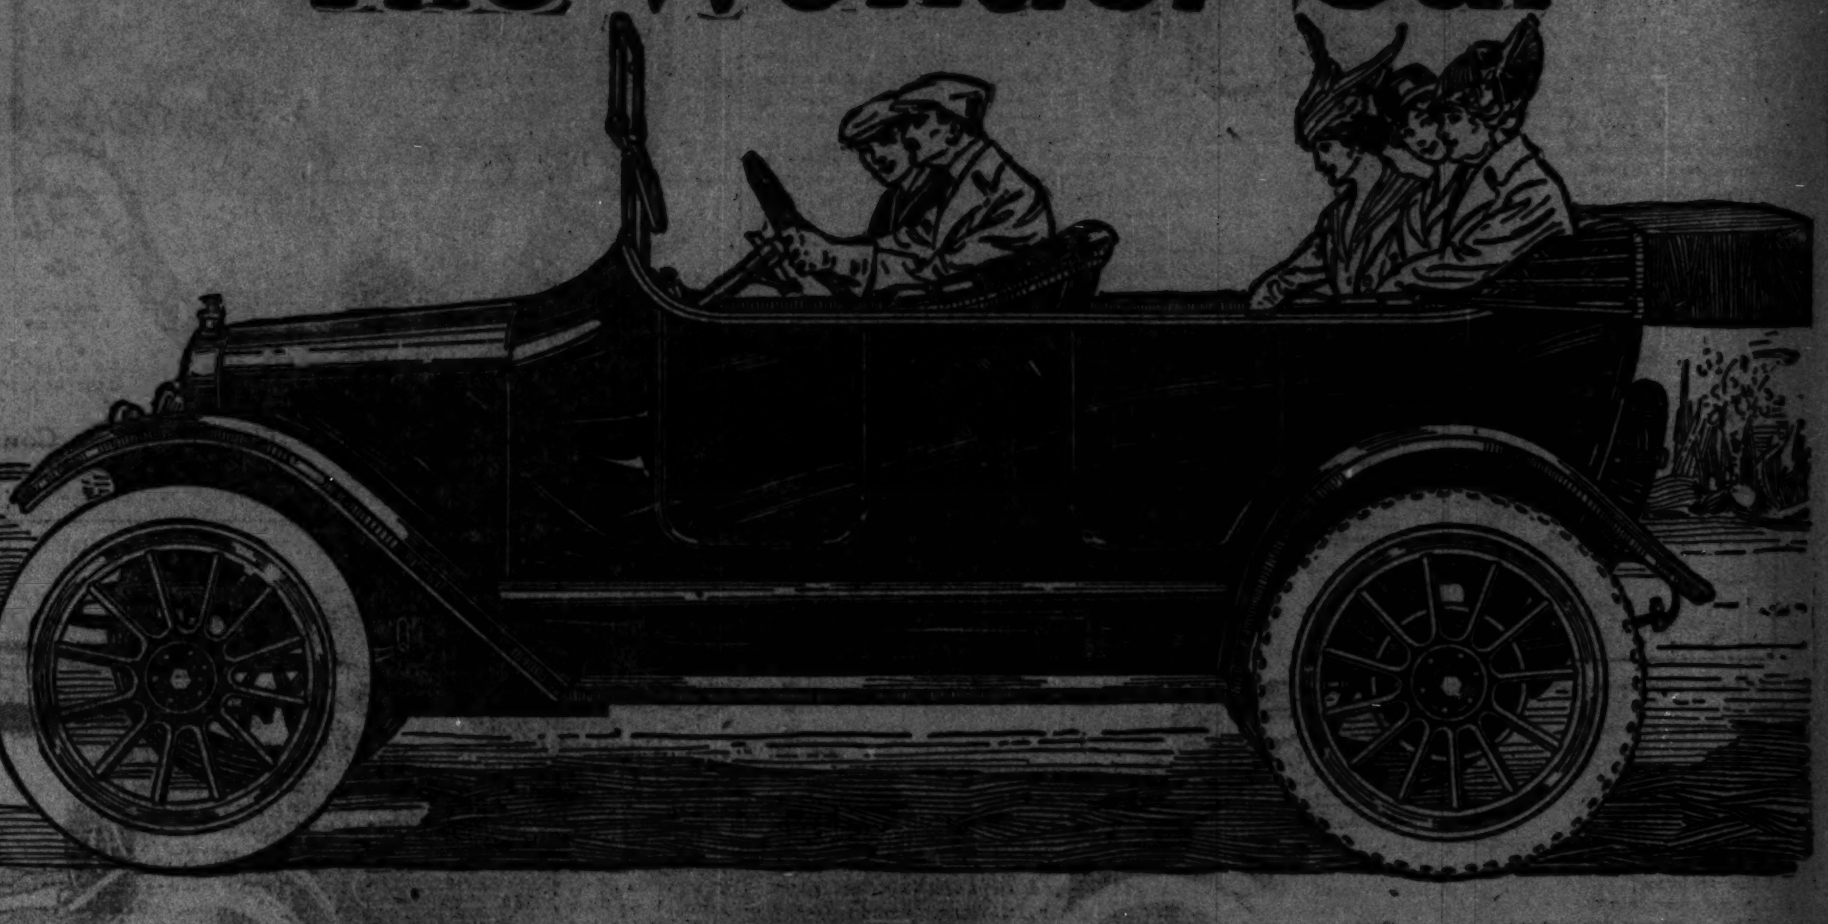
"The Wonder Car"



This is the car that 38,000 happy owners have given the "rough and tumble" acid test of real automobile owners' wear

An automobile on the road for 18 months in constant, every-day use by an owner ceases to be a designer's theory.

It becomes—either a great automobile success;
Or it becomes—a great automobile failure.

Multiply one model by 38,000 and give each one of these 38,000 automobiles day in and day out rough and tumble road wear, and if this car stands up and delivers, it has become one of the rare great automobile successes.

And that is the Maxwell success today—that is exactly the "Acid Test" that the Maxwell has passed through, and that is why the Maxwell is the most talked about automobile that is built today.

The Maxwell automobile is today one of the very few great automobile successes the world has ever known.

And this is the car we urge you to see. This is the car that you owe it to yourself to see. We want to tell you about its hill climbing triumphs. We want to tell you about its speed and endurance records. We want to show you and add up for you every one of its new features.

Read This List of Expensive Features. The 1915 Maxwell Has These Features And Many Others.

PURE STREAMLINE BODY

A large, roomy, beautiful body, fitted with deep, comfortable upholstering, ample leg room, adjustable front seat and the best fourteen-coat, hand-painted and striped finish. All Maxwell bodies are constructed of pressed steel, mounted on a steel-channel sectioned frame, offering the greatest possible strength with minimum weight.

SPRING SUSPENSION

Without a doubt you will find the Maxwell the easiest riding, light car made. With its amply sufficient wheel base, and semi-elliptic front springs and three-quarter elliptic rear springs, built of the very best of spring steels, the Maxwell cushions its passengers from all the jars and bumps of rough roads. It is so comfortable and easy riding that you will remark the difference on your first ride.

THE POWERFUL MAXWELL MOTOR

The most powerful, durable motor of its size made. Ample power to negotiate any road, mud, sand or hill—always at your command. Almost troubleproof, every part accessible, and what is more, it is a motor of genuine economy. More miles per gallon, day in and day out, than you would believe possible if one were to tell you. The Maxwell motor stands to-day one of the very best in dependable efficiency.

DOUBLE SHELL RADIATOR

A beautiful, troubleproof, highly efficient radiator. Every part but the shell constructed of high-grade copper. It will not corrode and leak. Protected against breakage by a heavy pressed steel shell and special shock-absorbing devices on each side of the frame that protects it against the many strains and twists of the car.

THE STEERING GEAR

Irreversible worm and gear, the only safe steering device. Maxwell uses a gear instead of a sector. This makes adjustment very simple, as you have merely to turn the gear one-quarter way and you have a new surface, just as good as a complete new steering unit.

BRAKES THAT HOLD AND LAST

One square inch of braking surface to every twelve pounds of weight. That's more than most any other car gives to-day. Maxwell brakes are thoroughly dependable, enclosed and protected from dust and dirt, and have special anti-rattling devices. Maxwell brakes are very easy to handle. The slightest pressure of the foot and your car comes to a dead stop.

The Maxwell Company's Guarantee of Service to Maxwell Owners

No other automobile is backed by a more reliable service than that guaranteed every Maxwell owner. More than 2,000 Maxwell dealers—in every part of this country—are always ready to give expert advice, to make adjustments, and to supply new parts at reasonable prices.

This splendid Maxwell dealer service organization is perfected and completed by the chain of Maxwell owned and Maxwell operated Service Branches. Sixteen great Maxwell Service Stations are so located throughout the country that a Maxwell dealer can supply any part for an owner within a few hours if not in his stock. Maxwell Service is one of the great advantages enjoyed by Maxwell owners.

Order a Maxwell from us now, and when you want it delivered, we will give you your car—not an excuse on delivery day

THE MOST FOR THE MONEY

Auburn Automobile Co., Auburn, Ind., U. S. A.
15 YEARS SUCCESS

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

COLONIAL.

Bob Hall: The other day I saw a little boy weeping piteously and he told me he had had two quarters in his hand and a great big fellow had come along and grabbed one of them. Naturally, being tender hearted, I sympathized with him and asked him what he did. He told me he cried out in a feeble voice for help. I said to him: "Can't you shout any louder than that?" He said: "No, sir; I have the asthma, I can't yell out loud." So I took his other quarter.

I was meditating what to do with all this money when a thief grabbed it and ran. I chased him, yelling: "Stop, thief." A policeman grabbed me and demanded to know what I was making all that noise about. I told him I was pursuing a thief and he said: "Well, stop right where you are; there'll be another one along in a minute or two."

I had a piece of hard luck just recently. It seems that some fortune teller told Rockefeller that if he would wear a happy man's shirt for one day his sickness would be cured. I was sitting in the park when a man rushed up and seeing I was a happy man, he said: "I'll give you $100,000 if you will loan me a shirt." And that was where my hard luck came in—I didn't have any shirt.

I determined to forget about it in a smoke to quiet my nerves and went for a cigar. I got two or three—a quarter each. One of them was almost a whole one, but a fellow stepped on it before I could get it.

MAJESTIC.

William Simms [in the wrong flat]:

"It's a nice little flat."

Woman enters. "Sir, how dare you remain in this flat?"

"Madam, I rented this flat furnished."

"But I live here, I tell you."

"O, I see! You're part of the furnishings."

"This is outrageous! I tell you, you had no right to come in here that way."

"I didn't, madam. When I came in the wall paper was on the floor. Now it's on me."

"The acoustics in this house are awful."

"The what?"

"The acoustics."

"Is that what it is?"

"Why, certainly—the acoustics."

"I thought I smelt 'em when I came in."

Willie Weston [describing and imitating a young man he met at a tea]:

"I met one of those fellows the other day. You know what I mean, one of those boys who goes to college for twenty years and then gets a job as a conductor. Awfully brave fellow; wears lots of perfume. You know what I mean, don't you? One of those fellows that only a mother can love and who gets up and sings at teas without any cause whatsoever? This time he sang, 'I Didn't Raise My Boy to Pick Out Basting Threads.' He was one of those boys who drinks a couple of glasses of port and then goes up in the smoking car and sits with the men. You know what I mean."

PALACE:

William Montgomery and Florence Moore:

"You don't know how to run a car. Keeping me sitting there two hours! If only you had told me I could have brought my knitting along. Why, I could have stayed home tonight and read the telephone book. I told you if you were going to run into anything to run into something cheap, and then you run into a window of cut glass with a 5 and 10 cent store next door."

"Why, my machine is a forty horse power car."

"Well, thirty-nine lay down and died."

"I put three speeds on my car."

"I know—slow, slower, and stop."

"And I put a one man top on it."

"So that when it rains you are the only one who gets wet."

"Well, I put something on your car, too. Guess what it was."

"What? Headlights?"

"No; my curse."

"O, I can't get along with you. You have no brains. Why, you're so narrow minded your ears meet."

"I've got a little song that I'm going to sing."

"If you sing without me I'll send you home."

"Send me home! I have no home."

"Well, I'll dig you one."

Charles Cartmell and Laura Harris:

"I love to ride in an airship."

"So do I; there are no taximeters in them. Would you like to be married in an airship?"

"No, when I marry I want to be on the level."

"It must be wonderful to marry a president's daughter—to be driven from the altar to the White House."

"I know lots of people who have been driven from the altar to the bug house."

"Do you know, there are places in Turkey where the women sell their husbands to each other."

"In this country they can't give them away."

"Did you notice anything about me at dinner that was exceptionally good?"

"I noticed that you had an exceptionally good appetite."

"Caruso has a wonderful voice."

"Yes; I heard him sing every night for two months."

"Why did you stop?"

"My father stopped payments on the phonograph?"

"You can always tell an American girl."

"Yes, but you want to be careful what you tell her."

RUB RHEUMATISM PAIN FROM SORE, ACHING JOINTS

Rub pain away with a small trial bottle of old "St. Jacob's Oil."

What's Rheumatism? Pain only. Stop drugging! Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacob's Oil" directly upon the "tender spot" and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacob's Oil" is a harmless rheumatism and sciatica liniment, which never disappoints and can not burn the skin.

Limber up! Quit complaining! Get a small trial bottle from your druggist, and in just a moment you'll be free from rheumatic and sciatic pain, soreness, stiffness and swelling. Don't suffer! Relief awaits you. Old, honest "St. Jacob's Oil" has cured millions of rheumatism sufferers in the last half century, and is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains and swellings.—Advertisement.

FUNNIEST EVENT CONTEST.

SOMETIMES it's as much as your life's worth to be funny, but here's a case where it pays:

The Selig Polyscope company, in conjunction with THE TRIBUNE, offers $500 for the best stories of 500 words each about the funniest event of your life. The $500 will be divided into four prizes as follows: First prize, $175; second price, $150; third prize, $100; fourth prize, $75.

Your stories must be told in either 500 words or less. They will not be considered if they are longer. Put your name and address on a separate piece of paper, inclosing it in a plain sealed envelope, and put your manuscript and the plain envelope into another envelope which you address to Contest Editor, Right Off the Reel Page.

The contest will close at midnight of May 2.

The prize winning stories will be made into scenarios by the Selig Polyscope company, and will be produced at the company's earliest convenience. The prize winning stories will be printed in the paper when a decision has been reached by the three judges, who are William Lord Wright, scenario editor of the Dramatic Mirror; George Fitch, the famous Peoria humorist; and B. L. T., the "Line-o'-Type" editor of THE TRIBUNE.

The Selig Polyscope company reserves the right to buy at market rates any of the stories aside from the prize winners that may seem desirable for production.

Don't inclose stamps for return, as none of these manuscripts will be returned.

Don't send your manuscript rolled.

Don't use pencil unless it is utterly impossible to use either pen and ink or the typewriter.

Please remember that any questions you may care to ask regarding the contest will be gladly answered either by mail or telephone. When telephoning ask for the Contest Editor, Right Off the Reel Page. Address your inquiries to Mae Tinee, Right Off the Reel Page.

Employés of this paper and the Selig company are barred as contestants.

"Wild Olive," a romantic society drama by Basil King, is being produced for the screen by the Oliver Morosco Photoplay company. Myrtle Stedman, the pretty Bosworth star, will be presented in the chief rôle. Miss Stedman has proven herself a great favorite among the fans and her appearance in the stellar rôle of "Wild Olive" will no doubt create considerable interest among the followers of silent drama. Among those supporting Miss Stedman are Thomas MacLarnie, Forrest Stanley, and Herbert Standing.

Muriel Ostriche has joined the Vitagraph company and will make her first appearance under her new auspices in a three reel feature.

Says the official report of the British board of film censors: "It is fully realized that the cinematograph may be excellent for propagandist work, but it appears to the board that such a science as eugenics is one that can be satisfactorily dealt with only by professional instruction." Therefore all films dealing with eugenics will probably be barred.

Emily Stevens, Jane Grey, Adelaide Thurston, Olga Petrova, Valli Valli, Helen Case, Orrin Johnson, S. Miller Kent, Thomas Jefferson, and William E. Shay have all joined the Metro Pictures corporation.

This week's double attraction at the Ziegfeld theater is headed by a five part screen comedy introducing Victor Moore, the delightful interpreter of quaint American slang, as a motion picture star. Mr. Moore was engaged by the Lasky Feature Film company for the leading rôle in the film version of George Bronson Howard's former stage success entitled "Snobbs."

News has been wafted to us that Miss Helen Ware has signed a contract to appear in one or more Cosmos Feature films for the small sum of $2,500 a week. When salaries are so low, how can girls manage to live?

Miss Neva Gerber of the American company states that any house can be rid of rodents by a simple process. Her method consists of capturing one of the pests alive, incasing its feet in rubber (a common elastic band will do), and tieing a small piece of white goods around its neck before turning it loose to join its friends. The frantic animal will make all speed to join its companions and with noiseless tread dash into their midst, either scaring them to death or frightening them into thinking the house is haunted. O, you press agent!

The Keystone theater at 3912 Sheridan road gave a delightful "opening night" in honor of Mrs. Carter Harrison's picture, "The Lady of the Snows," last Tuesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison were present with a party, and likewise accompanied came various other notables. A short concert preceded the showing of the films.

Admirers of Bryant Washburn of the Essanay company will be delighted to know that he is now in many cases being "starred" instead of "villain-ed." He it is who has gone with a company to Chattanooga. Some splendid Essanay pictures should be forthcoming soon.

Walker Whiteside has recently been lured away from the footlights to play the leading rôle in "The Melting Pot," a new special feature which is being produced at the Centaur Film company, Bayonne, N. J., by the J. Cort Film company. "The Melting Pot" met with great success some years ago on the stage.

Some Laugh at This Vaudeville Wit.

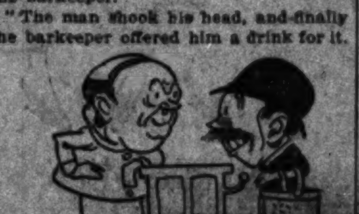
James and Bonnie Thornton:

"A lot of women who are fighting for suffrage maintain that they are just as good as a lot of men who vote now, saloonkeepers, for instance. Understand, I'm not knocking the saloonkeepers, because they've got a lot of good points that women haven't. They shut up on Sundays in most places.

"At the same time I'm not championing the liquor cause. I wouldn't care if every saloon in this city closed tonight. I've got mine. While I was getting it a man came into the bar and sold the barkeeper a dozen eggs. There was one left in the basket.

"'Give me that one, will you?' asked the barkeeper.

"The man shook his head, and finally the barkeeper offered him a drink for it.



The man consented.

"'What'll you have?' asked the barkeeper.

"'Sherry and egg,' answered the other."

"This picture may be ranked with the film masterpieces and is second to none in its delicate and individual treatment. It is awe-inspiring."—Says Louella Parsons, Herald.

"Edwin S. Porter, who produced 'The Eternal City,' is the Belasco of films."—Say the Hattons, Herald.

"A new era in dramatic picturization. Beautiful! Worth traveling miles to see!"—Says F. W. McQuigg, American.

"Big—very big! One of the most wonderful productions ever conceived."—Says Clover Lord in the Post.

"Roman architectural magnificence, its gorgeous temples and palaces, picturesque ancient ruins and quaint buildings rarely have been revealed so beautifully in cinematography as they have in the motographic version of 'The Eternal City.'"—Says W. K. Hollander, Daily News.

The Six that led the way

—not in talk but ON THE ROADS!

Lots of talk lately on that subject. One Six calls itself the "pioneer of the Light Sixes." Others say they were the first to do this or that below such and such a price—using nicely qualified phrases.

But the fact of the matter is that this Studebaker SIX was the FIRST of the light Sixes ever on the road. Not the first in claims—but the FIRST in service.

It was the FIRST SIX to be offered at a price below $2,000. No doubt you recall it yourself—back in 1912, when Studebaker announced a SIX at $1550? And season after season, Studebaker has kept a year ahead. Light Sixes began to follow, dropping down to $1750 and thereabouts. Then, last year came a Studebaker at $1385—and the other Light Sixes reached $1550—Studebaker's price of a year ago.

The mere fact of being FIRST doesn't mean much. But the fact that because it was the first, Studebaker has had THREE years of experience on the roads where other SIXES have had only one and two, is extremely important. For Studebaker, with 20,000 Sixes on the roads and years to watch them in, has been able to develop this Six until it stands supreme in the field of Light Sixes. Studebaker knows what other makers will not know until a year from now—because Studebaker alone has had that experience.

And that is why you find BALANCE in this car that few other cars can begin to approach. And balance, you know, means not only easier driving qualities, but EASIER riding—and less wear on the car—LIGHTER upkeep.

That is why you find a motor that is designed to develop a high surplus of POWER. That is why you find accessibility in its every detail that makes this SIX marvelously EASY to take care of and LOW in upkeep, too.

But SEE the car—that's the only way to judge. See it—study its attractive lines—its finish—its roominess—ride in it—drive it—test it any way you like.

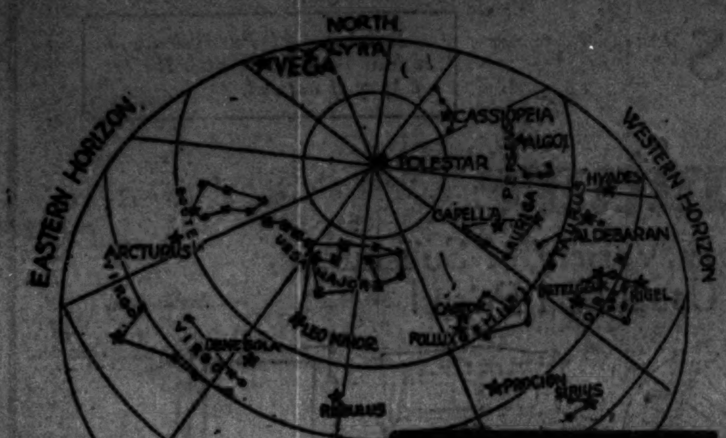
ASTRONOMY.



POSITION OF THE STARS AT 9 O'CLOCK TONIGHT

The Comet's Tail.

A COMET travels with its tail, when it has one, pointing away from the sun. Why it should do so was long a mystery in astronomical science, but the comets sweeping up to the sun, whether in ellipse, parabola, or hyperbola, came with their tails behind them and left with them in front.

Something in the action of the sun upon the world subject to it affected the streams of light which were flung out from the nucleus and coma of the comet and which formed its tail.

It is known now, the years of mystification past, that the light pressure of the sun pushes away the particles which compose the tail. As the comet approaches the sun the hydrocarbons in it break up into hydrogen gas and other hydrocarbons which in turn break up into free carbon, like soot.

These particles are so small that the mechanical pressure of light can affect them to the extent of overpowering the gravitational pull which is carrying the comet towards the sun. Occasionally the particles are too large to be affected by the pressure of light and in that case, a rarely seen spectacle, the stream of light which they compose will point in the direction of the sun.

When the different elements in the comet break up in turn with the closer approach to the terrific heat new streamers of light in turn are cast forth. The speed with which the tails are developed under the breaking up of elements and the light pressure upon the particles is tremendous. Newton records that the great comet of 1680 threw out in two days, as it neared the sun, a tail 20,000,000 leagues in length, the result of the mechanical pressure of light upon the broken up elements which yielded to the heat of the sun.

Thus, when a comet is far from the sun it shows no tail. The coma of a comet is the haze which surrounds the nucleus, which has the appearance of a star. Sometimes when comets are at great distance they show no tail and no nucleus, appearing only as patches of hazy light. Only the coma then is visible. On their approach to the sun they reveal nucleus and develop the tail.

Periodic comets travel in ellipse. That is, their orbit, however elliptical, is closed. The parabolic and hyperbolic comets may have closed orbits. They may approach and depart from the sun to return, after whatever immeasurable period of time, to the sun again, but the closing of their orbit has not been detected or determined. They are wanderers, so far as we know, in space, but the idea that everything in the universe has its fixed rule and is an ordered house, inclines opinion to the supposition that nothing wanders erratic and ungovered.

Hupmobile
CAR OF THE AMERICAN FAMILY

Ask the Engineer

We hope you have in your acquaintance a competent engineer.

We would like you to get his opinion of the Hupmobile.

Engineers constitute a little world of and unto themselves. They are keen critics, but generous ones, when they encounter good work.

And these sharpest of observers say the Hupmobile is good.

In Detroit—where there are many automobile engineers—one hears the highest praise of the Hupmobile.

It would be too much to say that there is not a dissenting voice regarding the Hupmobile among Detroit engineers.

But it would be hard to find one who holds an unfavorable view.

By common consent they have settled on the Hupmobile as one car they can unite in commending.

Now this is not mere sentiment or friendliness.

Reputable engineers will not barter away their professional standing by unmerited praise.

When they approve of the Hupmobile—and especially of its splendid small bore, long stroke motor—that approval means something.

It is an endorsement founded on extraordinary experience and knowledge.

It is a source of pride to us—and a recommendation you can not afford to overlook. Take the engineer's expert opinion along with all the other good things that you hear about the Hupmobile. Let us prove the Hupmobile in a quality test.

Spring Sale of Locomobile Exchange Cars

April 12th to 17th, One Week Only — 8:30 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. Daily

Large Assortment — We offer the finest assortment of Guaranteed Motor Cars, at Medium Prices, that we have ever gathered under one roof. The National Branch System of The Locomobile Company makes this possible, as the Chicago Branch (at 2000 Michigan Avenue) now acts as a Clearing House for this territory.

"The Best Built Car in America" — You, who have wanted the Car of Prestige, of Refinement, of Vogue, but for one reason or another have not purchased, can now secure that Quality, Safety and Style without paying the new car price. Experts in Motor Car Value will tell you that these Exchange Locomobile sixes are Better Value Than Any New Car at the Same Price

No man who expects to buy a car, at any price, within the year can afford to miss this sale.

A Saving to you of 20% to 60% — Profits are eliminated. Prices are attractive. All have the appearance of new cars—for all practical purposes they are new cars. Every one of them has come to us through the sale of a New Locomobile. We know the history of each one from the time it left the factory—how many miles it was driven, who drove it, what care it received, the same as the pedigree of the thoroughbred.

Full Guarantee — The exchange Locomobile Sixes we offer at this Show have been carefully inspected, refinished and put in perfect mechanical condition. They carry the same guarantee as our New Locomobiles.

Convenient Terms — The purchaser of an Exchange Locomobile Six is entitled to the same service, the same attention, the same care and consideration as our owners of New Locomobiles. The entire service organization at our new Locomobile Building is back of our guarantee on every one of these Locomobile Sixes.

Guaranteed Locomobiles from $900 to $3500

For Motorist and Motorcyclist

"I would like to get a map of the shortest and best route to Muncie, Ind. Also number of miles by road from south side.
"J. S., 606 East Fifty-sixth street."

The map was printed in THE TRIBUNE on March 28.

What is the best route from Chicago to Pittsburgh, Pa.? How long will it take to make the trip by auto?
CHARLES D. [illegible],
Indiana Harbor, Ind.

The best route beyond a question is the Lincoln highway. Three to four days will be required for the trip.

"I would like some information in regard to Knight motors. Have they proven by actual tests to be superior in all respects to the poppet valve? And if so, why haven't more car makers adopted them? Any information you may be able to give will be greatly appreciated by
C. L. Morris, Ill.

The Moline Automobile company of Moline, Ill., performed a remarkable test with a Knight motor at New York more than a year ago. That the Knight motor, however, is better in every respect than the poppet valve type I believe to be a mooted question. I advise you to correspond with factories building the different kinds of motors for literature and advice in answer to your query.

Will you please give me the best and shortest route to New York City? I intend to make the trip the latter part of July on a motorcycle.
R. E. BASSETT, Joliet, Ill.

The best route to New York is called the Northern Red route. It touches South Bend, Ind.; Bryan, Toledo and Cleveland, in Ohio; Erie, Pa.; Buffalo, Syracuse, and Albany. A complete map was published in THE TRIBUNE of March 28.

"Be good enough, please, to inform me what the mileage is from Diversey boulevard and Sheridan road to Fort Sheridan via following route: Diversey and Sheridan to Clarendon avenue, down Clarendon to Sheridan road, through Evanston, Wilmette, Winnetka, Glencoe, Ravinia, Highland Park, etc., to Fort Sheridan. I walk the distance in six and one-half hours. Do you consider it good time?
"J. A. M., Chicago."

About twenty-two miles. I should consider you made good time.

"Please forward me your automobile road map and instructions on a trip from Chicago via Joliet to Starved Rock.
"FRED COOK JR., Chicago."

THE TRIBUNE cannot reprint a map of the road to Starved Rock. Briefly the route via Joliet is as follows: Chicago, Summit, Joliet, Minooka, Morris, Ottawa, La Salle.

"I desire to melt some rubber tubing, that is, to put it into a semi-liquid form. I would like to know if you can tell me how to do this. I have tried ether, but that does not seem to affect it.
"F. A. T., Valparaiso, Ind."

Try benzine.

"My car is a six-cylinder Lozier. The engine has developed a 'tap tap' when pulling. Can you suggest where to look for the trouble.
"R. W. P., St. Joseph, Mo."

I suggest you look over the connecting rods, flywheels, and valve tappets, which may be loose.

For a mile of the best concrete road in the state Illinois motorists are indebted to the Marquette Cement company. At La Salle, Ill., in the heart of the Starved Rock touring section, the Marquette company has constructed and given to the state a model piece of highway, crowning one of the great hills in the vicinity.

THE TRIBUNE last week received the following letter of protest from the Motorists' Security alliance:

"The recent ordinance forbidding automobiles to be left more than a half hour within the loop district unless an attendant is present is working to the detriment of the business houses within the loop and also working a hardship on every business man who heretofore has had the privilege of using his car to transact business within the loop.

"This ordinance is working even a greater hardship upon the women of the community who run their own electrics and use them for the purpose of shopping. Consequently it works a hardship upon the retail stores in the loop, which are prevented from being visited by the owners of these electrics.

"The change from a one hour period to a thirty minute period has done nothing towards relieving congestion in the loop and it never will. This ordinance makes it impossible for the owner of an automobile to use his car for the purpose of making business calls in the loop. You cannot tell, when you go into an office building, whether or not your party is at liberty to see you the instant you enter his office; consequently you often are required to wait ten or fifteen minutes, and your discussion must either be broken off and postponed, or you violate the ordinance compelling you to move your car every thirty minutes.

"It is impossible for the owner of an electric to drive to any department store and do any shopping, get waited on, and get back to the car in time to move it within the prescribed limit.

"The real beneficiaries of the thirty-minute ordinance are the surface and elevated lines. People who have used cars to transact their business in the loop are forced to use street cars or stay out.

"The thirty minute ordinance has aroused a storm of protest from the thousands of members of the Motorists' Security alliance. This organization stands for law enforcement. Its members are drawn from the best type of our citizenship. They are conscientiously endeavoring to observe all city ordinances, and for this very reason they feel the injustice and annoyance of the thirty minute time limit more than the men who hold the law in light esteem.

"Therefore we urge your powerful cooperation in readjusting this menacing ordinance and reëstablishing the one hour limit, if a time limit is considered essential."

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

APRIL

The Flush of Life.

IN regions where spring comes slowly its first perceptible sign, other than that of bird migration, which may, in the case of hardy individuals of early species, be phenomenally disassociated from any return of vegetation, is the flush of renewed life in the smooth bark saplings and the wild shrubbery.

It is a flush like the creeping back of healthy color into the face of a convalescent child. Viburnum and sumac, wild gooseberry and elder, wild raspberry and thorn, hazel and wild rose, all the plants of the thickets, have been as dried sticks, drearily marking the tangle of last year's luxuriance.

Just as the hepatica begins to form its buds under the dead leaves, the flush of new life comes into the seemingly dead wood and stem and branch become lustrous. The sugar maple is running sap, wet through every abrasion in its bark even if untapped, when the same sign of renewal shows in color in the thickets.

If not a clamoring sign of spring it is one which appears to the least attention. When it might require sharp eyes or a raking aside of leaves to discover what forces were at work, it is a careless mood which does not permit perception of this awakening which makes its appearance in the vivid coloring of the bare wild shrubbery.

They are live and vibrant colors, olive greens, dark greens, purples, deep red and bright scarlets, yellows and grays, all lustrous and all with the significance of new life, indicative of the strength which is filling artery and vein and carrying material for the forming and forcing of the buds which begin to swell at the end of the twigs.

Communications have been opened. The flush of life shows that the plants are in touch with their supplies.

HYATT
QUIET ROLLER BEARINGS

For Dependable Service

The bearings in your car must be thoroughly reliable; in addition to carrying the weight of the car and passengers they have to withstand the hammering and twisting of road shocks.

Hyatt Roller Bearings are especially qualified for standing up under hard work. The hollow, flexible, spiral rollers cushion road shocks—keep gears and shafts in alignment—relieve the surrounding parts of strain and absorb vibrations, thus reducing noise.

Most of the cars made in America are equipped with Hyatt Quiet Bearings on account of the absolutely dependable service rendered by them.

ART

DESIGN SUBMITTED IN COMPETITION FOR THE PULITZER FOUNTAIN
[illegible], ARCHITECTS.

By Anne Ellis.

THE Art institute bristles with exhibits opening this week. There is the Art Students' league's precocious display, the colorful works of Randall Davey, and the architectural exhibit. To the practical, one of the best recommendations for an exhibit as a whole is the testimony that it is well hung and arranged. While not the most important feature of the architectural exhibit, the most striking on first inspection is the consistency and discernment used in arranging it. There are appeals to the laity in water color sketches of picturesque bungalows, facsimiles of bronze reliefs, plaster models for fountains, and color panels for murals interspersing the technical display.

Even the most casual interest in the exhibit will warrant a trip to see it. It is inspiring as a dream of a national style. It makes one remember its immediate connection with etching and painting. We must, it seems, have first a national architecture to have a national art. It is picturesqueness of architecture rather than natural scenery that our artists are forced to seek abroad. From one or two pieces in the exhibit one is almost hopeful originality will prevail.

This is the twenty-eighth architectural exhibition held in Chicago, and its discontinuance this year looked imminent until the Art institute, the Illinois Society of Architects, and the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects set their combined efforts to the task of organizing the exhibition. The Art institute contributed its galleries to house the exhibit, and a generous sum to its support. The two architectural societies then contributed generously.

Some of the interesting exhibits anent the future of Chicago are the municipal market, the Michigan boulevard extension plan of A. N. Rebori, the harbor plan of Charles S. Frost, the country club at Flossmoor by George C. Nimmons, and the residence of H. M. Stevenson by George W. Maher.

Vaudeville Wit.

McVICKER'S.

Ed and Jack Smith:

"Where are you going?"

"My uncle left me some money in his will and I'm going down to my lawyers to collect it."

"How much money did he leave you?"

"Eleven hundred thousand roubles, ninety-four thousand gulden, and a million and a half piastres."

"How much is that in United States money?"

"Four dollars and thirty-five cents."

HAYNES
America's Greatest "Light Six" $1485

You Can Drive This Car Slower Than a Walk—on High Gear

You can throttle down to one mile per hour on high gear without causing the motor to labor—yet touch the mile-a-minute mark with ease, in America's Greatest "Light Six."

To convince him that the perfectly balanced motor of America's Greatest "Light Six" would permit throttling down to one mile an hour on high, at our request a business man got out, walked alongside the car, walked around the car, and walked backwards in front of the car—while it was moving on high gear during a demonstration.

This low throttling feature—more than anything else—makes America's Greatest "Light Six" the safest car for women to drive.

Two Models—Three Body Styles

Model 30—America's Greatest "Light Six"—5 passenger touring car, 121 inch wheelbase, weight 2950 lbs. $1485
Model 30—The Prettiest Roadster in America 1485
Model 30—The Haynes "All-Weather" Cabriolet 1750
Model 33—The Kokomo "Six"—a "light" 7 passenger touring car, 127 inch wheelbase, weight 3050 lbs. 1550

A demonstration is convincing.

This Six Has Every Advantage

MANY popular priced Sixes have but one or two good features.

At every other point they are not only commonplace, and ordinary, but way below par.

So that one good feature is picked—widely exploited, talked about and advertised. The theory of this method of selling being that if the public can be thoroughly saturated and incidentally blinded by the alleged superiority of this one point it will finally come to regard the whole car as something rare and unusual.

But, unfortunately, for this scheme—the public do their own thinking.

They want to know all about the whole car.

Consequently, when the public start to ask a variety of questions and make comparisons it is mighty embarrassing for him who is trying to sell the 'one-feature Six.'

The Overland Six has every advantage.

The en bloc 45 horsepower motor is an advantage.

The high tension magneto ignition is an advantage.

The bright French finish, long grain hand buffed leather upholstery is an advantage.

The 125-inch wheel base is an advantage.

The 35" x 4½" tires are an advantage.

The non-skid tires on the rear are an advantage.

It comfortably seats seven adults.

Yet—the price is only $1475!

If you want a Six that is good at every point get an Overland. You will get a far better car and save money as well.

Deliveries can be made immediately.

Order yours today.

The Chicago Tribune's Army of War Correspondents

Why and How The Tribune Is Telling the Greatest Story of the Greatest War

This is the most tightly censored of wars. Yet THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has achieved the impossible. It has broken through the impregnable barrier.

THE TRIBUNE has now, and has had for months, a special war correspondent with the highest officials of the German army at the front.

THE TRIBUNE has now a special war correspondent with the highest officials of the Russian army at the front.

THE TRIBUNE, for five months, has had a special war correspondent with the French army at the front.

THE TRIBUNE has now a special war correspondent with Gen. Villa, the big man in Mexico, at the front.

THE TRIBUNE has now the two most daring and productive war photographers at the front in Europe.

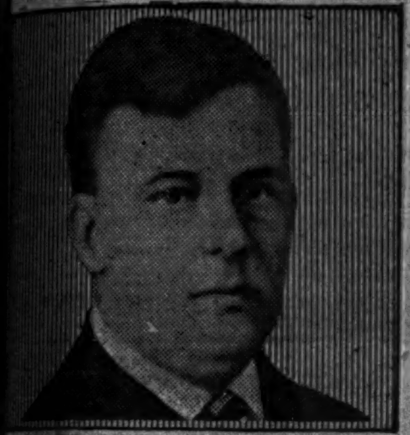
THE TRIBUNE has now an authority on the Orient in the Orient to report the truth about the precarious conditions there as they relate to this country and to the rest of the world.

THE TRIBUNE, in connection with the New York World, has two other special war correspondents in Europe, both of whom have attained world-wide fame by their reporting of the great conflict.

THE TRIBUNE has now a special war correspondent in South Africa who will, from time to time, report in detail developments in that section of hostilities.

THE TRIBUNE has a special war correspondent at The Hague whose specialty will be the reporting of important matters especially in connection with the German army.

THE TRIBUNE has the service of two great press associations, three great newspapers, and in connection with various other publications the services of various other special writers in the various zones of war.

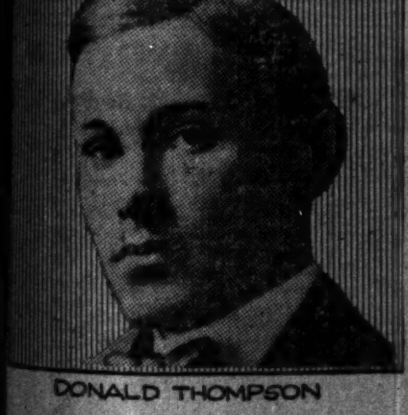


JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT

Mr. Bennett's war articles in THE TRIBUNE during the last eight months have placed him high in the ranks of war correspondents. The war made a dramatic change in his labors. He went abroad to be London correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and write about politics, the drama, tourists, and the like. Then the war broke out and he left the life prosaic to take up the life strenuous. He has been in the thick of many of the important campaigns of both the Eastern and Western theater of war. His stories of this most terrible of all dramas have been widely read on both hemispheres. He will continue to write for THE TRIBUNE until the close of the war. A new series by him will appear during the week.

E. ALEXANDER POWELL.

Mr. Powell is the writer who, with Donald Thompson, during the German invasion of Belgium drove for fifty miles through columns and columns of German soldiers. He was one of the first men to get an audience with a German general and made such an impression on this officer by his nerve that he was invited by this officer to dine with him. Mr. Powell's stories have been among the most gripping of those written since the war began. He will continue to write for THE TRIBUNE and the New York World.

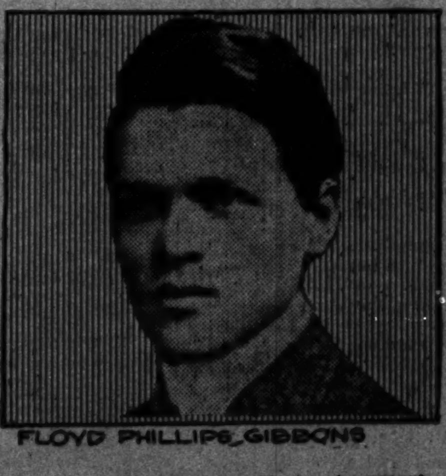


DONALD THOMPSON

Mr. Thompson is the war photographer who during the early part of the war gained international fame for recklessness and daring, as well as for his unusual pictures. He has returned to the scenes of his former triumphs to add to his laurels.

WILL IRWIN

Mr. Irwin is a free agent who is not confined to any particular field in the war zone. His reputation as a writer is such that it is needless to dwell upon it. The first of his stories will appear from time to time in THE TRIBUNE.



FLOYD PHILLIPS GIBBONS

Mr. Gibbons went to Mexico to report the Johnson-Willard prize fight. While in Juarez he had an opportunity to visit the headquarters of Gen. Villa and did so. He has written three very dramatic and exclusive stories of military activities in Mexico, and when the opportunity afforded he went along with Gen. Villa to battle and is now with him. He will keep on writing stories about the Mexican campaign as long as the situation warrants.

OSCAR KING DAVIS

Mr. Davis' capable and revealing series of stories on the military status of the United States has just been concluded in THE TRIBUNE. He is now on route to the Orient, where he will write in detail the situation in that section of the world. Mr. Davis, who has been an expert writer for a long time on military, political and international topics, is especially a student of the Orient. His articles may, therefore, be accepted as the most authoritative of any that will touch upon that subject.

JAMES SUTHERLAND

Mr. Sutherland is an Englishman, well known in Chicago. He is now with the British forces in South Africa as a special correspondent for THE TRIBUNE. His first letter was printed recently and others will appear from time to time detailing the fighting and the situation in that far away land.

HENRY J. REILLY

Mr. Reilly is widely known to the readers of THE TRIBUNE. For a long time he wrote articles on world topics under the nom de plume of "Observer." He is formerly a lieutenant in the United States army and is a military technician. Until recently for five months he has been with the French army at the front. His thorough knowledge of the business of war combined with his practical experience gained in this campaign makes him probably the most authoritative correspondent on military strategy and tactics of any correspondent in Europe. His articles will appear at frequent intervals in THE TRIBUNE. Read the one in today's Tribune, concerning the woes of the wounded.

CAROLYN A. WILSON

Miss Wilson went to Paris last summer to write fashions and boulevard chatter for THE TRIBUNE. Then the war began and she remained to write some of the most beautiful and brilliant stories of the war. She has been in France, England, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Belgium and Holland. She will continue to write for THE TRIBUNE indefinitely.

ROBERT R. McCORMICK AT THE FRONT

Mr. McCormick, who is with the Russian army, is one of the editors of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. He has the "inside track" with the Russian military staff and is in a position to obtain exclusive and unusual stories. Mr. McCormick will make an extended stay in embattled Europe, devoting his time and energy principally to the territory in which the Russians are most active. A series of his stories begins in today's Tribune. His articles will appear from time to time indefinitely.

EDWIN F. WEIGLE PHOTO MOFFETT

Mr. Weigle is the photographer who obtained the only real moving pictures of the war. He is now again in the war district, and no doubt soon will equal, if not excel, his former record for obtaining exclusive and dramatic pictures.

ROBERT J. THOMPSON

Mr. Thompson was formerly United States consul at Aix-la-Chapelle, Germany. He resigned in order to tell what he knew about the charges of German atrocities in Belgium. His sensational letters to Secretary of State Bryan, printed recently in THE TRIBUNE, created national interest, and in Chicago and Illinois and adjacent states were almost universally read and created a veritable storm of comment. Mr. Thompson will have headquarters at The Hague and will write articles for THE TRIBUNE with an especial emphasis on the German viewpoint.

KARL H. VON WIEGAND

Mr. Wiegand is a famous war correspondent who represents THE TRIBUNE and the New York World in Germany. His headquarters are in Berlin. Among his notable "beats" since the war began were interviews with Crown Prince Frederick William, Grand Admiral von Tirpitz and Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin. His articles will continue in THE TRIBUNE from time to time.

Here Are The Tribune Reporters Assigned to the War

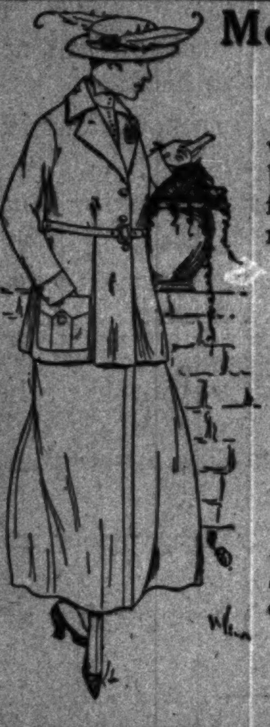
Most Wonderful Values in Women's Fine Quality Spring Suits



Tailored suits are in big demand this season, and no wonder. The styles are exceedingly attractive and most becoming—you will surely want one. Tomorrow we will feature two exceptional values in newest of new spring style suits, special at $19.75 and $13.95

Women's Spring Suits at $19.75

Are in the fashionable poplins, checked suitings, gabardines and silk bengalines, in ten of the newest belted and military styles, while in colors there is a choice of Belgian blue, putty, navy, green and black.

These suits are beautifully tailored and are lined with fine quality silk. Made to sell at higher prices; they are of unusual value, at the special price, $19.75

Women's Spring Suits at $13.95

While made of less expensive materials than those higher priced, these suits are just as carefully tailored and are to be had in a splendid variety of good styles, also in a complete choice of the new spring colors.

They are also lined with silk of guaranteed quality. To those in quest of a stylish and serviceable suit at small cost we recommend as of exceptional value these suits at $13.95

FATHERS
What Is Your Boy Going to Do?

We have two openings in our organization for young men mechanically inclined that will develop their earning power rapidly in the working of precious metals.

The opening is in the nature of an apprenticeship, and there are ten openings for each competent man available, regardless of business conditions.

Six months should qualify the right man to earn $125 per month, with a possibility of increasing to $300 monthly inside of two years.

We are the largest house in this line in this city, and have been established twenty years.

The apprenticeship will cost $200 and requires constant attendance eight hours a day for six months.

We increase our force once a year in this way. This opportunity is a limited one. Apply for full particulars.

Address A W 130, Tribune.

STRICTLY MODERN SMALL APARTMENTS

NORTHEAST CORNER
50TH-PL. AND ST. LAWRENCE-AV.

Located in one of the most desirable sections of the South Side, overlooking WASHINGTON PARK; easy walking distance to "L" express, Cottage Grove and Indiana surface lines; convenient to tennis courts, theaters, and shopping district.

Apartments contain THREE AND FOUR ROOMS EACH. Every apt. has sun parlor or front porch. Large, light, airy rooms, plenty of large closets, full size kitchens and pantries. Each apt. has large dressing rooms and MURPHY IN-A-DOR BEDS. This makes these apts. as efficient as ordinary apts. of four, five, and six rooms, with two less rooms to light, furnish, and keep clean. Bath and electric fixtures are the best and everything has been installed that will solve the servant problem and simplify housekeeping. The efficiency of these small apts. cannot be appreciated until you see them. Ready for inspection NOW. See them today, as they are going fast.

STRICTLY MODERN

SMALL APARTMENTS

NORTHEAST CORNER
50TH-PL. AND ST. LAWRENCE-AV.

Located in one of the most desirable sections of the South Side, overlooking WASHINGTON PARK; easy walking distance to "L" express, Cottage Grove and Indiana surface lines; convenient to tennis courts, theaters, and shopping district.

Apartments contain THREE AND FOUR ROOMS EACH. Every apt. has sun parlor or front porch. Large, light, airy rooms, plenty of large closets, full size kitchens and pantries. Each apt. has large dressing rooms and MURPHY IN-A-DOR BEDS. This makes these apts. as efficient as ordinary apts. of four, five, and six rooms, with two less rooms to light, furnish, and keep clean. Bath and electric fixtures are the best and everything has been installed that will solve the servant problem and simplify housekeeping. The efficiency of these small apts. cannot be appreciated until you see them. Ready for inspection NOW. See them today, as they are going fast.

COME OUT TO GLEN ELLYN TODAY.

Let me show you a new two story home of English architecture with more up to date appointments than you will find in expensive apartments in Chicago; such as immense living room with fireplace, built in cabinets in dining room, screened in porch with fireplace, isolated room with Bohn Syphon refrigerator, modern gas range with built in hood, stationary vacuum plant, toilet and bathrooms latest plumbing with agate tile floors, hot water heat, automatic hot water heater, laundry complete, vegetable and fruit cellar, gas and electric lights, city water and sewers; four bedrooms with sleeping porch screened and glassed in; brick and stucco construction of best materials, interior trim red gum wood.

This complete and up to date home is located on ½ acre of ground facing Crescent-blvd., the most exclusive paved street in Glen Ellyn. The grounds are all laid out with an abundance of shrubs, trees, and flowers in a most artistic manner. Here is the ONE complete place. One you do not have to spend money on after you buy same, and I will sell at a price you could not erect the building for and accept small payment down with modest monthly payments.

THIS IS AN OPPORTUNITY YOU WON'T HAVE AGAIN.

Glen Ellyn has excellent transportation to Chicago. Both Aurora & Elgin and Northwestern Ry. run fast trains to city in 37 and 40 minutes. Think of it—less time than it takes most Chicago people to reach the loop. Come out today without fail. Will have rig at station.

I. A. LESHER,
GLEN ELLYN. TELEPHONE 13.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

A Record Increase

THERE'S ONE PLACE IN THE U. S. where farm land is not beyond the price of the average farm renter or workman, and that's in Michigan, in Mason, Manistee, Lake, and Wexford counties, where the Swigart tract is located. The prices are still reasonable enough and the terms easy enough for any man who is willing to save a little; and James J. Hill says no man is a success unless he is able to save.

THE BEST WAY TO SAVE MONEY is to invest it in something that will increase in value. Nothing so surely does this as land. Now that land is so scarce and produce so high, a record increase in land values is being made. The reasons for it which appeal to common sense are that we consume 91% of our wheat and 98% of our corn. In 6 years, 1907-1913, the decrease in our beef cattle was 30% in the face of increasing population, and this caused an increase of 2,000% in cattle importation in the same six years. Add to this millions of people who, after the European war, will emigrate to America rather than remain under enormous taxation and oppression of the conquerors and you will understand that there is some foundation for the published statement that farm lands have increased in value 20%, taking the U. S. as a whole, in the past year.

CAUSES THAT ARE INCREASING VALUES in the Swigart Tract are its nearness to big markets, quick and cheap transportation to them both by lake and rail, development of great electric power from our streams, the making of good roads, excellent educational facilities, good water supply and dependable rainfall of 32 inches during the growing season, local markets, the healthful and pleasant conditions for living in our Fruit Belt climate, and the class of people we are bringing, who are mostly experienced farmers.

EARNING POWER determines the value of any investment. A special cause of our increase in land values is the earning power of our warm, responsive sandy loam soils. We can earn more per acre from potatoes and beans than is earned in Illinois in corn and wheat. Get the figures and prove it for yourself. At the same time, look up the profits from clover seed, from fruit growing, poultry, stock raising, and dairying in this general farming district. Statistics about these crops and our large variety of products are all described in a 72 page book, which is free to any one who wishes it.

WHAT WE DO. We sell good lands, handy to towns, on low payments. Prices as low as $10 to $35 per acre, and much of the best lying land now at $18 per acre. Terms, $10 to $50 down and $5 to $10 per month on 40 acres, or annual terms if preferred. After the contract is partly paid we insure you for the balance. We own all the lands we offer for sale, and, with over 50,000 unsold acres, we give you the largest selection to choose from in Michigan's Fruit Belt. You have the privilege of exchange if later you wish to make another choice. A demonstration farm is operated for the instruction of the settlers; also a large orchard. We have a seed distributing arrangement. Our farm advisers regularly visit every settler's farm. After your land is paid for we loan you money if needed to improve it. We also have a number of other co-operative features.

OUR NEXT TWO EXCURSIONS will be on Tuesdays, April 20th and May 4th. On each date there will be one or more private cars to accommodate our many excursionists. Automobiles and guides are furnished free. Rate from Chicago to Wellston and return $8.80. This will be rebated on the purchase price of your land if you buy. Ample hotel accommodations for both men and women. Write or call for our literature. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon. When you call ask to see our little land show and see the stereopticon lecture which is going on all the time in our stereopticon room. Also ask for a map.

BUSINESS PERSONALS.

WOMEN'S HARD LUCK STORIES WANTED.

Are you a poor, hard working woman, a widow, perhaps, with a family to support?

Do you depend on the work of your children to keep your little family together?

How have you managed? What are your boys and girls doing to help you? How old are they?

MANUFACTURERS' NEWS will pay $15 for the best story of your experience, $10 for the second best, $5 for the third best. Other stories will be paid for at regular rates.

The struggles of the women of Illinois, left without means of support, to keep their homes intact will be an inspiration to others. We want them and are willing to pay for them. We don't care for literary style. We want the simple facts, told in your own way.

MANUFACTURERS' NEWS,
76 W. Monroe-st., Chicago.

PHOTOACT STUDIO

MOTION PICTURE ACTING—

Offers a complete course in the art of photoplay acting at a nominal tuition. You live in the atmosphere of the professional studio. You are cast in actual film productions. Our entire building—glass studio, class, and dressing rooms, private theater, make up the only complete plant in the country devoted to the teaching of this art.

Note: Those who applied after our last classes were filled may join those starting now.

MORNING—AFTERNOON—EVENING.
VISITORS WELCOME.
Phone Edge 2879 or write 6242 Broadway, Chi.

ELOCUTION, MONOLOGUES, DRAMATic readings, public speaking.

Speakers' club free.

My students are splendid successes as teachers or entertainers.

Enter now and see the wonderful results you can accomplish by June.

Distinct speech assured and diffidence positively overcome.

MRS. WENTWORTH, 51 Bellevue-pl. Sup. 8546.

SHORTHAND IN ONE LESSON—

The mystic art is simplified. Think of the boon to humanity when every man, woman, and child can convey thoughts even in the dark faster than express them, and without incroaching upon attention. Send $5 to T. L. Reeve, Trustee, Westminister Bldg. Practicability guaranteed or money refunded. Can place limited number to work at once; representatives wanted everywhere.

MOTION PICTURE ACTING—

STORE FIXTURES

BUYERS, ATTENTION.

We have purchased from the United States Court in Kenosha the entire stock of the UNITED REFRIGERATOR AND ICE MACHINE COMPANY OF KENOSHA, who were one of the largest manufacturers of high grade ice boxes and store fixtures in America, consisting of:

50 butcher boxes, all sizes.
100 butter boxes, all sizes.
25 florist boxes, all sizes.
100 refrigerator counters, all sizes.
75 delicatessen boxes, all sizes.
200 ice cream cabinets.

Wall cases, bins, drawers and shelving, marble top counters, wood top counters, display counters, racks, and other articles too numerous to mention.

If you are in the market for any of the above fixtures it will pay you well to call at once and look over the line, as it is the greatest store fixtures sale ever held, where you can buy store fixtures and ice boxes at less than cost to manufacture.

Goods now on sale at our Chicago salesroom and

SAFETY FIRST

IS THE WATCHWORD OF THE DAY.

Any used car is a good buy at the right price. The buyer's only danger is that he will pay too much for it.

We don't handle them for profit, nor do we take them in at more than they're worth.

When you buy of us we keep in mind that future day when you'll be in the market again.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

MR. NEW CAR BUYER.

JUST LISTEN TO THIS: "I won't take more than a moment of your time."

As a hard headed business man, if you see a good proposition before you, a real fifty-fifty, clean cut, fair proposition, wouldn't you consider it?

I THINK YOU WOULD—Now here it is! As I told you last Sunday, I was the first man in Chicago to enter the automobile trade, and I have been handling THE JACKSON CAR longer than any other car has been sold in Chicago by the same house. I am a hard headed business man, too, and "I think" I know where my bread is buttered and the value of a dollar as well as any one.

Well, I am selling the JACKSON CAR year after year for its proven value, for its fundamental value in good honest workmanship, its clean cut design, its powerful motor, and its full elliptic springs [both front and rear], which are found on only four other cars.

ALSO FOR ITS LOW PRICE, for the "Jackson" is the "only car" which never raised its price in the days when the demand outclassed the supply, and consequently was better prepared by basic conditions to meet the lowered prices in line with great improvements.

COME, NOW! MR. OR MRS. NEW CAR BUYER, if you desire to "invest" $1,250 in a fine touring car or roadster, come to the real automobile headquarters of Chicago. We sell two lines of gas cars, the JACKSON AND THE EMPIRE [$875], THE WAVERLEY ELECTRIC, THE SELDEN TRUCK, AND A FIRST CLASS, RELIABLE STOCK OF USED CARS WORTH 100 CENTS ON THE DOLLAR. Yours very truly,
RALPH TEMPLE, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

AUTOMOBILES—ELECTRIC.

Rare Values in Detroit Electrics.

A GOOD ELECTRIC CAR SLIGHTLY USED is a better purchase than a new car of inferior quality. The Detroit Electric leads all others—in sales as well as in quality. Every third electric sold is a Detroit Electric. These cars are driven by men and women who demand and are used to having the best.

A Chance to Save Money.

WE have a number of rebuilt electric cars. All are in perfect running condition and offered at unusually low prices. These cars are rebuilt in our own factory; they have been repainted, equipped with new batteries and tires. PRICES RANGE from $500 to $2,300.

INVESTIGATE THESE RARE VALUES.

Shaft Drive Refinished Woods Electric

This modern, five passenger car is of up to date design. In fact, the lines are so conservative and in such good taste that the car will remain in style indefinitely.

The car has been newly painted, thoroughly overhauled mechanically, and is in fine running condition. The tires are new—few would recognize it as anything but a NEW CAR.

The price depends upon the battery selected, $1,000 or $1,100.

This is the best bargain in a used, shaft drive electric of high grade that we have offered in a long time. Come and see it this week sure.

CHICAGO'S 'GREAT OUTSIDE' BEAUTY AND RICHES TOLD

City's Marvelous Growth Away from the Business Section Shown by "The Tribune."

BY FRANK N. WOOD.

[Real Estate Editor Tribune.]

It is the purpose of THE TRIBUNE to publish a series of articles dealing with the growth and development of great "Outside" Chicago from a real estate development standpoint. They will appear each week in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE in connection with its regular real estate market page. An effort will be made to give in as much detail and completeness as possible a comprehensive story of the remarkable progress which has been made in this field during the last decade or two.

Much attention also will be given to many of the most interesting and important projects now in progress or immediate contemplation, the purpose being to give the people of Chicago a better understanding of the vast extent and character of the activities which have been and are at work in this field.

"City Beautiful" to Be Considered.

While it would be impossible to ignore the material or purely market value features in a story of this kind where development has in many instances multiplied the original land values many fold, always a subject of fascinating interest to the average person, it is not proposed to dwell upon it to the exclusion of the esthetic features of the situation, as exemplified by the present marked tendency toward more refined and attractive ideals in connection with every form of real estate as well as municipal development. In fact, the tendency toward the "city beautiful" or city planning idea is becoming one of the most conspicuous features of present day municipal development, both in connection with public as well as individual undertakings.

Hazy Ideas of Suburbs.

Most people have an exceedingly imperfect idea of great "outside" Chicago, whose development along material as well as esthetic lines constitutes one of the most wonderful chapters in the history of world cities. Every one is familiar with the downtown, or central district, to a large extent, with the principal parks and boulevards of the city, and to a less extent with the territory along the elevated and principal surface car lines. Outside of this they practically have no knowledge of vast stretches of the city where hundreds of thousands of people live and work and play.

Many of these districts are anything but inviting, and were better not seen by those with even fairly developed ideas as to the decencies and proprieties of life. Want and crime and tumble down shacks and the lowest level of land values prevail. On the other hand, there are many most attractive neighborhoods, both in the intermediate and outlying parts of the city, frequently hidden away like oases in the midst of veritable deserts of commonplace, often forbidding and bleak, surroundings.

Generally speaking these unattractive parts of Chicago are in the intermediate districts of the city, lying between the central business and contiguous manufacturing districts and the newer outlying parts of the city. The future of this class of property presents a problem of ever increasing interest and perplexity to the student of realty conditions.

Too near the central business and manufacturing districts to be desirable for residence purposes and too far away from the former to be available for business or factory purposes, and yet suffering from occasional invasions from both of the latter, with generally antiquated, unattractive buildings lacking the comforts and conveniences of modern structures, it has for years been steadily retrograding, a victim to the withering touch of progressive decay and changing conditions.

Former Tenants Seek New Fields.

Its former tenants, representatives for the greater part of the thrifty middle classes, have found the newer and better equipped buildings and generally more attractive surroundings of the outlying districts more to their liking. So, in a steadily descending scale, keeping pace with the process of degeneration, its places have been filled by others.

Unfortunately this process of decay has not alone affected districts with inferior and out of date improvements and unattractive surroundings, as many of the oldtime exclusive residence districts have also felt its withering touch, and this passing of these old districts is one of the tragedies incident upon Chicago's growth.

Foes of Land Values.

Land values, however, have not always suffered as they have in those districts where the improvements have been of a comparatively commonplace character and the general surroundings unattractive. Apartment buildings and business invasions have been the foes of these old residence districts, and land values frequently have advanced in consequence.

But this has not been the case with those other neglected and less attractive parts of the city, and the query among owners, brokers, and students of realty conditions is whether regeneration of this class of property is possible, and, if so, when and by what means.

The answer to a part of the query probably is that in time a good part of it will become available for manufacturing or business uses, and this is about as far as human prescience can go.

Different in New "Outside."

What a different picture is presented in the case of that new "outside" Chicago which has come into existence during the last decade and a half and which in an ever ascending scale typifies the material and aesthetic advancement of the city. Only those with a knowledge of the conditions existing in those parts of Chicago at the beginning of the period in question can have anything approaching an adequate conception of the city's stupendous growth during the time indicated.

Vast areas of virgin prairie, farms, and truck gardens have been converted into thriving residential, business, and manufacturing communities, while the original land value has multiplied hundreds of fold.

Transportation Lines Help.

Primarily this tremendous upbuilding was due to the city's remarkably rapid growth and, so far as the more outlying districts were concerned, it was made possible by new and greatly improved lines of transportation, which has come to be recognized as the determining factor in urban growth and development. As trade is said to follow the flag, so city growth may be said to follow transportation facilities, and to its far reaching and ever extending lines of transportation Chicago owes the development of great tracts of distant outlying property which otherwise would be today prairie or farm lands.

Again, much of this marvelously rapid outside growth, particularly steady improvement in the class of buildings being erected, as well as generally more attractive surroundings, is due to the development of higher standards of taste and living among people, as well as to their steadily improving condition from a worldly point of view.

Flats No Longer Satisfy.

The conventional flat building in the congested parts of the city, with its uniformly unattractive surroundings, is no longer the satisfying thing it used to be with people who have other thoughts and aspirations in life beyond a mere commonplace existence. This particularly is the case with those having children, and while under the pressure of circumstances they remain in these buildings, they are continually looking forward to the day when they may be able to live in and own one of those pretty homes which they have seen in some one of the outlying parts of the city, and where their children may have generally clean surroundings, be able to get a breath of pure air and a ray of sunlight, and have a playground other than that of the street.

This tendency is being reflected in an ever broadening scale in proportion to the financial ability and taste of people. Subdividers and builders have come to understand this, as is evidenced by the present marked tendency toward higher standards of beautification in subdivisions, and by the much more attractive character of buildings, both residence and apartments, being erected in all outlying parts of the city.

Dates Back Dozen Years.

As stated before, the period of marked development in the outlying parts of the city dates back twelve or fifteen years, but during the last five years it has been on a particularly large scale and of an exceedingly interesting character. For years following the collapse of the World's Fair boom practically all outlying property was submerged in a veritable slough of despond.

There seemed to be no bottom to the descending scale of values and no purchasers even on this basis. There was little building, less development work, and altogether the outlook was about as unpromising as could be imagined.

Then, a few years later, some far-sighted investors, noting Chicago's steady and rapid growth began to awaken to a realization of the possibilities of this outside real estate field and began quietly investing their money there. Important development projects began to materialize, the traction lines, surface and elevated began to reach out into new territory, and, before the people of the city realized what was taking place, great "outside" and long neglected Chicago had entered upon one of the biggest and withal most substantial booms and periods of development in all of its history.

Subdivisions Begin to Blossom.

Attractive subdivisions in all outlying parts of the city soon blossomed into populous residential communities, which were quickly supplemented by thriving local business centers, while land values, under the impulse of the sharp investment and speculative demand which prevailed, mounted skyward at a dizzy rate.

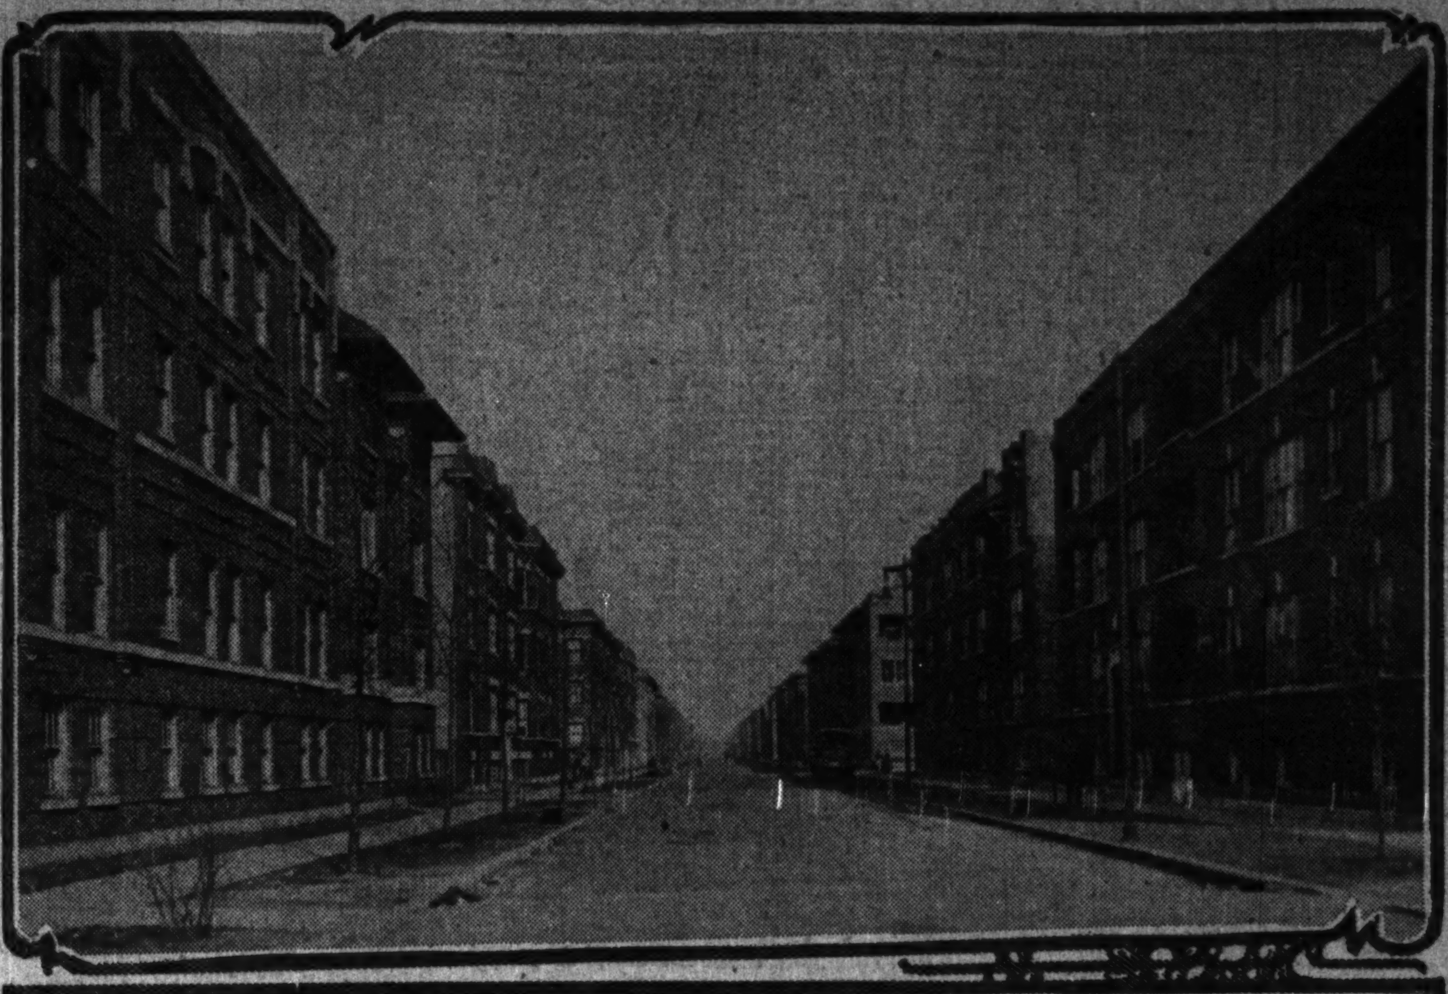
Transfer corner property was in particularly sharp demand, and values in many instances were carried to abnormally high levels. As a whole, however, this outside activity was of a healthy and substantial character. Most of the buying was for improvement purposes, for living and business uses, and it has been of a generally superior character.

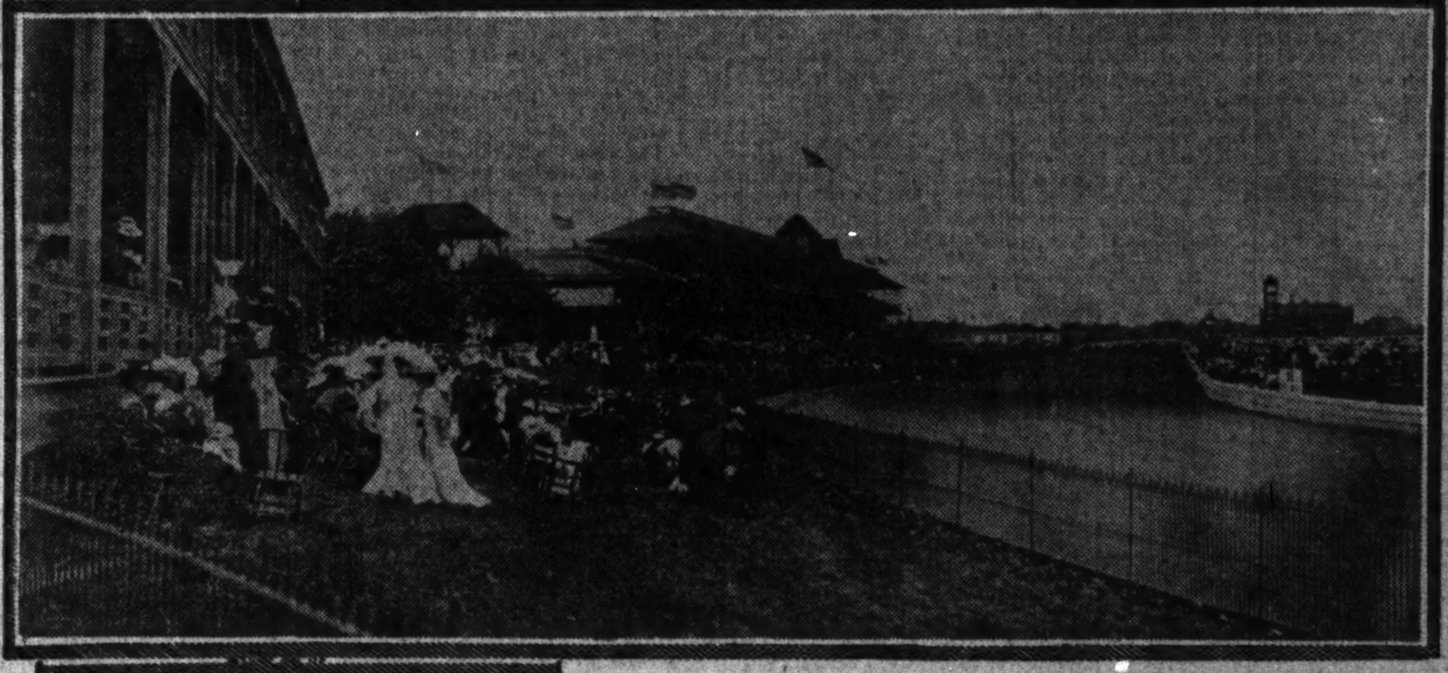
Each Years Works Advance.

Subdivision development has been one of its most conspicuous and interesting features, and each year has witnessed a distinct advance in the standard of the preliminary improvements as well as in those other provisions which make for the comfort, pleasure, and health of those making their homes there.

The best evidence of the thoroughly healthy character of this outside development is furnished by the sustained strength of the market, particularly during the last eight months since the European war began, the most trying period which business has known since the depression which followed the panic of 1893.

Then and Now of Famous Race Track.





The lower picture shows the old Washington Park racetrack June 18, 1904, the occasion of the seventeenth and last American derby. The upper picture is a view looking east on Sixty-second street from South Park avenue, the center of the former racetrack grounds. The grounds were acquired by a syndicate of stockholders of the Washington Park club, and were subdivided in the spring of 1907, when the first building operations were started. The grounds comprise the eighty acres bounded by Sixty-first and Sixty-third streets, South Park avenue and Cottage Grove avenue, now a nearly solid mass of buildings of an attractive character.

BUILDING A CITY WITHOUT PLAN PERIL TO VALUES

Chairman of Chicago Commission Points Out Necessity of System.

BY CHARLES H. WACKER.

[Chairman of Chicago Plan Commission.]

Creating pleasant and permanently profitable conditions in suburban Chicago is primarily a matter of thoughtful coöperation. Such coöperation will pay large dividends both to the city and to its suburban property owners. In addition, it will pay large dividends in good health and happiness to the entire community. It is well, therefore, at this time to take thought of how proper coordination in the development of outer areas can be brought about.

Chicago is a city of constantly expanding residential areas, each having its own individual business life. The larger problem is to make each of these areas a real and an integral part of the city.

In the past development of Chicago it has been too often the case that suburbs have been laid out with only one main purpose in mind—immediate and large returns for the speculator. The aim should be the creation of good conditions and the building of solid real estate values which will steadily increase.

Close Relations to City.

Real estate operators and subdividers should constantly hold in mind that every new tract of land opened for settlement has a close physical relation to the entire city. They should so plan their operations that their properties when developed shall fit in with the general plan of Chicago, whereby the future owners of such property will be assured the greatest benefit.

That observance of this idea is profitable has recently been well proved in Chicago. A prominent firm of subdividers before opening a large tract for sale engaged a city-planning expert and laid out the subdivision in accordance with his advice. That subdivision, planned to blend properly with the plan of Chicago, was sold in record breaking time.

Planless Growth a Peril.

Planless growth in a city, it has been found, is generally perilous to real estate values. Before property is sold for settlement, it should have accessibility to the heart of the city as well as accessibility to all other parts of the city. Such a fundamental need can be supplied only by proper planning in advance. Street traffic and transportation should be studied and foreseen.

How often, however, do we find a street too narrow to carry its burden, or a broad road leading nowhere; a railroad blocking traffic in directions that will become important; a river whose once picturesque banks are being used as a dump; a playground too small to serve its purpose; factories encroaching upon developed residential areas; or apartments covering whole areas of choice corners and destroying the view from rows of fine houses, thus depreciating their value? Such are the finished products of planless growth.

Dealers' Responsibility Heavy.

The responsibility of real estate developers is great when considered from the civic viewpoint. Some mistakes can be corrected. But where whole areas have long been wrongly developed Chicago cannot bear the financial burden of all remodeling that should be done, even though no legal difficulties are in the way.

No authority can force factories to be relocated or apartments to be removed from certain areas or industrial settlements to be rebuilt. The only way good conditions can be assured and profitable real estate investments made certain is by careful advance planning.

The value, then, of a preconceived scheme for outlying areas is easily seen. The physical development of Chicago should be effected while the city or any part of the city is in the making.

Trunk Thoroughfares Important.

One feature deserving of attention is that of trunk thoroughfares. When suburban areas are laid out the main arteries within them should be made to connect with the already established trunk streets of the city and made a part of the plan.

As Chicago adds to her area the work should be done thoughtfully. Adequate provision should be made for public buildings. School sites should include ample playground area. The location of parks and athletic fields should be fixed. All lands for public purposes should be acquired as early as possible and so situated as best to serve their varied purposes. Forest reserve areas should be acquired at once, as delay will add to the difficulty of buying them. Water courses should be controlled and given to the utility for which each is fitted—certain banks for parks and others for industry and transportation.

Transit Big Problem.

Attention should be given to the future street car and rapid transit lines as a part of the scheme preceding actual development. Other elements of importance for outlying areas are restrictions as to the location of industries and the regulation of residential areas. Industries should be placed along transportation lines and, so far as possible, on tracts not adapted to residential uses. In some residential areas apartments and multiple family dwellings should be excluded, while to insure the creation of attractive and healthful residential districts proper housing laws should be enacted and proper building restrictions should be imposed upon all areas.

If the outlying areas of Chicago are built up with these ideas kept firmly in mind much of the energy of the community and of its resources, which under the present lack of system are expended in remaking areas which have been developed without regard to hygienic requirements, could then be expended in the improvement and embellishment of suburban areas without increasing the present cost of building without a plan.

THE feature of the week's market probably was the sale, reported late in the week, of the Advertising building and the leasehold interest in the 45½x90 feet of ground on which it stands at 119 West Madison street, on the south side of the street between Clark and La Salle streets. It was sold by Frederick R. Barnheisel, president of H. H. Kohlsaat & Co., to Frank P. Boydston of Boydston Bros., undertakers, the consideration not being disclosed. The purchaser, however, assumed an incumbrance of $230,000 bearing 5 per cent interest and gave a part purchase money mortgage in the form of a serial bond issue bearing 6 per cent, the final payment maturing in 1920. A California orange grove of eighty-six acres also was taken in part payment.

The building is a seventeen story fireproof structure completed less than two years ago, and, as its name implies, is occupied for the greater part by those engaged in the advertising business. It is said to be practically all rented, with a gross annual rent of approximately $70,000. The board of review valued the building at $175,000.

99 Year Lease on Ground.

The ground, which is owned by Michael Burke, is leased for a term of ninety-nine years from May 1, 1912, at a graded rental, beginning with $12,000 a year for the first five years, $13,000 a year for the following five years, and $15,000 for the remaining eighty-nine years of the term.

Reports have been current for some time that a deal for the purchase of the property was on, but that it was hanging fire. Its conclusion is said to have been hastened by the several big deals of the previous week in the downtown district, involving the Fine Arts building on Michigan avenue, the old Atlantic hotel property at Van Buren and Sherman streets, and the Burton property at North State and Lake streets. In point of magnitude and general importance it, of course, cuts a rather small figure as compared with those transactions, but it is an interesting and encouraging transaction just the same.

Sales Stimulate Market.

The fact that the sale is said to have been hastened by the other big transactions noted is particularly interesting and serves to emphasize the point made in this column a week ago that these sales were certain materially to stimulate the market for downtown property, where market conditions have been of a decidedly unfavorable character for a long time. They certainly will stimulate the market if they do not result in an overstimulation of asking prices on the part of owners, which has been the principal handicap against which this market has had to contend for the last year.

There has been plenty of money seeking investment in this class of property, but the reduced earning capacity of the latter because of the depressed general business conditions has made would-be investors feel that some concessions from the high asking prices of a year and a half or two years ago were due them.

Labor Troubles Hurt Business.

The general market just now is suffering from labor troubles, as it was a year ago at this time. Then it was due to the strike of the brickmakers, which practically paralyzed building operations for several weeks, with a consequent slowing up of the movement of property, always the case in a market where purchases are for the greater part being made for improvement purposes.

Three or four weeks ago there was every promise of an unusually good spring market. There was a steady increase in the movement of property, which in its volume began to approximate that of the corresponding period a year ago.

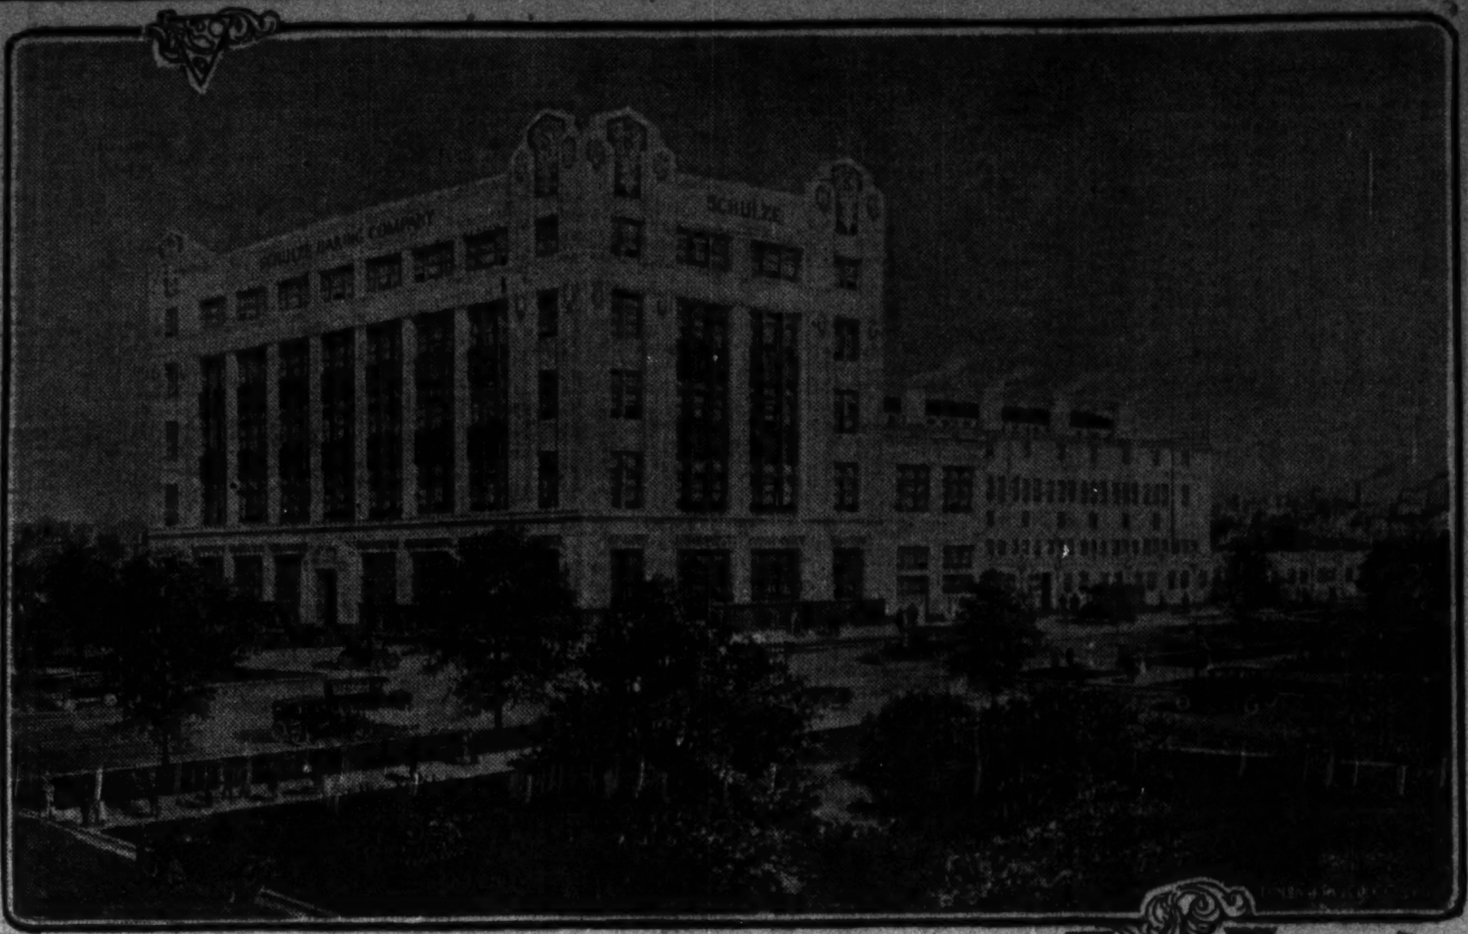
With cheap and abundant money and the generally improved tone in general business circles the outlook was thought to be exceedingly promising. Then the labor trouble began to cast its shadow over the scene, and with it there came a gradual curtailment in building operations as well as land purchases, as those planning to purchase with the purpose of improving naturally decided to keep out of the market until the situation cleared up.

Loan Demand Falls Off.

This situation has been reflected in a greatly decreased demand for building loans, which in many cases had been partially arranged for. This unfortunate situation is bound to continue until it becomes reasonably clear that no serious trouble is likely to materialize.

In spite of this, however, subdividers are busy with their plans for an active season, and sales have been on a surprisingly large scale, considering that the season has hardly yet opened and that many of the plans have not sufficiently matured to enable subdividers to place their properties in an attractive form on the market. A superficial examination of the field, however, warrants the statement that never in the history of the city have so many attractive subdivisions been planned as for the present year.

Modern Bakery Thrown Open Tomorrow.



BEGINNING tomorrow, the new plant of the Schulze Baking company, on Garfield boulevard and Wabash avenue, declared to be one of the largest and most modern baking plants in the United States, will be open to the public. The building, which was designed by John Ahlschlager & Son of Chicago, is declared by visiting bakers to be a model of its kind. It represents an investment of approximately $600,000, and has a frontage of 161 feet on Garfield boulevard, extending 300 feet on Wabash avenue. The stable and garage are on Fifty-fourth street and Wabash avenue. The building has a snow white exterior and a white enamel interior, and presents an exceedingly attractive appearance. The ventilating and humidifying system is exceedingly complete, and in all the details which make for sanitation and manufacturing efficiency it is said to establish a new standard. An interesting feature is the fact the bread is never touched by a human hand during any part of the process of making. From the storage bins the flour is conveyed to the weighing hoppers and dough mixers. Arms of steel knead the dough, after which it is allowed to raise. Finally it goes to the molding machine and to the ovens. It takes sixty-five minutes from the time the dough is mixed until the bread is ready for delivery. During almost the entire process the air of the plant is changed by mechanical means and washed through water, while the humidifying is mechanically operated to a minute variation.

SALE IN HARBOR DISTRICT.

Another noteworthy transaction has been closed in the Chicago harbor terminal district in the sale of the vacant at 361-69 East Ohio street, running through to and including 360-68 East Grand avenue, by Herman H. Thomas of New Orleans to a syndicate formed by Winston & Co., White & Tabor representing the seller. The property has a frontage of 100 feet on each street, having a depth of 218 feet through from street to street. A stated consideration of $62,000 is given, making the sale at the rate of $2.84 a square foot. The property adjoins the Callaghan & Co. building on the west. It is stated that no improvement plans are under consideration at the present time.

WILL BUILD ON FIFTY-FIFTH.

The erection of a store and apartment building on East Fifty-fifth street to cost around $150,000 is involved in connection with the sale of the vacant block on Fifty-fifth street, south front, between Drexel and Ingleside avenues, 220x110 feet. Henry H. Parrott is the grantor, title being taken by Thomas D. O'Hern for an indicated consideration of $32,000, subject to an incumbrance of $18,000.

The purchaser plans to improve with a three story store and flat building to cover the entire frontage to cost in the neighborhood of $150,000.

ACTIVITY SHOWN IN EXTRA HIGH CLASS PROPERTY

Transactions in Top Notch North Side Residences and Flats Market Features.

Transactions in extra high grade north side residence property and in good sized apartment house properties were conspicuous features of the week's market. The north side residence deal was especially interesting, both because of the prominence of the interested parties as well as the valuable character of the property. It covered the property at 1520 North State parkway, in the block between Burton place and North avenue, and it was sold by Charles H. Conover, president of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co., to H. H. Porter, president of the Chicago Transfer Clearing company, for a cash consideration of $95,000.

The property is 200 feet north of Burton place on the west side of the street. The lot fronts 50 feet with a depth of 132 feet and is improved with an attractive three story pressed brick and stone dwelling containing eighteen rooms. There also is a two story brick garage in the rear.

The property is in the block just south of Lincoln park, in which are located the homes of John S. Runnels, John A. Spoor, R. J. Dunham, Mrs. Michael Cudahy, and William Dickinson. The sale was negotiated by Paul Steinbrecher & Co., who represented both parties to the transaction.

South Side Flat Deal.

A noteworthy deal in south side apartment house property, made a matter of record, was the sale by A. F. Anderson to Theodore Linstrum of the twenty-four flat building on Fifty-sixth street, 227 feet west of South Park avenue, with 110x134 feet, south front, for an indicated consideration of practically $80,000, the sale being subject to an incumbrance of $63,423.

The purchaser gave in part payment the twelve flat building at the southeast corner of South Park avenue and Fifty-sixth street, lot 56.5x124 feet, with apartment house improvements, for an indicated consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $23,500. W. E. Meyers & Co. were the brokers.

The old "Vermont" apartment hotel building on East Fifty-first street just east of Cottage Grove avenue, facing Drexel square, figured in a transaction made a matter of record late in the week. The building, which is one of the World's Fair hotels, is an eight story structure on a lot 100x208 feet, south front, 100 feet east of Cottage Grove avenue.

It was sold by Thomas B. Moore to Della N. Halvorsen for an indicated consideration of $91,000, made up of an incumbrance of $70,000 and $21,000 paid for the equity, according to the stamps on the deed.

Addison Street Sale.

The apartment house property at the southeast corner of Addison and Reta streets, lot 125x77 feet, has been sold by John Gerts, trustee, to Philipp Weberl for an indicated consideration of $45,000, subject to an incumbrance of $19,000.

The business property on West Sixty-third street, 25 feet west of Parnell avenue, lot 50x125, north front, with store and flat improvements, has been sold by Nina W. Winston to Vinzens A. Hackel for an indicated consideration of $38,500, subject to an incumbrance of $22,500.

A notable north side deal in this class of property was the sale by John Z. Anderson to Christian M. F. Erickson of the eighteen apartment building at the northwest corner of Glenwood and Foster avenues on a lot 66 2-3x125 feet. A consideration of $10 is given in the transfer, but an incumbrance of $35,500, together with revenue stamps amounting to $33, indicated a consideration of $68,500.

In part payment Mr. Erickson conveyed the property at the southwest corner of Southport avenue and Addison street, lot 50x120 feet, with two story building with stores on the ground floor and flats above, for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000. The sale was negotiated by P. P. Newborg.

Prairie Avenue Transaction.

The fifteen apartment building at the southeast corner of Prairie avenue and Forty-first street, with 80x135 feet of ground, has been sold by William J. Bryer Jr. to Edward J. Kelly of Ottawa, Ill., for an indicated consideration of $70,000, the sale being subject to an incumbrance of $35,000.

The building, which was erected about two years ago, is said to have a gross annual rent of about $7,800. The purchaser gave in part payment a 300 acre farm in Jasper county, Indiana. The sale was negotiated by L. Thomas Kelley with Thomas H. Kelley.

Record has been made of the sale by Mary E. Trunbull to Thomas R. Bishop of the property at the southwest corner of Blackstone avenue and Fifty-sixth street, 100x150 feet, east front, vacant, for a stated consideration of $30,000. The purchaser will improve with a high grade eighteen apartment building, in connection with the construction of which he has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a loan of $65,000, six years at 6 per cent. Willis & Frankenstein were the brokers.

Apartment House Sold.

The apartment house property in Roslyn place, 192 feet east of North Clark street, lot 58x86 feet, north front, has been sold by A. L. Schoeninger to Marie Bereznisk for an indicated consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000.

KEEN RIVALRY FOR CORNER.

The property at the northwest corner of Clark street and Wrightwood avenue, 135x124 feet, was purchased at administration sale for $76,000. The improvements comprise a four story building containing seven stores and twenty-seven apartments with a gross annual rent of about $15,500. The property formerly belonged to Fritz Karste of Ironwood, Wis. There was considerable competition for the property.

Drager & Kramer were the brokers.

Leases and Loans.

AN interesting feature in connection with the downtown renting situation is the spirit of coöperation being shown between owners and tenants. It is a development of the depressed business conditions born of the European war, and it is particularly interesting as an expression of the broader viewpoint being taken of the relations and mutual obligation of landlord and tenant. The movement is not widespread, but in a few instances it is said that leases have been entered into whereby a guaranteed rent is to be paid and a percentage of the profits if there be any beyond a certain point goes to the landlord. It is said that leases of this character have been made in the Republic building.

There was a dearth of important leases during the week, as there was of loans, the inquiry for the latter being reported exceedingly light. The tendency seems to be toward easier conditions, an evidence of which is the report of a good sized outside loan being placed at 5 per cent. One thing that is checking the demand for loans is the trouble in the building trades, which has cut materially into building operations.

Willis & Frankenstein have leased for M. Weil to the L. & M. Manufacturing company the three story and basement building at 319 South Jefferson street for a term from May 1 at $18,000. For Adam Weakley to the Hills-McCanna company the three story building at 152 West Kinzie street for a term from May 1 at at rental of $7,500. For S. M. Becker to William Sullivan company and Goebel & Diesness the three story and basement building at 34 and 36 West Austin avenue, northwest corner of Dearborn street, for a term from May 1 at a rental of $3,600.

Victor Maisen has leased from A. H. Uphoff the three story and basement brick building at 217 West Van Buren street for a saloon, boarding and rooming house for three years from May 1, 1915, at a term rental of $12,000.

The lease has been filed for record by which John Snelling acquired from Christian Buecher the first floor and basement at 3327 to 3331 North Clark street from Sept. 1, 1907, to April 30, 1915, at a term rental of $11,500. This lease was assigned by Snelling to Ernest Hummell Sept. 1, 1907. The lessee has an option of an extension for five years from April 30 of this year at a like rental.

E. M. Griesheimer & Co. report the following leases:

For Elmer E. Beach to Alexander & Ennes, one story building at 2411 South Michigan avenue for a term of years at a gross rental of $15,000.

For the Central Realty and Investment company to S. Katsch the store at 2904 South Michigan avenue for a term of years at a rental of $5,000 for the term.

For John C. Long to Elmer Granat the store at 1509 South Michigan avenue for a term of years at a rental of $15,000 for the term.

A. J. Montague & Son have recently closed a lease for the New Century company on the one story building at 2850 South Union avenue to the Safricon company for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $6,000.

Jesse H. Goss, in the employ of McKey & Poague for several years, has taken over the business established by the late W. H. Bean, and under the name of the Woodlawn Realty company has opened an office at 1362 East Sixty-third street.

TWO BIG TRADES IN ACRES MARK WEEK'S REALTY DEALS

Two interesting acre deals in the outlying southwest and south parts of the city were closed late in the week by W. D. Kerfoot & Co. One comprises the tract of 36.56 acres bounded by the Grand Trunk railway right of way, Fifty-first street, Rockwell street, and California avenue, which Kerfoot & Co. sold for Mrs. Melvina W. Thompson of Pittsburgh, Pa., title being taken by the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee. The sale is stated to have been on the basis of $1,500 an acre, which would make the total consideration $54,848.90.

It is proposed to subdivide it at once into thirty foot residence lots and twenty-five foot business lots and put in cement walks and city water. Kerfoot & Co. will have charge of the property.

The same brokers have sold for the National Bank of Kentucky of Louisville, Ky., to Jacob S. Hoviand and Della M. Hoviand a tract of 120 acres at the southeast corner of Fortieth avenue and One Hundred and Third street for a stated consideration of $27,000, which is at the rate of $225 an acre. The property is bounded by One Hundred and Third street, Central Park avenue, One Hundred and Fifth street, Hamlin avenue, One Hundred and Seventh street, and Fortieth avenue.

It is stated the purchasers will subdivide the tract into five acre lots and will offer it on the market. Horace E. Bent represented Mr. and Mrs. Hoviand in the transaction.

Another west side acre deal comprises a tract of 52.56 acres on West Twenty-second street, just west of Lyman avenue, Proviso township, which was sold by Frederick C. Stevens to Lambert K. and Minnie Vegter for a reported consideration of $10,566. The sale was negotiated by H. G. Howard & Co.

BUYS IN HIGHLAND PARK.

A notable deal in high class residence property in Highland Park was the purchase by Donald S. Trumbull, associated with the legal firm of Judah, Willard, Wolf & Reichman, from Mrs. Gertrude H. Lamborn, widow of Dr. William H. Lamborn, the residence property on Sheridan road and Maple avenue, the consideration being withheld. The dwelling is an attractive stucco structure erected by George W. Maher. The sale was negotiated by J. L. Floyd.

mated $4,000,000.

Two of the long term leases
the Sixty-third street and street districts, the latter property at the northwest corner of teed street, and it is especially ing for the reason that capitalizing ground rent on a 5 per cent basis leasing value of $1,920 a front foot over $18.16 a square foot, record for this neighborhood.

The Sixty-third street property
southeast corner of Green street, was leased on the basis of nearly front foot for the Sixty-third street age, capitalizing the average ground on a 5 per cent basis.

Furniture Dealer Lease.

The property, which fronts
on Sixty-third street, with a depth
125 feet on Green street, was leased
Harry L. Irwin and wife,
Phillips Bros. & Weil, furniture with three stores in different parts city, for a term of ninety-nine years
May 1 next at an annual rental of the first two years, $4,500 for the ing ten years, and $5,000 for the

The Hudson First Surmounted All These Barriers to Sixes

Look back four years, please—to the time when Howard E. Coffin started to design this HUDSON.

Every Six was a high priced car.

Every Six was a heavy car.

Every Six was costly in tires, in fuel, in upkeep. All men envied, but few could enjoy, the luxury of Sixes.

Note Conditions Now

Then came this new-type HUDSON, weighing under 3000 pounds. Price, fuel and tire cost were cut practically in two.

Motordom fairly gasped. And they said, you know, that such things were impossible in a sturdy, high-grade car.

Look now where the Light Six stands. It dominates the field above $1000. It is almost taken for granted, when one speaks of a class car, that it is of this HUDSON type.

Remember that as one contribution which HUDSON engineers made to motoring. They opened the gates to Sixes.

10,000 Now Running
All Doubters Won Over

Most motorists, we think, never doubted that this new-type car was right. It was a Howard E. Coffin creation—a HUDSON—and that was assurance enough. They bought hundreds before they saw it. Then they came by the thousands. For one whole year we kept weeks behind on orders, while we multiplied our output by five.

Now more than 10,000 are running. In the past two seasons they have covered millions of miles. If there are now any doubters, there are owners near by to say, "HUDSON is perfect—it's my ideal car."

Others May Be Right

Other Light Sixes among the newcomers may prove themselves right in time. But HUDSON has proved already. It's an attained success. Its designers had a four-year start. In a hundred ways it is better than when new, just as other new cars will be bettered.

The HUDSON is a finished production. Every touch and detail shows this. It is the lightest 7-passenger Six. And it stands preeminent in most minds, we think, as the class car of this type.

Inquiry and comparison will point you to the HUDSON. This car is certainly right. No car ever built is a safer investment. And men who take pride in their cars like to say, "My car is a HUDSON."

Our dealers are everywhere.

The HUDSON Company never loses interest in the cars it sells. So long as a car is in service we maintain our interest in the character of its service. That's one great reason for HUDSON reputation.

We have dealers everywhere—These are a few in your vicinity

The Menace of Militarism

By David Starr Jordan

Chancellor of Leland Stanford University

THAT Preparedness for War is Insurance for Peace is a sophistry no less specious than insulting to the intelligence of civilization. The only insurance for peace rests in the removal of war incentives and in the education of the people to think in terms of peace when international differences have been created. There is no conceivable difference between nations that cannot be amicably settled, if both sides mean to be fair. There is no possible degree of military preparedness that will prevent war, if one or both sides are bent on war, or if militarism is opposed by militarism only. To have peace we must cease to discuss our differences with other nations in terms of war.

The American people have entire confidence in the General Staff of the Army and in the councils of the navy, in matters relating to their own fields of activity. It does not demand nor expect from them the exercise of statesmanship.

It has less confidence in a General Staff of Peace Adjustment because such a staff does not exist. Such a commission, reasonably permanent, would surely ome as weighty and important as the Supreme Court of the ion. But neither the United tes nor any other nation has de provision for it. Such a mmission could find work at e. It could apply itself to moving incentives to trouble. could take the chips from Uncle m's shoulder. It could revise Monroe Doctrine, that it might nd as Monroe left it, or better, t it be shared with South erica. It could then become doctrine of co-operation for tual interests instead of a ronizing irritation to the couns it was designed to protect. s commission could safeguard relations with Japan against meddling of those who profit making trouble. It could re that our present Red Cross tion to Europe shall not be dified by falsehoods and reds of the "exploiters and ters" on either side. If such eneral staff of peace were a gnized part of our government, should have less fear of war parations at home. For at e and from within lies the f danger of war. We have er had a foreign war we did initiate. We have never been anger of war except from the duct of our own people.

OKING abroad, the war in Europe is at bottom a struggle between rival armaments. pe was spending $10,000,000 more every day, every dollar rted in the sacred name of e, and every dollar called ance against war, every r yielding large profits to ers of armament. And certainly the experience of Europe has shown that no increase or armament can make for peace. It may make for victory if a war is on. But at the same time it makes for war, for victory comes only after war.

The cause of militarism is twofold. It lies in the formation, as in Continental Europe, of a military caste made up of men who have never soiled their hands with other stains than blood, who regard their trade as superior to all civil professions, and who hold in contempt common soldiers and civilians. The other element is that of Universal Conscription, by which every man is made to bear arms. And no nation in which every man is a soldier can keep its senses.

Every effort to make military service compulsory, in whatever guise, is an attack on personal liberty. In its degree it is a menace of militarism. The Army Leagues and Navy Leagues, in Europe, are the most effective adjuncts of the Krupps, Vickers, Armstrongs, Schneiders, who, with their combinations, satellites, and tentacles have permeated Europe and Asia as makers of madness. And the transfer to America of a share in the inordinate profits of war trading is not void of danger, though the United States is in no present jeopardy from any quarter. If, however, any belligerent nation should invade our rights, the remedy would be in diplomacy or arbitration, not in war nor in rumor of war. Bernard Shaw, in a lucid interval, tells us that nations are like bees: as they sting they die. The nations of Europe are stinging and dying; and it is extremely improbable that they will recover to our hurt for generations. Our relation to them belongs to the Red Cross, not to the firing line.

THESE facts seem to be beyond denial: All naval powers except Italy are now engaged in a life and death struggle, leading toward mutual exhaustion. All are eagerly cultivating the friendship of the United States. No attack from any of these is conceivable and such an attack would be suicidal. The dreadnaught type of ship is still on trial, and for purposes of marine defense we may wait for the lessons of this war. The whole system of militarism is on trial. The civilization of Europe can be maintained only by the suppression of its armies. Before this war began the nations were apparently ready for an agreement to insure the immunity of merchant and passenger ships at sea—to make the sea the open highway of commerce would abolish navalism and its business of legalized piracy. For the United States, the safest of nations, to consider at such a time the increase of her own armaments would indicate a most untimely readiness to intensify the very evil whose consequences now appall us and tend to check the great movement which all governments and all earnest men should unite to promote.

is the finishing touch to the architectural and landscape perfection of elaborate grounds—it is "the one thing needful" to confirm the artistic character of a modest homestead—and it may be relied upon to redeem and beautify even the smallest yard, or one that is lacking in natural advantages.

CYPRESS, "the Wood Eternal," is the pre-eminent pergola wood because "CYPRESS lasts forever"—DEFIES ROT-INFLUENCES which destroy most other woods—does not warp, shrink or swell like most woods—takes paint and stain perfectly but does not need either (See Govt Rept., in "Vol. 1").

Vol. 40 of the Cypress Pocket Library (entirely new) contains SKETCHES, DETAILED WORKING DRAWINGS (on sheet 24 x 36 inches) and FULL SPECIFICATIONS for erecting five new and original designs for beautiful and practical PERGOLAS and one COLONIAL ENTRANCE, all easily built and costing from a few dollars up to several hundreds. Not "Stock patterns"—each was SPECIALLY DESIGNED for us. WRITE TODAY for Vol. 40.

THE WAR AND THE TRADE WINDS

BY AGNES C. LAUT

DECORATION BY G. W. HARTING

WHAT'S all this talk of a new era in American trade? Will it reduce the Bread Line? Will it fill the empty dinner pail? Will it render impossible the monstrous anomaly of armies of unemployed in a land of plenty—three hundred and fifty thousand unemployed in New York alone? Will it set the factories to work that are closed, and work those factories full time that are now on half time, and put full crews back on the train? Will it tighten up the general slackness? That is what all this general talk of a new era means to the average man and the average woman; and if it will, what is to be done; and how is that to be done?

Said James A. Farrell, President of the U. S. Steel Corporation, "One week of war did more than ten years of academic discussion to convince people that foreign trade is vital to domestic prosperity."

Said Judge Gary, chairman of the same corporation, "If this country takes advantage of its present opportunities, the extreme optimist of today will be considered conservative in ten years."

Said Mr. Schwab, "The era of prosperity is already on the way."

Said Secretary Redfield, "The whole world is coming to America now." Even Paul Warburg, now a member of the Federal Reserve and guardedly reticent, affirmed the likelihood of this country becoming the solar centre of a new world finance.

What do all these men mean? Is it hot-air and punk? There is not a man of them who does not weigh his words like fine gold. There is not a man of them who has not made good on the job he is talking about; and he has made good from the ground up.

But "What do you think of this coming prosperity?" I asked a hotel porter who was blacking my boots.

"Devil a bit I see of it for me," he said.

So there you are! The hotel porter and the millions out of work do not see it. The big fellows who usually employ millions do see it. Who is shortsighted, or who is longsighted, or is it a pipe dream? The big-wigs and the high-brows who stir up facts till they are muddy with figures have straddled both sides of the dispute since the War began.

Here is cotton, they cried, slumped from twelve cents to six when War broke out, representing a loss to the South of a million a day. But while they cried and while the banks hustled to save the South with a cotton pool, up went prices within two cents of normal; and by the time the bankers had their loan ready, the South didn't need it; so that the loss in cotton was one that did not materialize to the nation as a whole.

"Wheat sixty cents a bushel," said Chicago, when War was declared and the Agricultural Department had announced the biggest crop for ten years. But as it became apparent that the sea lanes were to be kept open to commerce, up jumped wheat from seventy-five cents in the West to $1.65, a sheer gain of almost $1 a bushel on the 300,000,000 bushels America has to export.

Financiers were in a great quandary how America was to pay its debts to Europe in gold. While they worried, excess demands for American products from the warring countries paid all those debts and reversed the flow of gold back to America in a tide of unprecedented volume.

ALL this does not sound like hot-air. You can hardly imagine the National City Bank, New York, setting aside a million dollars to open trade with South America for the sake of hot-air; and in Chicago a corporation with a capital of two millions has been formed to sell Middle-West manufactures abroad.

"Exports unable to obtain cargo space?" retorted the largest character of foreign ships in the United States. "We are running one hundred and forty ships compared to a dozen a few years ago; and I have just received a cable from Italy that explains the seeming shortage of cargo space. It is a risk and insurance and delay not lack of space, that now hamper export trade. Outside Genoa is, at this writing, a blockade of one hundred and twenty ships with American cargoes unable to go inside, so great is the delay from congestion. When I tell you that for a 5,000-ton ship 5,000 miles to a port anywhere not in Europe, our freight total is about $50,000, compared to a 5,000-ton ship 3,000 to 4,000 miles to some port in Europe earning $120,000 and that the latter ship cost us in delay $600 a day, you will know there are more factors than space in this jump of rates on the Atlantic in wartime."

But this new era in American trade is more than a sudden boom of war exports. If that were all, the boom would pass with the passing of the War and the new era would matter little to the hotel porter or any one else. That is not what these big men had been planning ten years before the War. The War has simply opened wide the door of opportunity on which they have been knocking for admission. It is more than War.

It is more than export trade. It is a silent transfer to America from Europe of two tremendous factors in prosperity. The world is buying from Uncle Sam what it formerly bought from Europe, and Uncle Sam is making for himself what he formerly bought from Europe. Sounds too far away to be visualized, but bring it down to terms of everyday life.

Take lace and lingerie, which touch the life of every woman and affect the livelihood of multitudes of woman workers, the spinner, the weaver, the dressmaker, the saleswoman, the white goods worker. Formerly, Uncle Sam shipped two-thirds of his big cotton crop abroad in raw shape; then bought back a large portion of that raw crop manufactured into goods by England and France and Germany and Belgium. In the days when Sully was regnant on the Cotton Exchange, where one dollar's worth of cotton manufactured into goods went abroad, the United States bought back its own cotton, manufactured into cloth by foreign nations, at a price several thousands per cent higher than it was originally sold. Lace is one of the high priced forms in which cotton came back. So is fine underwear. Now Uncle Sam is a lavish spender on those high priced forms of his own native cotton. It so happens that the War has laid waste those very sections in France and Belgium where whole populations were given over to lace making. The case is almost as bad with Bulgarian and Roumanian lace makers. Why not make lace at home? Importers were at their wit's end when the War broke out. Experts were sent across the Atlantic to buy up the smashed lace machinery of France and Belgium and to learn how to operate it, and these importing houses are now manufacturing their French and Belgium laces in New York and New Jersey.

THE same thing has happened in watch crystals, in dyes and chemicals, in photographic supplies, in pottery, in cork, in toys, in perfumes, in medicines, in gloves. Within two months of the great slump in the price of cotton, nine new cotton mills of very large capacity were opened in various sections of the South. Instead of "buy a bale," the slogan became "spin it." Hitherto, for every bale of cotton manufactured, England has exported $147 worth, France $69, Germany $58, and Uncle Sam, who raises two-thirds of all the cotton in the world, only $9. If the War lasts, it is inevitable that these figures shall be almost reversed. Uncle Sam grows two-thirds of the cotton in the world. He exports only five per cent of all the manufactured cotton used. Europe, which raises almost no cotton, supplies ninety per cent of the manufactured cotton used in the world.

In the past our main idea has been to manufacture what we have needed; but if there is one thing more than another thoroughly learned it is that in order to keep prosperity on an even keel, not subject to the caprice of jumps up and bumps back, of booms and dumps, in order to keep the factory running full time and not eating its head off in slack years, there must be an opening on the foreign market.

Germany understood this keenly as far back as thirty years ago. The very War party now dominant, declared openly they must have foreign colonies in China, in Brazil, the South Seas, anywhere. "We desire it at any price, a German land with a German population of twenty to thirty millions. Whether it becomes an independent state or not is a matter of indifference. Without trade connections, our national development is threatened with failure."

What does that mean? Put it like lace in terms of the every-day.

Take farm machinery. As long as a state is unsupplied, the factory runs full blast to supply the demand in its home state; but the supply is faster than the demand. When that home state is fully supplied, the factory must run slack time till the customers have worn out their machinery; or the factory must look over the line for fresh territory in another state. When all the states are supplied, it must run slack time till the customers have worn out their machinery or it must look for fresh territory in a foreign country. If it doesn't find vent abroad, at the first breath of dull times, poor crops, tight money, when people do not renew machinery, the factory must run half time or close, which works a hardship on the man in industrial life.

In the United States, this has been the case with farm implements, sewing machines, electrical supplies, steel products, cash devices, typewriters, motors, watches, twine and a hundred other manufactures. The manufacturers of these articles did not ramp abroad to scream "my country 'tis of thee" on top of a flag pole. They went abroad for a market because my countryman "'twas of them" they would have been without a job; and when factories employ from ninety thousand to two hundred and fifty thousand operatives, as several do, out of work means as great ruin as earthquake or war. There is not the slightest doubt that right in the United States today, owing to (Continued on page 411)

THE old canal lay dreaming under the autumn sun, tranquil between its green banks and its two rows of stiffly-trimmed, bordering poplars. Once a busy highway for barges, it was now little more than a great drainage ditch, with swallows and dragonflies darting and flashing over its seldom-ruffled surface. Scattered here and there over the flat, green meadows beyond its containing dykes, fat cows lay lazily chewing the cud.

It was a scene of unmarred peace. To the cows nothing could have seemed more impregnable than their security. Off southwestward and southward, to be sure, the horizon was columned, decoratively but ominously, by pillars of dense smoke, sharp against the turquoise sky. But such phenomena, however novel, failed to stir the cows to even the mildest curiosity. The spacious summer air, however, was entertaining a strange riot of noises. It thumped, and throbbed, and thundered. It seemed to be ripped across, from time to time, with a dry, leisurely sound of tearing. Again it would be suddenly shattered with enormous, earth-shaking crashes. But all this foolish tumult was in the distance, and it gave the cows not the slightest concern. It had not interfered with the excellent quality of the pasturage. It had not disturbed the regularity of milking time.

Strategically considered, the lazy old canal led from nowhere to nowhere, and the low levels through which it ran were aside from the track of the fighting. The peasant folk on their little farms still went about their business, but very quietly, and with lowered voices, as if hoping thus to avoid the eye of Fate.

Along the grass-grown tow-path, marching in half sections, came a tiny detachment of long-coated Belgian riflemen, with a machine gun. The deadly little weapon, on its two-wheeled toy-carriage, was drawn by a pair of sturdy, brindled dogs—mongrels, evidently, showing a dash of bull and a dash of retriever in their make-up. They were not as large as the dogs usually employed by the Belgians in this kind of service. But they were strong, and keen on their job. Digging their strong toes into the turf they threw their weight valiantly into the straps, and pressed on with tongues hanging out and what looked like a cordial grin on their panting jaws. They seemed desperately afraid of being left behind by their quick-marching comrades.

THE little band kept well under the trees as they went, lest some far-scouting aeroplane should catch sight of them. In the southeastern sky, presently, an aeroplane—a Taube—did appear, but it was so distant that the young lieutenant in command of the detachment, after examining it carefully with his field-glasses, concluded that it was little likely to detect his dark line moving under the trees. The Taube, that execrated Dove of Death, was spying over the Belgian trenches, and doubtless daring a hot fire from the Belgian rifles. Once it made a wide sweep northwestward, rapidly growing larger; and the little band under the trees lay down, hiding themselves and the gun behind the dyke. Then its flight swerved back over the Belgian lines; and the commander, lowering his glasses with a deep breath of relief, gave the order to march. Two minutes later, around the questing aeroplane appeared a succession of sudden, fleecy puffs of smoke, looking soft and harmless as cotton wool. One of these came just before the nose of the aeroplane. Next moment the machine gave a great swooping dive, righted itself, dived again, and dropped like a stone.

"Thank God for that," muttered the young lieutenant; and his men cheered grimly, under their breath.

Three minutes later the detachment came to an old stone bridge. Here it halted. The men began hastily entrenching themselves, where they could best command the approaches on the other side. The machine gun, lifted from its little carriage, was placed cunningly behind a screen of reeds. The two dogs, panting, lay down in their harness under a thick bush. In an amazingly brief time the whole party was so hidden that no one approaching from the other side of the canal could have guessed there was anything more formidable in the neighborhood than the ruminating cows.

THE neglected, almost forgotten, old bridge had suddenly leapt into importance. Reinforcements for the sore-pressed division to the southeast were being sent around by the north of the canal, and were to cross by the bridge. The detachment had been sent to guard the bridge at all costs from any wide-roving patrols of Uhlans, who might take it into their heads to blow it up. In war it is a pretty safe principle to blow up any bridge if you are quite sure you won't be wanting it yourself. The fact that the other side has spared it is enough to damn it offhand.

The tumult of the far-off gun-fire was so unremitting that the ears of the bridge-guard gradually came to accept it as a mere background, against which small, insignificant sounds, if sudden and unexpected, became strangely conspicuous. The crowing of a cock in the farmyard a few fields off, the sharp cry of a moor-hen, the spasmodic gabbling of a flock of fat ducks in the canal—these small noises were almost as clearly differentiated as if heard in a stark silence.

For perhaps an hour the detachment had lain concealed, when those ominous pillars of smoke against the sky were joined suddenly by swarms of the little white puffs of cotton wool, and the confused noises redoubled in violence. The battle was swaying nearer, and spreading around a swiftly widening arc of the low horizon. Then another aeroplane—another bird-like Taube—came in view, darting up from a little south of west. The young lieutenant, in his hiding-place beside the bridge-head, clapped his glasses anxiously to his eyes. Yes, the deadly flier was heading straight for this position. Evidently the Germans knew of that out-of-the-way bridge, and in their eyes also, for some reason, it had suddenly acquired importance. The Taube was coming to see in what force it was held.

"Spies, again!" he grunted savagely, turning to explain to his men.

Flying at a height of only five or six hundred metres, the Taube flew straight over them. There was no longer any use in attempting concealment. The riflemen opened fire upon it furiously as soon as it came within range. It was hit several times; but the Taube is a steel machine, well protected from below, and neither the pilot nor any vital part of the mechanism was damaged. It made haste, however, to climb and swerve away from so hot a neighborhood. But first, as a message of defiance it dropped a bomb. The bomb fell sixty or seventy yards away from the bridge, back in the meadow, among a group of cows. The explosion killed one cow, and wounded several. The survivors, thus rudely shocked out of their indifference, stampeded off down the field, tails in air, and bellowing frantically.

"That cooks our goose," snapped one of the riflemen concisely.

"Their shells'll be dead onto us in ten minutes' time," growled another. And all cursed soberly.

"I don't think so!" said the young lieutenant, after a moment's hesitation. "They want the bridge; so they won't shell it. But you'll see they'll be onto us shortly with their mitrailleuse, and half a battalion or so, enough to eat us up. We've got to get word back quick to the General, for reinforcements, or the game's up."

"I'LL go, my lieutenant!" said Jean Ferreol, an eager, dark Walloon, springing to his feet.

The lieutenant did not answer for some moments. He was examining through his glasses a number of mounted figures, scattering over the plains to the rear in groups of two and three. Yes, they were Uhlans unquestionably. The line of combat was shifting eastward.

"No," said he, "you can't go, Jean. You'd never get through. The Bosches are all over the place back there, now. And you wouldn't be in time, even if you did get through. I'll send one of the dogs."

He tore a leaf out of his note-book and began scribbling.

"Better send both dogs, my Lieutenant," said Jan Steen, the big broad-built Fleming who had

He picked himself up again and hobbled forward charge of the machine-gun, unharnessing the dogs as he spoke. "Leo's the cleverest, and he'll carry the message right; but he won't have his heart in the job unless you let Dirck go along with him. They're like twins. Moreover, the two together wouldn't excite suspicion like one alone. One alone the Bosches would take for a messenger dog sure. But two racing over the grass might seem to be just playing."

"Bon," said the young lieutenant. "Two strings to our bow."

He hurriedly made a duplicate of his despatch. The papers were folded small and tied under the dogs' collars. Big Jan spoke a few words crisply and decisively, in Flemish, to Leo, who watched his lips eagerly and wagged his tail as if to show he understood. Then he spoke similarly, but with more emphasis and reiteration, to Dirck, at the same time waving his arm toward the distant group of roofs from which the detachment had come. Dirck looked anxiously at him, and whined, and then glanced inquiringly at Leo, to see if he understood what was required of them. He was almost furiously willing, but not so quick to catch an idea as his more lively yoke-fellow. Big Jan repeated his injunctions yet again, with unhurried patience, while his leader fumed behind him. Jan Steen knew well that with a dog, in such circumstances, one must be patient though the skies fall. At last Dirck's grin widened, his tail wagged violently, and his low whining gave way to a bark of elation.

"He's got it," said Jan with slow satisfaction. He waved his arm, and the two dogs dashed off as if they had been shot out of a gun, keeping close along the inner base of the dyke.

"Dirck's got it," repeated Jan with conviction, "and nothing will put it out of his head till he's done the job."

SIDE by side, racing wildly like children just let out from school, the two dogs dashed off through the grass along the base of the dyke. Leo, the lighter in build and in color, and the more conspicuous by reason of a white fore-leg, was also the lighter in spirits. Glad to be clear of the harness, and proud of his errand, he was so ebullient in his gaiety that he could spare time to spring into the air now and again and snap at a low-fluttering butterfly. The more phlegmatic Dirck, on the other hand, was too busy keeping his errand fixed in his mind to waste any interest on butterflies, though he was ready enough to gambol a bit whenever his volatile comrade frolicked into collision with him.

Soon—Leo leading as usual—they quitted the dyke and started off across the open meadows toward the hottest of the firing. A couple of patrolling Uhlans, some distance off to the right, caught sight of them, and a bullet whined complainingly just over their heads. But the other Uhlan, the one who had not fired, rebuked his companion for wasting ammunition. "Can't you see they're just a couple of puppies, larking around?" he asked scornfully. "Suppose you thought they were Red Cross."

"Thought they might be despatch-dogs, Herr Sergeant," answered the trooper deprecatingly.

"Well, they're not, blockhead," grunted the cocksure sergeant. And the two rode on, heading diagonally toward the canal.

The dogs, at the sound of the passing bullet, had crouched flat to the ground. When the sound was not repeated, however, they sprang up and continued their journey—Leo, excited but not terrified, more inclined to frolic than ever, while Dirck, who by some obscure instinct had realized that the shot was not a chance one but a direct personal attack, kept looking back and growling at the pair of Uhlans.

But though Leo, the exuberant, gambolled as he ran, he ran swiftly none the less, so swiftly that plodding Dirck had some trouble to keep up with him. Ten minutes more and they ran into the zone of fire. Bullets hummed waspishly over them, but, after a moment's hesitation, they raced on, flattening themselves belly-to-earth. The German infantry were in position, quite hidden from view, some six or seven hundred yards to the right. They were firing at an equally invisible line of Belgians, who were occupying a drainage ditch some three hundred yards to the left. The two dogs had no way of knowing that the force on their left was a friendly one, so they kept straight on beneath the cross-fire. Had they only known, their errand might have been quickly accomplished.

A LITTLE further on the grass land came to an end, and there was a naked, sun-baked stubble-field. As the two raced out over this perilous open space the battle deepened above them. The fire from the Belgian side went high over the dogs' heads, seeking the far-off target of the enemy's prostrate lines. But the German fire was sighted for too close a range, and the bullets were falling short. Here and there one struck with a vicious spat close to the runners' feet. Here and there a small stone would fly into the air with a sudden, inexplicable impulse, or a bunch of stubble would hop up as if startled from its roothold. A ball just nicked the extreme tip of Dirck's tail, making him think a hornet had stung him. With a surprised yelp he turned and bit at his supposed assailant. Realizing his mistake in a second he dropped the injured member sheepishly and tore on after Leo several paces ahead.

Next second a shrapnel shell burst overhead with a shattering roar. Both dogs cowered flat, shivering. There was a smart patter all about them, and little spurts of dust, straw, and dry earth darted upward. The shrapnel shell was doubtless a mere stray, an ill-calculated shot exploding far from its target. But to Leo it seemed a direct attack upon himself. And well he knew what was the proper thing to do under such circumstances. Partly by instruction, partly by natural sagacity, he had assimilated the vital precept—"When the firing gets too hot, dig yourself in." With his powerful fore-paws he attacked the stubble, making the dry earth fly as if he were trying to dig out a badger. Dirck watched him wonderingly for a moment or two, till a venomous swarm of bullets just over his head seemed to let light in upon his understanding. He fell to copying Leo with vehement enthusiasm. In brief space each dog had a burrow deep enough to shelter him. Dirck promptly curled himself up in his, and fell to licking his wounded tail. But Leo, burning to get on with his errand, kept popping up his head every other second to see how the bullets were striking.

Another shrapnel shell burst in the air, but further away than the first, and Leo marked where the little spurts of dust arose. They were well behind him. The rifle bullets pinging overhead were higher now, as the Germans were getting the range of the Belgian line. The coast seemed clear enough. He scrambled from his hole and dashed onward down the field, yelping for Dirck to follow. And Dirck was at his heels in half a second.

The tiny canal-side village which was the goal of these two devoted messengers was by this time less than a mile away, and straight ahead. When they left it, with the machine-gun, that morning, it had seemed a little haven of peace. Now the battle was raging all about it. The tall church spire which had risen serenely above its embosoming trees had vanished, blown off by a shell. A cottage was burning merrily. Those harmless looking puffs of cotton wool were opening out plenteously above the clustered roofs. But all these things made no difference to these two four-footed despatch bearers who carried the destiny of the bridge beneath their collars. They had been ordered to take their despatches to the village; and to the village they would go, whether it had become an inferno or not.

BUT now the spectacle of the two dogs racing desperately toward the village under the storm of lead and shell had caught the attention of both sides. There was no mistaking them now for frolicsome puppies. There was no question, either, as to which side they belonged to. The German bullets began to lash the ground like hail all about them. Leo, true to his principles, stopped at a tiny depression and once more, with feverish eagerness, began to dig himself in. The earth flew from his desperate paws. In another minute he would have achieved something like cover. But a German sharpshooter got the range of him exactly. A bullet crashed through his sagacious brain; and he dropped, with his muzzle between his legs, into his half-dug burrow.

But Dirck, meanwhile, had for once refused to follow his leader's example. His goal was too near. He saw the familiar uniforms. Above the din he could detect the cries and calls of encouragement from his people. Every faculty in his valiant and faithful being bent itself to the accomplishment of his errand. The bullets raining about him concerned him not at all. The crash of a shrapnel shell just over him did not even make him cock an eye skyward. The shrapnel bullets raised jets of dust before and behind him, and on either (Continued on page 410)

ROOFS

By Joyce Kilmer

THE road is wide and the stars are out and the breath of the night is sweet,
And this is the time when wanderlust should seize upon my feet.
But I'm glad to turn from the open road and the starlight on my face,
And to leave the splendor of out-of-doors for a human dwelling place.

I never have seen a vagabond who really liked to roam
All up and down the streets of the world and not to have a home.
The tramp who slept in your barn last night and left at break of day
Will wander only until he finds another place to stay.

A gypsy-man will sleep in his cart with canvas overhead;
Or else he'll go into his tent when it is time for bed.
He'll sit on the grass and take his ease so long as the sun is high,
But when it is dark he wants a roof to keep away the sky.

If you call the gypsy a vagabond, I think you do him wrong,
For he never goes a-travelling but he takes his home along.
And the only reason a road is good, as every wanderer knows,
Is just because of the homes, the homes, the homes to which it goes!

They say that life is a highway and its milestones are the years,
And now and then there's a toll-gate where you buy your way with tears.
It's a rough road and a steep road and it stretches broad and far,
But it leads at last to a golden Town where golden Houses are.

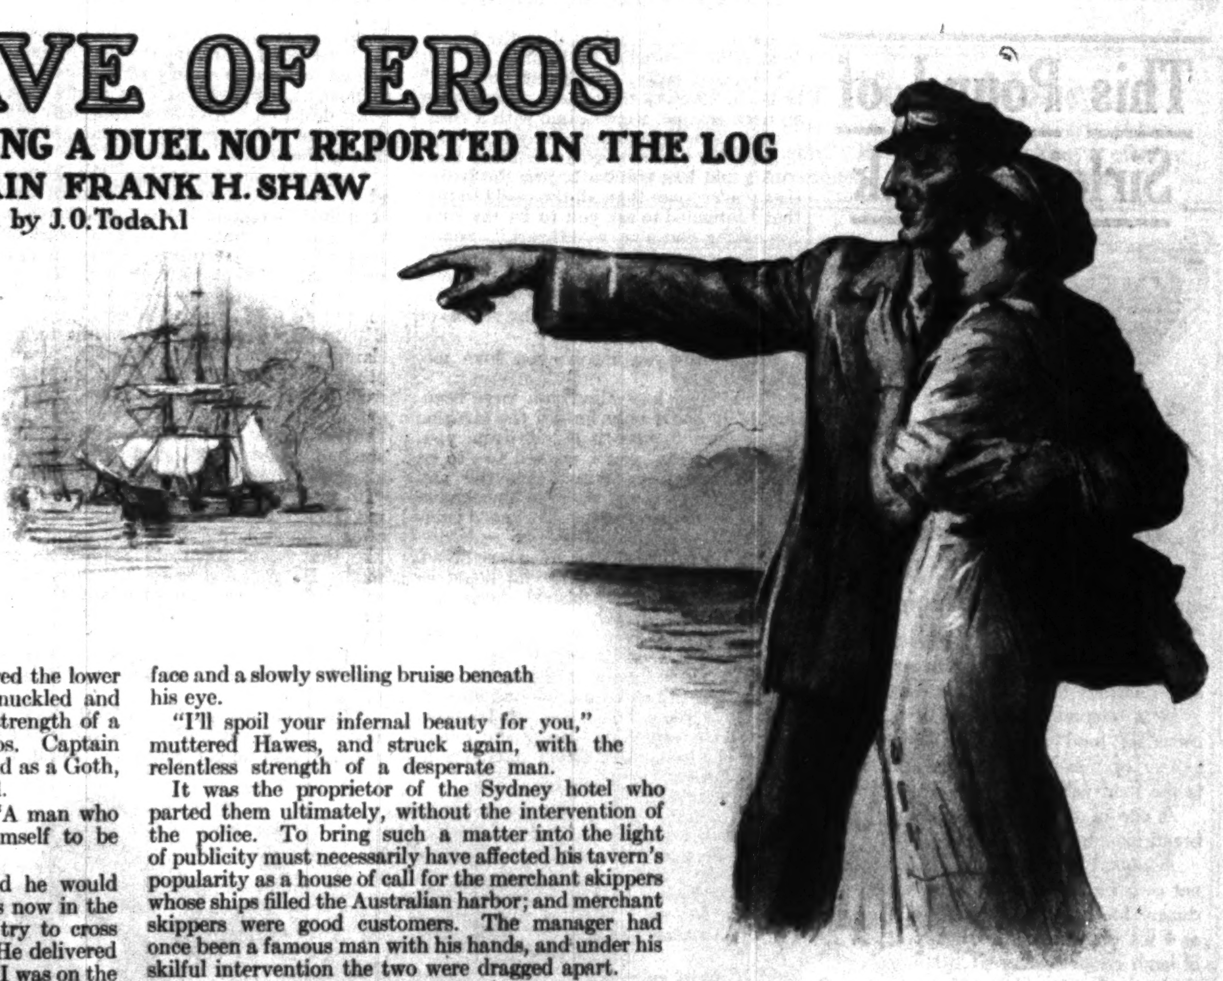
A SLAVE OF EROS

CONCERNING A DUEL NOT REPORTED IN THE LOG

BY CAPTAIN FRANK H. SHAW

Illustrations by J. O. Todahl



THE glasses on the table jingled as Captain Hawes' fist crashed down. The pert barmaid behind the polished bar looked up from her penny novelette, but there was nothing unusual in the sight of two brown-faced men engaged in hot argument, for sailors are controversialists to the marrow, and will split thin hairs on points of seamanship.

"I warn you to keep off in that quarter," said Hawes, thrusting his jaw forward and glaring out of deep-set, baleful eyes. He was a squat-figured man, a close-cropped beard covered the lower half of his face; his fingers were big-knuckled and gnarled; a man who might possess the strength of a gorilla and the blind courage of a rhinoceros. Captain Benedict, lighter built, youthful and blond as a Goth, shrugged his sinewy shoulders and smiled.

"I shall please myself," he observed "A man who calls himself a man doesn't allow himself to be dictated to in such matters as this."

"I'll dictate!" If Hawes had shouted he would not have been so fraught with menace as now in the moment of his tense repression. "You try to cross my hawse and you'll be a sorry man." He delivered it with all the weight of an ultimatum. "I was on the ground first, and until you showed up—until you showed up, she—she—" His collar strangled him, he thrust strong fingers between linen and flesh and tore away the compression. "I'm not an easy man to cross, mark you. No man's ever done me a dirty trick without my getting even with him sooner or later."

"No need to strangle about it, is there? Rotten manners, and in a public place, too. Anyway, we might spare our breath; she's the one to decide. A girl can dispose of her—her love, in whatever direction she thinks fit. But I'm not going to chuck up the sponge, so don't think it. And if that's all you have to say about it, I'm off."

Hawes stared at his rival and maybe a consciousness of his own shortcomings gripped him. What chance could he, ugly and warped as he was, have against this dashing Apollo of the seas, this clean-faced, long-limbed sea-fighter whose smile won him friends in every port? Something blazed into his soul; a mad desire to smash in the man's face, to destroy his beauty forever, to leave him lying, crushed and mangled, an object of pity and derision.

"You—!" he panted, and struck suddenly, all his destroyed hopes behind the blow.

"Go away—quick—we can't have fighting here!" cried the barmaid, annoyed at being disturbed in her perusal of the erotic adventures of one Lord Geoffrey, not knowing nor caring that real romance was being enacted in her presence. But neither man heeded her injunction; Benedict was guarding against a repetition of the other's attack, standing alert and watchful, his grey eyes fixed on the crouching, bull-necked figure. There was a smear of blood on his face and a slowly swelling bruise beneath his eye.

"I'll spoil your infernal beauty for you," muttered Hawes, and struck again, with the relentless strength of a desperate man.

It was the proprietor of the Sydney hotel who parted them ultimately, without the intervention of the police. To bring such a matter into the light of publicity must necessarily have affected his tavern's popularity as a house of call for the merchant skippers whose ships filled the Australian harbor; and merchant skippers were good customers. The manager had once been a famous man with his hands, and under his skilful intervention the two were dragged apart.

"WAIT a bit, though," panted Hawes. "I'll square things with you, yet. You think you'll get everything your own way, but you won't. I'll get even with you——"

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself," said the tavern keeper. "What harm has Cap'n Benedict done you—as nice and pleasant-spoken a gentleman as ever I've met? You'd better go out and cool down a bit, Cap'n."

As the thwarted skipper sullenly obeyed the injunction, the proprietor directed the other to the rear of the tap-room where, under skilled treatment, he was made as presentable as circumstances allowed.

"He's got a nasty temper, that Cap'n Hawes; I've always noticed it. Dogged, relentless sort of chap, he is. Doesn't easily forget what he thinks an injury. There was that time when he was second mate of the Priory, and he was hocused and shanghaied out of 'Frisco. He had a rough trip of it, and you'd have thought he'd never want to go near the place again; but he deserted as soon as the Harvester reached here and signed-on aboard another ship returning to 'Frisco. They do say Higgins, the man who shanghaied him, never walked again on his feet." The manager talked seriously as he plied sponge and raw steak.

"What's the trouble between you and him, anyway?"

"Oh, nothing." Benedict had no wish to make the young woman over whom the dispute had arisen the subject for tap-room gossip; to him a woman beloved was sacred, to be guarded against the clamor of gossiping tongues. "A bit of an argument, that's all. I expect he's been lying up in port too long, and got rusty at the edges—especially his temper."

"You—!" he panted, and struck suddenly, all his destroyed hopes behind the blow

"Well, don't get foul of him, that's my advice. He'll do you a dirty turn if he has to wait for twenty years to do it. There, you look better now, Cap'n; and I'll let you out by the private way in case he's still a bit above himself." Benedict had no desire to appear to be avoiding Hawes; but he had likewise no desire to appear before the girl of his heart in the guise of a tavern brawler. He slipped away without advertisement, and walked quickly down George Street. Presently he took the ferry to Manly Beach, and, landing, walked towards a trim house at some little distance from the shore. Opposition had keyed up his purpose: Hawes' threats had taught him the truth. He was seriously in love with May Rowenall, and what had commenced as merely an idle flirtation had now become a consuming passion.

"I won't waste any more time—Hawes might spike my guns if I don't look out. And if she really cares——" This was a thought to bring the hot blood rushing to his face, to quicken his step and lighten his eyes. But at a garden gate he paused and diffidence took hold on him. He had always prided himself on keeping calm in emergency, and he had brought the Socrates through much heavy weather during the two years of his command of that swift craft; but today he understood that his heart was beating faster than its wont. To steady himself he cast a sailor's glance over the harbor, dotted with shipping, from a stately battleship to a trivial island schooner. The Socrates and the Theseus—Hawes' ship—lay close together, anchored out from the quay until such time as their cargoes were ready for shipment. A proper sailor pride kindled in the skipper's soul as his eyes rested on his ship. But today the Socrates appeared dwarfed, insignificant.

"It's a pretty tall order to ask a girl to make that her home," he soliloquized. A heresy indeed, for never before had his ship seemed anything but a floating castle of pride to him! He walked on past the gate, and met the object of his quest face to face. She was pretty and cool in soft white raiment, and the sun shone on her chestnut hair. She had removed her broad hat and swung it by its ribbons, and her face was flushed. Benedict drew in a deep gulping breath as she smiled upon him.

"MY God," he thought, "to have her for my very own!" She came nearer on tripping feet, until she saw his face clearly, and then her steps lagged, one hand went to her throat. The pleasantry that had hesitated on her lips was not spoken, but her color came and went very intoxicatingly.

"Coming to call on—mother?" she asked, a challenging twinkle in her eye.

"No—I'm not calling on your mother today," replied Benedict, gravely. "I know there's open house here for me and others, and your mother has—has made me very welcome, but—but—Oh, come for a walk." He led the way out towards open country, and the girl, with a swift moue, followed. It was late autumn, but the day was still and warm, and the fretting of the surf on the beach sounded like a song of hushed striving.

Finally after half a mile had been passed without speech, she turned and Benedict caught her hands.

"What has happened? Your face is hurt—oh, you've been—you've been fighting!"

"Yes. For you! Listen. It was Hawes, Captain Hawes of the Theseus. He told me that you—that I——" Never a glib-tongued man, Benedict found speech difficult. He groped for words that should explain all things, but the heady drink of love rioted in his brain.

"My God, May, how lovely you are!" he cried. And as though the outcry were an open sesame, words came with a rush.

"He warned me to keep away from you; he said that you were going to marry him. And I told him the truth, just the truth, that you're more than all the world to me, that I intended to ask you to be my wife. I'm asking you now, sweetheart." Somehow she was in his arms, her face uplifted to his; somehow his lips were on hers, drinking rapturous draughts of a wine that maddened while it brought visions of heaven's opening gates.

"Is it—do you mean—you love me, May?"

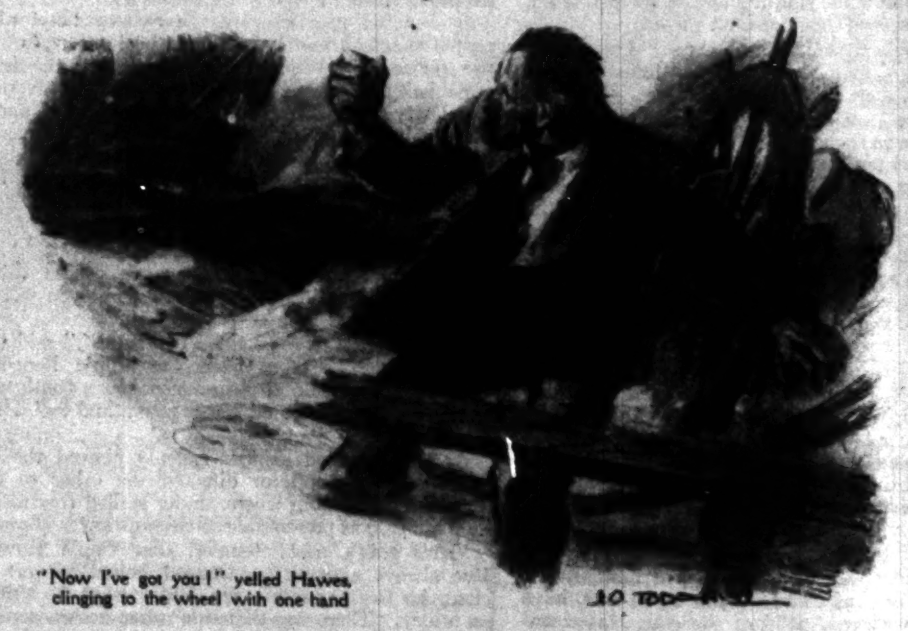
"Yes. Oh, how blind you have been, Jack! If you'd only known the struggle it has been to keep it hidden from you; whenever I saw you I wanted to—to be held in your arms and kissed like this, and this——" The sailor gave incoherent thanks to his God for the great good thing that had come into his life, and peace descended upon them. But since love breeds a swift jealousy, presently he held her away scrutinizing her flushed cheeks and glowing eyes.

"Hawes said you were his property; was there any truth in it?"

"No. He has been at the house often and he has talked to me, he had tried to make love to me, but—ugh! He frightens me, there's something savage and relentless about him. I'm afraid whenever he looks at me. I shan't be afraid now, though." She nestled in his arms again, smiling up at him, and Benedict asked no more questions.

"WE must go and tell your mother; she won't mind? I haven't a great deal to offer you, dearest; but I'm young and there are chances of advancement. I—May, do you really love me as much as you say?"

"Yes, yes—and more. I haven't the words to tell you all that you mean to me. Why, Jack, I'd go with you to the uttermost ends of the earth and be glad."



"Now I've got you!" yelled Hawes, clinging to the wheel with one hand

"Then I'll prove it. A sailors' courtship is ruled by circumstances; we aren't like landsmen, and can't hesitate and count every cost. May, if you love me, as I love you, lets marry before the Socrates sails. We'll be a month in port yet, at the least. And it may be years before I come back to Sydney, anything might happen, and there are other men who must see with my eyes that you are beautiful."

"Silly boy! One would think that there were no other women in the world!" He assured her that the two hemispheres held no other woman for him, and pressed his demand with greater fervency. Startled at first by the imminence of her surrender, she grew more hopeful as his impassioned words beat into her heart. Love south of the Line is quicker in its workings than we of northern latitudes understand.

"Let's settle it; I know my own mind well enough to know I love you for always, sweetheart. Come, we'll speak to your mother."

When Mrs. Rowenall saw the pair of them stand before her, flushed, and with love-lit eyes, she sighed a little, then nodded with complete understanding. Her own wooing had been brief and tempestruous, and her husband had been her lover to the moment of his death.

It was settled without much argument: there were other daughters growing up, and though the elder would be missed, the mother would not, if she could, stand in the way of her daughter's happiness. But she insisted that the marriage should be decently delayed until the day prior to the Socrates' sailing.

"It isn't much to ask; I am losing my eldest daughter, perhaps for always. And the time is short enough in all conscience. There are so many things to be attended to." Benedict, watching the play of emotion on the face he mutely adored, decided to move heaven, earth and his agents for a quick despatch. And Mrs. Rowenall left the lovers alone, smiling encouragement through her tears.

There was much to be done, the skipper admitted. The ship must be painted and beautified, the cabins below must be made a suitable havenage for such a pearl of price as he had secured. Always a disciplinarian he kept his crew actively engaged in glorifying the Socrates, and the song of his love that had at first been but a murmur, grew into an overmastering clamor of divine melody. The news spread, other skippers came aboard to wish him well; but Hawes remained sullenly aloof. On an evening when Benedict met his fiancee, calling at the Rowenall cottage, she had a tale to tell, shudderingly, with glances of apprehension to right and left. "He came out here and insisted on seeing me, Jack. I—I thought he had come to offer congratulations only, or something like that. And then—he seemed to go mad. He appealed to me to marry him, said that he worshipped me, and that he would go to hell for love of me. It was terrible!"

"Poor little girl! I suppose he does care for you in his own way, but it isn't my way."

"He made me afraid, terrified, Jack, I told him that you and I were going to be married, and he got white and awful, he seemed as if he would choke. So I had to call mother and get her to forbid him to come here again. I wish we were married and safe; I'm afraid of him—afraid of what he may do."

Stoutly, with tender insistence Benedict defied Hawes to interfere. Out of his love, knowing what emotions would possess him were this woman placed out of his reach, he even found excuse for the man who had been his rival.

"I think he's a bit mad at times; sort of warped. You never can tell how men will act under certain circumstances. They're like ropes, sweetheart. You'll get a brand-new four-inch that's never been out of the coil, and as soon as you put a strain on it it parts: there's a hidden flaw in it. Then you'll get another that's been used for ages, and subject it to the same strain, and it holds fast. In a way I'm sorry for Hawes, because he takes things mighty deeply to heart and broods on them. But he doesn't matter; he can't harm us; my love is big enough to protect you against everything, everything."

Looking at him, tall, slim and confident, there seemed every assurance that his boast was well supported. No harm could come to her, happiness enwrapped her as a garment. So they went on with their plans, and presently the time came when the Socrates' cargo was reported ready.

"Not long now," said Benedict fondly, a deep craving in his voice, "and we'll spend our honeymoon afloat as sailors should. I'll teach you to see the Lord's wonders in the deep, my darling, and you'll discover that you've never lived before."

While they discussed their roseate plans a bearded man sat in the cabin of the Theseus, gnawing his nails savagely and cursing Benedict, himself and his God.

"I'll put a spoke in that devil's wheel, damn him," he gloomed. "It isn't fair, it isn't right. I love her as much as he loves her, yes, more. He's always getting in my way—he's got the best cargo home, he boasts that he's got the best ship, and he's got the girl, too. But I'll be even with him somehow. Let's think now. There must be a way somewhere."

Other days went by; the two ships lay together at Circular Quay, and the cargo hissed and thudded aboard. Hawes, thinking of the coming time, used all his bullying persuasiveness to expedite matters.

"I want to get out before the Socrates," he told his agent. He did not admit that to see the rival ship gaily dressed with bunting in honor of the coming nuptials would be like a knife in his heart; but he lay awake at nights picturing many things. And when the pictures became too harrowing there was always the whiskey bottle to resort to: that brought momentary ease from the agonies he endured; even though the ensuing pictures were still more horrible than before.

And the result of it all was that the Theseus put out from the quay on the very morning of the wedding. She dropped anchor to await final instructions, and at eight o'clock Hawes, who had passed a sleepless night, saw the Socrates burst into a glory of far-flung bunting. Flags were everywhere; the risen sun glowed from the golden brightness of her brass work, the whiteness of her decks made the eyes ache. Hawes clenched his fists and his sullen lower jaw protruded, there was a snarl in his voice when he spoke.

"He thinks he's won so far, but wait a bit, wait a bit. A man doesn't cross my hawse and go on feeling happy after it. I'll show him. There'll be a way somewhere to get even."

Benedict had no thought of Hawes as he brought his bride aboard the Socrates; he had no thought of anything, indeed, save his wife's happiness and his own. Love awaited them beyond the towering gateway to the open seas: the workmanlike Socrates would become a fairy yacht, bearing them rapidly to the islands of the blest. Taking his wife in his arms down in the saloon, where a feast was spread, he kissed her hungrily. "You're mine at last, and you're safe with me, my own. Nothing harmful can happen now—why, our love is big enough to beat the fiercest gale that ever blew!"

II.

"WHATEVER else happens," said Hawes to himself, "that fellow shan't beat me home. He might have won when it was just the case of a woman, but with a ship it's different; I'll teach him a thing or two." And that his boast might be made good he drove the Theseus towards Cape Horn as she had never been driven before, drove her until his mate protested that the old ship would never endure the strain, until the crew came aft in a body and demanded an ease from the rigors they were called upon to face.

"Mind your own business, and get for'ard," snarled Hawes to the deputation. "Call yourselves sailors, you paper-backed loafers! This ship's going to be sailed according to my fancy or I'll know the reason why." He glanced astern to where a trivial white triangle showed the position of the Socrates, aboard which ship was the woman he loved to madness. He could not resign himself to circumstances; that she was utterly unattainable made no difference in his thoughts. But fighting against this overmastering passion that he called love was another emotion: a steadily growing hatred of Benedict. He had satisfying visions of a day to come when his successful rival should be writhing and utterly at his mercy. Benedict who had everything—a coveted wife, the better ship, youth and a manner that pleased—should pay heavily for the thing he had done, if only a clear way would open out, if only those riotous, incoherent thoughts would settle themselves into some plan of action.

IT would be like Benedict to win in the homeward race and earn praise from his owners, while he, the better man, was left behind, to win nothing but censure. The man's brain was in a hideous ferment, there were moments when a black cloud gathered upon and submerged his senses, until the blackness became suffused with gleaming red—the crimson of shed blood. Madness stalked beside his elbow through the roaring days, and one firm thought obsessed him to the exclusion of all other thoughts: He would get even with Benedict! That long-legged interloper should be brought to book, and if Hawes could not taste the happiness that was his by right, Benedict should not enjoy his stolen heaven for long. Down off the Horn all things were possible, the best-bound ships sometimes came to grief.

A new series of pictures took shape in his distempered mind about this time. He saw the Socrates passing him homeward, flaunting her bunting at him, mocking his consuming miseries—until there came a screaming gale that stripped her and laid her wreckage abroad on the swirling greyness of the seas. And he, in the Theseus, would happen along in time to succor the helpless, and he would save them all—all save Benedict, whom he would condemn to die alone in the bellowing vastnesses. He would snatch May from death and thrust her husband to hell; he would exult in his death-agonies, knowing that in the end he had triumphed.

Much brooding on this possible way out of his sorrows played havoc with his reasoning powers; he failed to realize possible obstacles. And the drink which he took now in increasing quantities helped him to visualize the pictures with greater clearness; it seemed very easy to get square with Benedict, who had gained everything.

Meanwhile good luck attended the Socrates, booming joyously down to the Horn. The ship bore a happy woman; each day brought her greater proof of the wonderment of love. She had known her husband as a lover—as a woman knows her chosen man—soft, caressing; but now she saw him in a new light, as the controller of her destinies and the ship's. She saw how at a spoken word from him the men leapt hot-foot to do his bidding; how he handled the roaring, leaping Socrates as though she were a toy, bending her to his will. Gladly she admitted that she had married a man, one who could be stern even with her, as he showed on more occasions than one, when she, greatly daring, ventured on deck against orders.

"If you don't do as you're told up here, what's going to happen off the pitch of the Horn, eh? You've got my heart in your two dear hands, but you'll do as you're told all the same." And very meekly she apologized for her breach of discipline.

"I've to take you safely home, and now that I've got you, this ship is a thousand times dearer to me than ever before," he would say. "Don't let me have any regrets that I married you in a hurry and brought you away with me." And Benedict watched the even swell of the canvas aloft and listened to the booming bellow of wind and sea, and rubbed his hands and cried aloud to his God that life was good.

Hawes consulted with familiar demons, bred of whiskey and jealous rage and failed to find a plan for his rival's complete undoing. And the Theseus raced and ramped to the south and east, and the bitter-toothed Horn drew nearer and nearer, while the rigors of a clamorous winter reached out and snatched her in their grasp.

Grey skies, shot with lurid black splotches, lightened here and there with yellow streaks that were sinisterly threatening; a long and mighty procession of roaring combers greeted the hurrying Theseus; and still no attempt was made by Hawes to slacken sail. He seemed to be rushing away at a reckless pace from his own black thoughts; he had lost sight of that triangle astern which spoke of the Socrates in his rear; but Benedict was always the uppermost subject in his mind.

And then there came a day which was a white-fanged horror of elemental unrest. The Theseus, full-winged, boomed majestically through the smother; green water burst and clamored aboard her, filling her decks, stripping her of fittings, tearing away her bulwarks and leaving gaping rents.

"We must shorten her down, sir, she's overweighted," protested the mate, afraid to the core of his being.

"And let that swine Benedict romp home ahead of us, eh?" questioned Hawes blackly. "Hang on to every stitch we can carry and shorten down when I tell you, not before. If any man touches sheet or halyard I'll shoot him where he stands." And he produced a revolver as proof of his intention. The mate shrugged his shoulders and went away to take counsel with the second mate, who was all for deposing the captain and placing him in irons below.

"If he isn't stark mad now he soon will be," said the junior officer. "And the safety of all hands depends on us; he's not responsible." But the mate was an older man, who knew that to depose a captain on the high seas was mutiny.

"After all, he's only wanting to make a quick passage," he said. "It's quite natural—he believes Benedict is racing him home and he doesn't intend to get left."

So the Theseus stormed on through the yelling frenzy of the Cape Horn day, until a furious squall stripped her topgallants out of the bolt-ropes and sent them scurrying to leeward like frightened birds.

"When God Almighty starts to shorten sail for us it's time we helped Him," said the mate. But Hawes only laughed, and looked vainly astern to see if he might see trace of his rival. The Socrates was far below the narrowed skyline; cautiously snugged down, riding easily over the monstrous seas. Benedict asked nothing better than that this heavenly voyage might continue forever.

The Theseus, overburdened with sail and writhing and frightened now, shivered to her keelson as the unabated might of the seas thundered aboard her. She swayed and swung like a pendulum to the rush of the waves; at times she cowered and lay well-nigh flat as a screaming squall bit down out of the ominous blackness and whipped the wave-crests into hissing spindrift that stung like grapeshot, and raised great weals to mark its passionate kiss. Hawes stood apart from his men, clinging to a swifter, staring into the haze and gloom astern.

There came a rushing roar that rose to a mad scream of rage; the world went black about the harried fabric. She plunged sideways and down—down, the men clinging like limpets to whatever holding offered, praying that the end might be swift.

"She can't stand this," cried the mate. "She can't do it—something's got to go." And for a clear heart-aching minute the ship lay inert and lifeless, yet tensed to breaking point. Then followed a crack like the discharge of artillery; she lifted sluggishly; there was a wild threshing of timbers, ropes whizzed out of the darkness and struck through the air like flails.

"She's lifted the sticks out of herself," said the mate. "She's done for!"

Hawes, still clinging to his swifter, laughed harshly when the news was brought. Benedict had all the luck, he said, damn him! A good ship and a wife and happiness, while for him was only a dismasted wreck and nothing beside, nothing save a mad brooding for revenge on the author of his troubles.

"We'd better abandon ship, sir," appealed the mate. "There'll be vessels coming along; the boats might live." With a snarl Hawes bade him shut up, and mate and second mate took fresh counsel together, aided by the seniors of the crew. It was decided to lower away the single remaining boat, stock her with provisions and safeguards, and trust themselves to the mercies of the sea in that frail cockleshell, rather than aboard the Theseus. Hawes stared astern as the guttering hull rolled and sagged and plunged beneath his feet, and mouthed black curses against the man who had robbed him of all that life held dear.

"The boat's ready, sir—will you come?" He awoke to fleeting sanity, to 10% More for Your Money

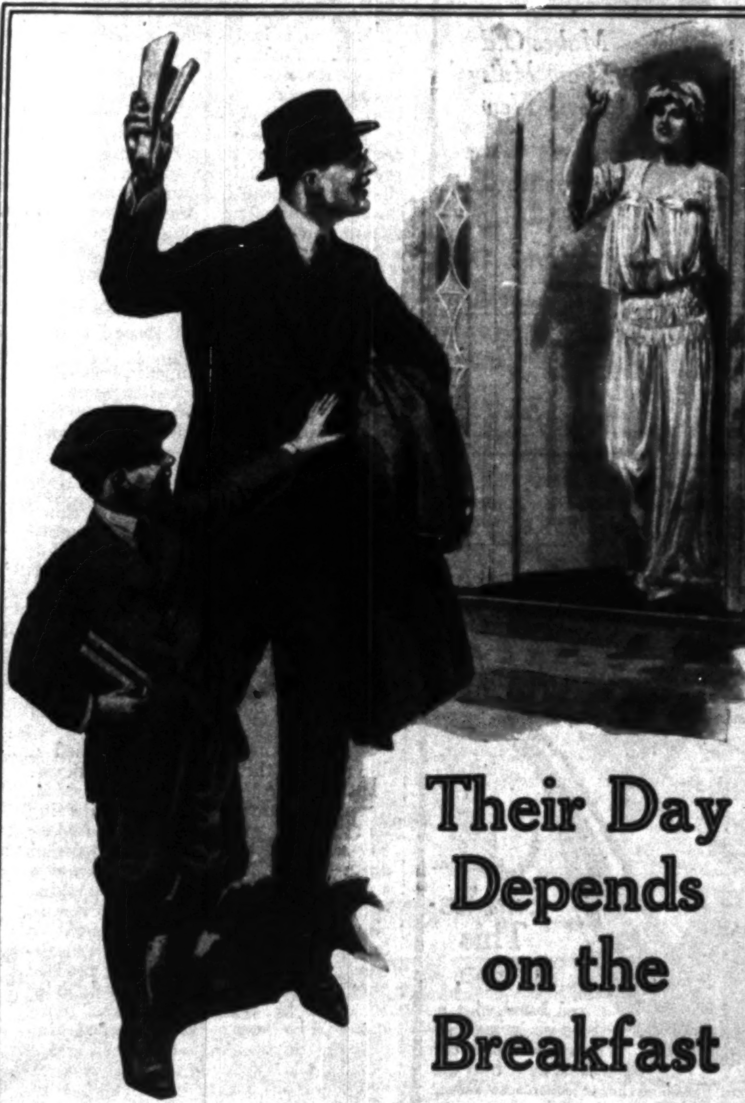
Quaker Oats is put up also in a 25-cent size, nearly three times as large as the 10-cent size. By saving in packing it offers you 10 per cent more for your money. See how long it lasts.



Their Day Depends on the Breakfast

Remember that—you who decide the breakfast.

Those are human machines you are feeding. Their efficiency depends on the food.

There's an energy food, as you know, which is one of Nature's marvels. Its vim-producing power is proverbial. Today, as for ages, the oat stands supreme as a source of vitality, as a food for growth. There's a thousand calories of energy in a fair-sized dish.

That's the matchless breakfast. No one ever outgrows the need for it, and nothing can take its place. Our plea is to make that dish inviting. Win folks to plentiful use of it. The way to do that is by serving Quaker Oats—and this is why:

Quaker Oats

The Energizing Dainty at Its Best

Two-thirds of the oats as they come to us are discarded in Quaker Oats. We use just the big, plump, richly-flavored grains.

The result is large and luscious flakes, delicious in taste and aroma. Children and grown-ups delight in it. They never grow tired of it. They eat an abundance of it. That's the only way to fully realize what vitality lies in oats.

Quaker Cooker

We have made to our order—from pure Aluminum—a perfect Double Boiler. It is extra large and heavy. We supply it to users of Quaker Oats, for cooking these flakes in the ideal way. It insures the fullness of food value and flavor. See our offer in each package.

Quaker Oats is always of this super-quality. It has been so for 25 years. Lovers of oats from all the world over send here to get it on that account.

Yet it costs you no extra price. It is worth while saying "Quaker Oats" to get a food like this.

realize the ship's peril: to see the shadowy forms of men clustered near at hand.

"Who gave orders?" he demanded.

"The ship can't live till dawn, sir—she's sinking, don't you understand? She's sinking!"

"Not she—stand by her—abandon her—do what you like." The men crowded into the boat on the word, again the mate faced his captain and was greeted with a blow.

"We can't leave you behind, sir," he said through bleeding lips. And Hawes answered that where he was he would remain. What harm could a boat wreak on Benedict? None; and to take his place aboard the small craft meant that he and his dreams of revenge were sundered forever. When the mate appealed afresh Hawes produced his revolver and commenced shooting wildly, shouting orders in a voice that boomed through the storm. The mate, fingering a gash along his temple, retreated cursing.

"It's his own lookout and she can't live long," he told the second mate. "We'll have to leave him." The boat was lowered; men jumped perilously; a wave swept up and licked them away. Captain Hawes was left alone on the poop of his sinking ship and he sang stridently in an unmusical voice.

Presently light would come and the solution to the baffling problem that perplexed him. He almost had it now; it simply needed a little clearer thought. Somewhere astern was the Socrates, and the Socrates held the woman he loved and the man he hated—or did he hate them both now? Undoubtedly the baggage had encouraged him to love her, and if he had never loved her he would never have known this abiding mental torture. Damn them both! But they shouldn't triumph over him for long; the mists would lift in a little while.

Again looking astern he descried a dim red light through the leaping spume. That must be the Socrates, he brooded, romping triumphantly along, defying the gale that had wrecked the older Theseus. All the luck with Benedict again—all the luck! But no, there was a way out of the dilemma—it was taking shape—taking shape. Ah! there it was, clear-cut and splendid, a thought to fetch harsh chuckles from a man's salt-cracked lips. If Benedict never reached home, if he perished—perished now! It could be done; what was more, it should be done. Hawes warped himself to the abandoned wheel, and a devilish smile of exultation was revealed on his bearded, grimed face by the flickering light of the binnacle. That light, though, would betray his plan—he lifted the lamp forth and extinguished it. Then he gripped the wheel-spokes and exerted his monstrous strength. The night was as black as the mouth of the pit; spray-blinded eyes would never see the lurking, sodden terror outboard.

"I'll settle him—settle them both." he snarled, and waited until the half-submerged Theseus came round, obedient still, though sluggishly, to the demand of her rudder.

"That's the plan, yes—wonder I didn't think of it before. He'll hit me and he'll crumple up—steel ship, rotten stuff. He'll sink and I'll save her, pretty woman, damn her! I'll marry Benedict's widow, ha, ha!" The dim red light that now lay broad on his bow, grew brighter and brighter; he fancied he could hear the throb of the Socrates' shortened canvas; he could most certainly hear the boom of her sturdy forefoot as it broke through the drumming seas. And Benedict was aboard there, laughing, comfortable—so was his wife. She would be below, wrapped in dreams, belike.

Hawes gritted his teeth and shifted the spokes he held. "That'll settle them," he mouthed. "Sink the ship, save May—bring her aboard; up stick for home, May and I together, eh?"

The sodden wreck guttered in the trough, rising and falling very sluggishly now, as though weary of the unequal fight. Out of the obscurity loomed a high, advancing shape, a thing of power and might; the white band that held her painted ports looming greyly through the murk. It was the Socrates speeding to her ignominious doom. Hawes saw her spring from shadowiness to reality, and he shouted blasphemous defiance to Benedict above. The Theseus was dead ahead of the oncoming ship.

"Now, I've got you—now I've got you!" yelled Hawes, clinging to the wheel with one hand. Perhaps his defiance carried to watchful ears; perhaps Benedict sensed the danger—the Socrates swung sharply, more sharply still. The wreck was hit in the bow, her timbers crunched and flew abroad; the Socrates reeled slightly, staggered, gathered herself together and plunged on afresh.

"Now she'll go," chuckled Hawes, relinquishing the useless spokes. "She's hit—hard hit." But the white stern light on the Socrates continued to burn clearly until the spray swallowed it. The Theseus groaned, escaping air from her fore compartment whistled and gurgled, she dipped deeper and deeper. Finally a monstrous wave came with a rush and made all things seemly. . . . As the chill waters closed over his head Hawes recognized that he had failed in his last bitter plan.

Aboard the Socrates an hour later the mate wrote slowly in the log-book: "4:30 A. M.: Struck submerged wreckage, apparently a derelict; no harm done."

Tabs on the Famous

By Fred C. Kelly

THOMAS A. EDISON always places the laws of nature and physics in the feminine gender. Nature, says he, is a woman, and, woman-like, will give up any secret she possesses, if only she is wooed ardently and persistently enough. When he has made one of his great discoveries, he speaks of it invariably as something that was there all along waiting for some one to coax out of "her."

Not long ago the famous inventor was engaged on a problem that absorbed his attention some twenty hours a day for about forty-eight days. His assistants in the laboratory were becoming anxious about him. But Edison assured them that he was all right and that he was going to "make her give it up."

On the forty-seventh day, about daybreak, his chief assistant walked in and found the wizard sitting in a rocking chair, smoking a big black cigar and staring at a spot on the ceiling. The boss began to laugh and the other man was alarmed.

"Well," said Edison, still chuckling, "she told me!"

Frank B. Willis, elected Governor of Ohio last November, dotes on so-called comic pictures. He can sit down with the comic supplement of a Sunday paper and find things to laugh at. Nearly every time one sees Willis he has a clipping or two of funny pictures in his vest pocket, and when he gets a moment to spare he takes these out and looks at them. Oftentimes the humor of the picture is primary, so to say—the kind visible to the naked eye—but Willis likes it, and as he is comparatively free from other vices, nobody remonstrates with him. Give him a picture of a fat man stepping on a cat and falling down, and he'll laugh at it for nearly an hour.

Vice-President Marshall was talking about his legal career. "I never was much of a lawyer," he declared, "but I've always had a certain facility in making the most of the legal material at hand. If somebody would just bring me the bricks, I could pick them up and throw them."

Representative Joseph Taggart, of Kansas, is a man brimming with epigrams and bits of philosophy—if he chooses to spring them. Being modest, he doesn't show his goods to everybody; but occasionally he pulls a sample within sight of all. The other day somebody was talking about a certain congressman who has a way of getting all "het up" and making a "great-to-do" over accomplishing small things.

"Yes," said Taggart, "that fellow invariably hitches a Corliss engine up to a gimlet."

Keep Your Razor Sharp
It is impossible to wipe a razor absolutely dry. Consequently invisible rust is always eating away the microscopic teeth that give a razor its shaving power. This is why your razor becomes dull---rust does it! Nothing keeps a razor in such fine shaving trim as
3-in-One oil
Use it this way and see for yourself: Before shaving, draw razor between thumb and first finger moistened with 3-in-One. Then strop with a few drops on the strop. Avoid making strop wet with oil. After shaving repeat this process. This checks rust and absolutely preserves the edge—microscopic rust cannot form—the cutting edge must stay keen.
3-in-One is sold in hardware, drug and general stores. 1 oz. bottle 10c; 3 oz. 25c; 8 oz. (½ pt.) 50c. Also in Handy Oil Cans, 3½ oz. 25c. If your dealer doesn't keep these cans, we will send one by parcel post, full of good 3-in One, for 30c.

WOMEN OF MARK

A Hall of Fame for Californians

CALIFORNIA does not demand that a man or woman die before he or she is eligible for the Hall of Fame ently established in that State. On e contrary, the three first selections ade from among the twenty persons o have made the State prominent in terature, Music and the sister arts, are ing women—Sybil Sanderson, Gertde Atherton d Mary Andern-Navarro.

The auditorium the recently-mpleted Hall of he Native ughters and ns in San Franco has been seted to fittingly use the effigies these Califors immortals. Set gh up in the all above the llery are twenty und spaces in hree of which rtraits are soon be placed. This ditorium has a ating capacity over one thound and across e end is an attractive little stage fitted with every requisite for theatrical performances. In addition, it can easily be converted into splendid ball-room and, as such, is certain to play an active part in San Francisco's social life.

Mrs. Gertrude Atherton

Asked how it felt to have a permanent niche in the Hall of Fame, Mrs. Atherton ughed merrily as she answered, "I'm fraid I cannot say I feel very different o what I did before I was selected. Perps rather proud to know that the first ree members of California immortals be chosen should be women, but that rather pride of sex than any conviction f my personal, individual worth.

"It was Mr. James D. Phelan," she ent on, "who, not only originated the ea of this tribute to Calirnians—living and dead—but did more than any her one individual to bring e entire scheme to a sucful issue. He suggested, o, the advisability of aditting to such a gathering mous men and women who hile not born here, certainly ceived from the Golden ate such inspiration for eir noblest works as will use them to be permanentidentified with it. The list rather a long one and thus seemed wisest and best to ow the general public to ve a part, not only in nomating but actually electing ose who are considered to ve best upheld California's best trations."

Womanly Patriotism

AMERICAN women preserved Mount Vernon from ruin and disgrace and esented it to the nation as an historic ritage; and now women are again shing a movement to do still more tord perpetuating the memory of the ther of His Country. A great memal building to cost two millions of llars with an endowment of a quarter a million more is the goal toward which ese women are striving, and which ere is every reason to believe they will ch. The building is to be central adquarters for all scientific educational, economic and literary bodies that may sh to meet and carry on work here. At present there is no place in Washingn for the assembling of such meetings.

At the head of this movement is a woman of affairs, a woman of rare executive ability who has set herself the task of realizing some very fine and high ideals in the erection of the Washington Memorial Building; and if the work seems to move slowly its promoters feel that it is moving surely under the direction of Mrs. Henry F. Dimock. It is her purpose to make the building a common forum for the thinking men and women of the country, and a building from which there will go forth much of the highest value to the country at large. Of all the monuments and memorials to our first President that have gone up all over the land none will serve a better purpose than this new memorial, when Mrs. Dimock and the women who are her helpers have brought the George Washington Memorial Building into existence.

China's First Woman Doctor

DR. YAMEI KIN has the distinction of being the first woman doctor of modern China and she may well be called the doctor of millions, for the Chinese government has been wise enough to recognize her qualifications and has entrusted to her the task of organizing a medical department for women in Northern China.

A little over twenty years ago, Dr. Kin left China and came to America with the full consent of her parents, converted to Christianity, to study at the Woman's Medical College in New York, with the object of going back to her own country to devote herself to the betterment of the health and social conditions of her own sex.

Dr. Kin feels that applied science is the great gift of the West to the East today, and says that China has an excellent phar-macopoecia, but exact research and scientific investigation is what the East needs in order to make good use of her inheritance.

Mrs. Henry F. Dimock

In this work Dr. Kin expects her son to help, and is working herself to establish a research work that shall be of benefit to the country.

In appearance the doctor is a typical Chinese woman, black-haired and almond-eyed, and wears the garb of her country women, which she thinks is more healthful than the restricted American dress. As a public speaker she has great power and her command of the English language is remarkable.

Diana of the African Cross-Ways

NOWADAYS it isn't at all strange for a woman to start off and go to the ends of the earth practically unaccompanied, if the fit takes her. Mrs. Roby, the wife of an American brain specialist living in Japan, has just started for the wilds of Africa without a white escort. She is an experienced hunter and has the skins of lions, leopards and hippopotami which she has killed herself. She will follow the route formerly taken by the Duke and Duchess of Connaught in Africa. Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll, of Boston, and her daughter have also started for a hunting trip to the same region.

AUTOMATIC COOKING

Saves hours of time and work
If it's a Sentinel, it's automatic

At two o'clock put the food in the stove, set the timer and leave the kitchen

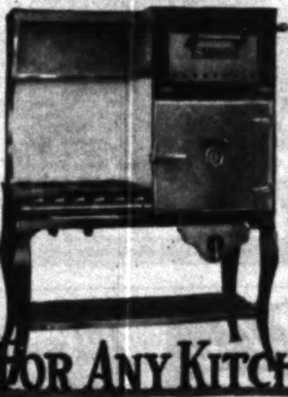
You can go visiting or shopping while the meal is cooking. Or you can rest, read, sew or busy yourself with other household duties.

You need not give any thought whatever to the meal. The Sentinel will cook it automatically.

The wonderful timing device of the Sentinel watches over the cooking as carefully and skillfully as you could if you were standing over the stove every minute.

At the proper moment it automatically turns off the gas. The cooking is then completed by the indirect heat from the radiator. Nothing is ever overcooked or under-cooked. It gives perfect results every time.

Sentinel Automatic Cook Stove



At six o'clock you will find everything perfectly cooked, hot and ready to serve

The Sentinel Automatic Cook Stove has all the advantages of a regular gas range plus the convenience of its automatic cooking features. You prepare the food in exactly the same way as you do when using the ordinary gas range. No preheating of food or radiators—no extra work of any kind.

It not only saves work but it also saves fuel. It cuts down your gas bills to such an extent that it soon pays for itself and then saves money for you.

NEW WRINKLES

If glycerine is directly applied after a scalding accident and the scalded parts covered with strips of soft linen soaked in glycerine the effect will be wonderful—M. C., Providence, R. I.

If cracked dishes are boiled in enough sweet milk to cover them for about forty-five minutes, the cracks will glue together and become invisible and the dishes will stand almost as much usage as when new.—S. H., California, Mo.

To mend broken glass articles so that they will not come apart, even if washed in boiling water, take five parts of gelatin to one of a solution of acid chromate of lime. Cover the edges with this mixture and press together, then place in direct sunlight. The breaks are practically invisible if carefully put together.—S. C. C., Providence, R. I.

Soft felt hats that have outworn their use as a head covering make splendid tops for bed-room slippers. They also make excellent holders for hot pots, etc., if cut into convenient shapes and sizes. —J. S., Woodburn, Oregon.

For an ailing pot plant, scoop some of the pulp out from half an Irish potato and place the shell, hollowed side down, on the earth surrounding the plant. In a few days, during which time the plant is not to be watered, examine the potato. If a collection of small bugs is found clinging to the inner surface, you will have the satisfaction of knowing that the little enemies that have been poisoning and destroying the plant have been foiled. The moisture in the potato serves as a magnet to which the insects are drawn.—J. O., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Do not throw away the small ends and bits of candles; they are excellent for kindling the fire. Cut them into small pieces and distribute them among the kindling. This will cause the fire to burn up much quicker.—S. C. C., Providence, R. I.

To prevent water pipes from freezing and bursting, take an equal amount of vaseline (petroleum jelly) and paraffine and allow them to melt together over a hot fire. Then rub the pipes with an old woolen cloth until they are perfectly dry. While the mixture is still hot, and in liquid form, apply it to the pipes with an old paint brush. This method has been known to keep the water from freezing even when the pipes were almost exposed to the weather.—A. K., Pittsburgh, Pa.

To mend granite ware break into small bits the old rubber rings of fruit jars and heat them over the fire until they bubble. Then spread the melted rubber over the leaks in the seams of the vessels. Galvanized washtubs can be mended in the same way.—S. C. C., Providence, R. I.

When leaving home for any length of time, just before starting, pour about a half cup of kerosene in the washbowl, closet, laundry tubs, sink, etc. This will prevent sewer gas or water bugs from coming into the house and the odor will disappear in a few hours.—W.W.C., Washington, D. C.

To extract a needle from the flesh apply a magnet immediately, as the flesh closes quickly over the needle. The magnet, however, arrests the penetrating movement of the needle and finally draws it out.—S. C. C., Providence, R. I.

Mustard plasters will not blister if the affected parts are first thoroughly rubbed with vaseline and a coating of it left on the skin.—J. A. D., South Omaha, Neb.

When whipping cream, cover the bowl with a piece of paper with a slit in the shape of a maltese cross. Insert the egg beater into the slit, and the cream may be whipped without danger of spattering.—M. C., Providence, R. I.

A mixture of borax and sugar, equal parts, will rid the shelves of vermin.—A. J. R., Ironton, Ohio.

In arranging short stemmed flowers a number of bottle corks thrown into the water will buoy them up and keep them in position.—M. C., Providence, R. I.

A good way to wash the bottom of pots and pans that have been over the fire, is to rub soap over them before placing them on the fire. They will then wash clean without any trouble. —B. M. H., Tunnel Hill, Ill.

The unsoiled tops of long white kid gloves make delightful little baby shoes. The pattern, something like that of an Indian moccasin, is quite simple to cut, and the stitching is effective in colored thread. Tiny ribbon-work flowers or floss embroidery add to their attractiveness, and the shoes should, of course, be provided with little ribbon ties.—M. C., Providence, R. I.

An ordinary ten cent sash curtain rod attached to the under edge of the sewing table, with the little brackets that go with it, is excellent for keeping spools of thread untangled and in place where they can be located immediately.—A. W. T., Providence, R. I.

To clean combs, use a small brush that has been well soaked and brush the teeth of the comb up and down. The bristles of the brush will get between the teeth and when rinsed the comb is thorougly cleaned.—L. K., Chicago, Ill.

A blackboard eraser will be found excellent for polishing floors, more especially in the corners where it is difficult to use the weighted brush. It is best to get a new, clean eraser such as is used in the schools, and keep it for the express purpose of polishing the floors.—E. A. M., Providence, R. I.

A paint brush about 2 inches wide with soft bristles, will be found excellent for dusting picture frames, especially those having ornamental work.—M. J. D., Walton, N. Y.

One or two sprouting onions planted in a large flower pot will provide seasoning or a little green for salad by clipping the young shoots whenever needed.—G. P., Greenwood, Mass.

Copper kettles that have been dulled by contact with the fire are easily cleaned with a lemon cut in half and dipped in salt. Rub this over the metal and wash immediately or the acid will eat into it.—M. F., Chicago, Ill.

Had a Good Start

HER delusion was a belief in her ability to sing and she was giving a musicale. A violinist and a pianist were assisting the singer, who had arranged to sing twenty numbers, and in this way left very little room for the other performers.

A commercial traveler who had drifted into town, found interest centering upon the concert, and, having nothing else to do, bought a ticket and obtained a seat well to the front of the hall.

Promptly at eight the aspirant for vocal laurels began to sing, and she repeated the operation at short intervals for the best part of three hours, while admiring friends applauded. By eleven she had succeeded in singing a little over half of her numbers, numerous encores having delayed her somewhat.

The names of the songs were not printed on the program, so a tall youth with a nasal voice announced each selection. Finally, about half past eleven, the young man arose and said:

"Miss Smith will now sing 'For All Eternity.'"

"My Gawd!" exclaimed the drummer, springing to his feet and upsetting his chair. "I'm all in—let me out."

Manna from Heaven

OUR FATHERS ate the manna in the wilderness; as it is written: He gave them bread out of heaven to eat.—John 6:31.

Since the days of the Bible, manna has been taken as the emblem of spiritual food, the "bread of life, that whosoever eateth shall not hunger," and that it had actual, or material existence, has been doubted. But there fell during a copious shower of rain recently in the vicinity of Mardin and Diarbekir, Asiatic Turkey, a substance that analysts declared to be the veritable manna of Bible days.

It was in the form of small globules about the size of millet seeds, and though yellowish on the outside, was perfectly white within. The inhabitants eagerly gathered it up and with it made excellent bread, for it proved floury, palatable and nutritious. Samples were sent to Paris, where chemists declared it to be a vegetable substance of the lichen family, scientifically known as lecanora esculenta. This lichen, found in the most arid mountains of the desert of Tartary, grows so close to the ground among the pebbles that it can be distinguished with difficulty.

In 1828 Parrot, a great traveler of that period, brought home a quantity of this substance from Persia where a shower caused it to cover the ground to the depth of several inches. The inhabitants gathered it in great quantities and cattle ate it as if it were a rare treat.

Scientists explain the shower of manna in this way: Waterspouts are not infrequent in the country where it grows, and it is believed the lichen was gathered up in one, carried by a vaporous wind at a high altitude, falling to the earth again in a rain shower.

Then said Jehovah unto Moses: Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you: and the people shall go out and gather a day's portion every day, that I may prove them, whether they will walk in my law, or not * * * And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold upon the face of the wilderness a small round thing, small as the hoarfrost on the ground.—Ex. 4:14.

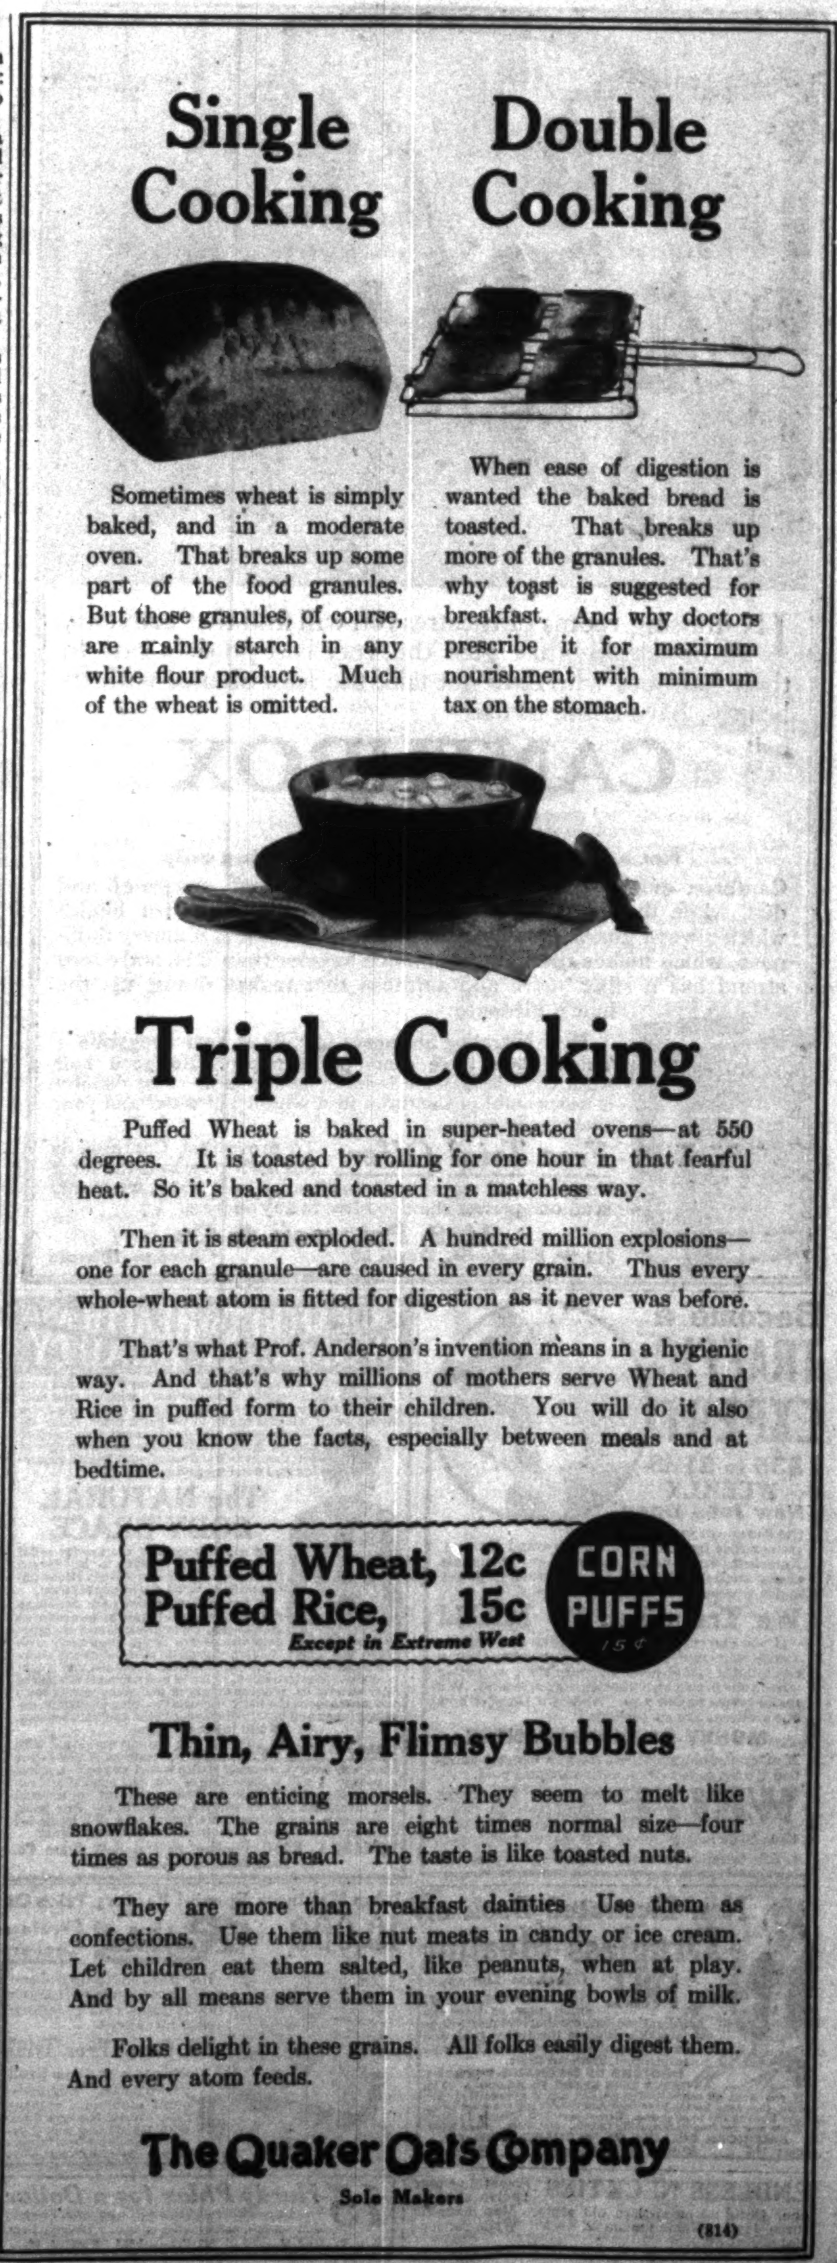
Heart-Working Wonders

EVERY adult being has within him a structural wonder that has a lifting power almost incredible, when one considers its size. It is the heart. Weighing seldom more than eleven ounces, every day it lifts the equivalent of one hundred and twenty tons to a height of one foot. That is, of course, the power exerted by the normal heart every twenty-four hours has a lifting strength equal to this weight. Every time your heart beats six ounces of blood are sent forth into the veins or conduits of the human system. Put your finger on your pulse. If your heart is normal the beat is about seventy times each minute, and the amount of blood forced out with every beat, or stroke of this wonderful little engine, is six ounces. Get pencil and paper, and you will find that this little bundle of muscles beats 100,800 times every twenty-four hours, or thirty million times a year.

Three-score and ten years is the allotted term of life. The man who lives to be seventy has a heart that has beat 2,500,000,000 times. A pint's a pound the world around, the old saying goes. Taking it as a basis, and reckoning on the fact that six ounces of blood are forced into the arteries seventy times a minute, this, counting thirty-two ounces to the quart, would mean three and one-eighth gallons of blood forced out every minute, or 187½ gallons of blood every hour.

Get your pencil again, and you will find this means that the heart forces out 4,500 gallons of blood every day, or 1,642,500 gallons every year. In seventy years, the length of a normal life, the heart would have forced 114,975,000 gallons of blood through your entire body by way of the arteries.

Now, to get a more comprehensive idea of this amount, find the amount of water in a small-sized lake or pond, and you will see that the little eleven-ounce bunch of muscles has pumped out enough blood in the course of a normal life to fill it. There is no structure so wonderful as the heart, nor few so little understood.



Single Cooking

Double Cooking

Sometimes wheat is simply baked, and in a moderate oven. That breaks up some part of the food granules. But those granules, of course, are mainly starch in any white flour product. Much of the wheat is omitted.

When ease of digestion is wanted the baked bread is toasted. That breaks up more of the granules. That's why toast is suggested for breakfast. And why doctors prescribe it for maximum nourishment with minimum tax on the stomach.

Triple Cooking

Puffed Wheat is baked in super-heated ovens—at 550 degrees. It is toasted by rolling for one hour in that fearful heat. So it's baked and toasted in a matchless way.

Then it is steam exploded. A hundred million explosions—one for each granule—are caused in every grain. Thus every whole-wheat atom is fitted for digestion as it never was before.

That's what Prof. Anderson's invention means in a hygienic way. And that's why millions of mothers serve Wheat and Rice in puffed form to their children. You will do it also when you know the facts, especially between meals and at bedtime.

These are enticing morsels. They seem to melt like snowflakes. The grains are eight times normal size—four times as porous as bread. The taste is like toasted nuts.

They are more than breakfast dainties Use them as confections. Use them like nut meats in candy or ice cream. Let children eat them salted, like peanuts, when at play. And by all means serve them in your evening bowls of milk.

Folks delight in these grains. All folks easily digest them. And every atom feeds.

The Dog that Saved the Bridge

side. But not one touched him. He knew nothing of them. He only knew his lines were close ahead, and he must reach them.

The Belgians cheered and yelled, and poured in a concentrated fire in that section of the enemy which was attacking the dog. For a few seconds that small, insignificant, desperate, four-footed shape drew upon itself the undivided attention of several thousand men. It focussed the battle, for the moment. It was only a brindled dog, yet upon its fate hung immense and unknown issues. Everyone knew now that the devoted animal was carrying a message. The Germans suddenly came to feel that to prevent the delivery of that message would be like winning a battle. The Belgians turned a battery from harrying a far-off squadron of horse to shell the lines opposite in defense of the little messenger. Men fell by the score, on both sides, to decide that unexpected contest.

And still Dirck raced on, heedless of it all.

Then, within fifty yards of the goal, he fell. A bullet had smashed one of his legs. He picked himself up again instantly and hobbled forward, trailing the mangled limb. But the moment he fell a score of riflemen had leapt from their lines and dashed out to rescue him. Three dropped on the way out. Half a dozen more fell on the way back. But Dirck, whining and licking his rescuers' hands, was carried to shelter behind the massive stone wall of the inn yard, where the Brigadier and his officers were receiving and sending out despatches.

An aide drew the message from under Dirck's collar, and handed it, with a word of explanation, to the general. The latter read it, glanced at the time on the despatch and then at his watch, and gave hurried orders for strong reinforcements to be rushed up to the old bridge. Then he looked at Dirck, whose shattered leg was being dressed by an orderly.

"That dog," he growled, "has been worth exactly three regiments to us. He's saved the bridge, and he's saved three regiments from being cut off. See that he's well looked after and cured as soon as possible. He's a good soldier, and we'll want him again."

Country Town Sayings

By Ed. Howe, of Atchison

Every Reform has a tax attachment; and sometimes the tax attachment is the only thing about a reform measure that can be enforced.

Keep out of saloons and court houses as much as possible.

Every responsible man must be willing to do something for the public good without pay.

The most important room in the house is the kitchen; the bathroom comes next.

The reliable men in every community are as well known as the unreliable ones.

Every form of dishonesty and impoliteness is evidence of mental as well as moral weakness.

The civilized brute seems to be fully as mean as the ancient savage was. Human nature is a hard thing to improve upon.

Hate your own weaknesses more cordially than anything else.

You can't always smile; every one, regardless of sex, must occasionally cloud up and rain.

Keep busy and a lot of your faults will be covered up.

Nearly every man claims to be a friend of the poor and weak, and robs them a little.

If you cannot love your enemy, treat your friend a little better, and maybe that will answer.

My Corns
Were Ended This Way

Countless women have told other women about Blue-jay plasters. Now a million corns a month are ended in this scientific way.

Women who know Blue-jay do not suffer corns. When one appears, they put a Blue-jay plaster on it. That ends the pain. In 48 hours the corn is gone forever, with no soreness left.

If you can't believe it, ask your friends. Half of them have probably ended corns with Blue-jay. If you still doubt it, ask us for samples. Try them on corns of your own.

Don't coddle corns. Don't pare and keep them. Don't use old-time treatments. A famous chemist has made corns utterly unnecessary. That sort of torture is a thing of the past.

A SURPRISE FOR THIN WOMEN

Thousands of thin women have been getting wonderful results from a treatment which is 15 years old and gaining in popularity every day—It has not cost them a penny to try it, nor will it you.

You will be surprised and delighted at the change in your appearance when the treatment has produced its effect. It has been astonishing how little additional flesh and bust development it has required to make many of our thin patrons attractive—even fascinating. They tell us they seem to be attracting a flattering attention which they never enjoyed and had ceased to expect.

Just write today saying "Send me your free treatment." We will immediately send, in a plain wrapper, sufficient Dr. Whitney's Nerve & Flesh Builder to give you the additional flesh that will add so much to your attractiveness. In some cases the trial alone has been all that was needed.

No. 1 is the general flesh builder. No. 8 is for giving development to the bust alone without enlarging other parts of the body. Say which one you prefer.

Write us today before this generous offer is withdrawn, and get your free treatment in a plain wrapper by return mail. C. L. Jones Co., 80 Friend Bldg., Elmira, N. Y.

The War and the Trade Winds

the failure to go out for foreign markets, there is more poverty from lack of work, poverty that is not spectacular, than in England and possibly France.

Where, then, is the prosperity coming in? Listen. Before this war, Europe did not want American exports competing on the markets of the world. Europe cut the throat of our export trade so neatly that we did not know it was being done. It was done with kid gloves and candy. A few of the big fellows, like farm implements and sewing machines and steel, were strong enough to force themselves on the foreign markets; but the average independent exporter was like a rustic in a faro game with this export business.

Here was the situation and here will be the situation again after the War if Uncle Sam does not plant his big foot wide against the open door.

Pools, rebates, special rates are legal to foreign shippers. They are not to American. Here is the way it works! A steel shipper in Germany—we'll say, and the case is not hypothetical—was going out for the foreign market in Brazil. On export traffic, German railroads allow special rates all the way from 20 to 33 per cent cheaper than for home traffic. Coming to waterside, the German steamships granted the German shipper rebates if he signed a contract to confine shipments to that line. In addition, the steamship line could pro-rate with a Brazilian railroad inland. The export shipper through German banks could extend special credit to his buyer.

CONSIDER the American shipper! He could obtain a special export rate only by permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Because the United States had no Merchant Marine, he could not obtain special steamship rates from foreign lines equal to the favors to the shipper of the same nationality as the ship. They enjoyed dock favors. Many of them owned docks, and as European capital has financed the railroads of South America, the U. S. shipper could seldom obtain the same rating inland. Supposing the discrimination made a difference of only two or three dollars a ton—often it made more—that was sufficient to handicap the new comer; and until the National City Bank established banks in South America, there was no medium of exchange for the United States.

It was against such odds that American exporters set out to chart world markets for trade. It was against such odds as these that two or three of the big firms have won the foreign markets. They have not told the inside how of the story. They are close-lipped at any time; but on this subject of export trade they were compelled in self-defense to use rubber heels and maxim silencers; but I have heard the how from the foreign end.

One big company set aside between three and four millions for the fight. They ignored the transportation discrimination entirely and sent in a picked lot of export workers. Those workers plastered a continent from the Horn to the Equator, from the Andes to the Amazon with a single striking advertising sign. If you were on the streets of Buenos Aires, it winked at you in an electric sign. If you went mountain climbing, it glared at you painted on a rock. If you hiked across the farms of the Argentine, it stood on a bill board amid the wheat and the corn and the vineyards. The company then organized a staff of native house to house salesmen, selling direct from factory to user. When this driving system began to materialize in big orders (I think it took four years), the company was in a position to go to the transportation people and bludgeon them into favored rates. The sales of that company's products have increased three hundred per cent since 1913.

. Another big firm did not attempt to fight the transportation systems owned by European rivals. It could not fight transportation systems for the simple reason that it sold to them; so it sold its product at less on the foreign market than on the American market.

It sold for years at a loss, but it holds the market today and meets and overcomes the cheap labor product of foreign mills. Today it is in a position to command the steamships. It obtains favored rates though it is severely criticised for sales lower abroad than at home; and the maxim-silenced manager of it all does not dare tell why he did it; but he captured the markets of Russia, of China, of South America in this way. His companies today charter their own ships. Another huge company is in the very near future putting fleets of sailing vessels on to China and ports in the Mediterranean to hold these markets while the rest of the marine world is convulsed by War.

Just here two points should be emphasized.

It is contrary to law in the United States for rivals to combine to obtain favored rates. They will have to obtain favored rates to compete on foreign markets; and the President has publicly acknowledged that the law must be changed to permit this.

The other point seems incredible in this era of high marine rates; but even today with rates at a premium, it is cheaper to ship 4,000 to 8,000 miles by sea to these foreign markets than 600 to 800 miles by rail in the United States. It is cheaper to send a ton by sea to China or Arabia than it is to send that same ton by rail from Chicago to New Orleans.

In Russia, some of the big American factories have opened branches, where as many as 9,000 and 10,000 operatives are employed. Others employ sole special selling agents, who hold exclusive rights to large territories. The latter method has been employed by many of the implement, motor and typewriter people.

Daily the War is putting a new complexion on the foreign markets, and the United States is the only nation that can step into the gap. When you figure that Germany's exports to the Allies were a billion and a half and that the Allies' exports to Germany were a billion, there remains for some nation to pick up the discarded business of two and a half billion a year.

THE United States is not the only country aiming at this great prize. England has called together an Institute of Commerce. What Germany has lost to the rest of the world, England with her matchless merchant marine may gain; but much of what she herself has lost to Germany, she can never regain. On every side, the United States is the only country ready to step into the gap.

The Door of Destiny has opened, the biggest opportunity Uncle Sam has had in his history. Nor can it be called an utterly selfish dollar diplomacy, as rivals in trade have already hinted. If the United States now failed to take advantage of the growing demands on its resources, all the warring nations might go hungry. Do not lose sight of that fact for one moment. An embargo on American food supplies would starve Europe in sixty to ninety days. This bluff of telling Uncle Sam he should be thankful to have his goods bought is the kind of bluff that should be called. Uncle Sam is the only member of the family of nations in a position to dictate terms; and he has not yet put an embargo on food shipments as England has on wool and Germany on wheat. The United States has got to the point of paying a cent extra a pound for bread and three dollars extra a barrel for flour, not in the interests of her farmers and millers, but because this country has not seen fit to stop the food supply going forward to those whose need is greater. Who shall say that the well-being of an industrial army of millions does not rank as high as the bootless slaughter of other millions in a wasting war?

Wouldn't be Fooled

WHEN The Lion and the Mouse was in the heyday of its success, six companies were touring simultaneously, one being booked on one occasion for a small town in Southern Illinois. Arriving in the town, the actors noticed a considerable gathering at the depot, and, on inquiry, learned that the crowd was down to see the lions and the mice. That night the attention was so slim that the local house manager was asked for an explanation.

"You see," he apologized, "this town has been fooled so many times by shows advertising what they didn't have, that the people went down today to make sure about the animals. They didn't find none, so they stayed away."

Tobacco Habit
BANISHED in 48 to 72 Hours

No craving for tobacco in any form after the first dose.

Don't try to quit the tobacco habit unaided. It's a losing fight against heavy odds and means a serious shock to the nervous system. Let the tobacco habit quit YOU. It will quit you, if you will just take Tobacco Redeemer, according to directions, for two or three days. It is the most marvelously quick and thoroughly reliable remedy for the tobacco habit the world has ever known.

Not a Substitute

Tobacco Redeemer is absolutely harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs of any kind. It is in no sense a substitute for tobacco. After finishing the treatment you have absolutely no desire to use tobacco again or to continue the use of the remedy. It quiets the nerves, and will make you feel better in every way. It makes not a particle of difference how long you have been using tobacco, how much you use or in what form you use it—whether you smoke cigars, cigarettes, pipe, chew plug or fine cut or use snuff. Tobacco Redeemer will positively banish every trace of desire in from 48 to 72 hours. This we absolutely guarantee in every case or money refunded.

Write today for our free booklet showing the deadly effect of tobacco upon the human system and positive proof that Tobacco Redeemer will quickly free you of the habit.

SUNKIST

California Seedless Navel Oranges Are Now at the Height of Deliciousness Order a Box From Your Dealer Tomorrow

These are the oranges that are famous for flavor—and they are sweetest, juiciest, firmest, tenderest, most delicious, most healthful now.

Now the lighter, less heating foods are in order—and these alluring salads and desserts are needed.

Sunkist are preferred not only for flavor—they are chosen too for these culinary advantages:

A free skin, easily removed. No seeds to mar in slicing. The tenderest pulp, which gives way at a touch of fork or spoon, and permits easy peeling of the individual sections.

Millions of housewives and world-famous chefs use SUNKIST for their combined convenience and flavor.

Try SUNKIST and see. You'll serve twice as many oranges when you know the facts about them.

Serve them tomorrow in some enticing way

Sunkist Lemons

Try these lemons, too—practically seedless, juicy, tart, full flavored. The best looking lemons to serve as a garnish, or in ice tea, or for lemonade. Use the juice wherever recipes call for vinegar. Write for our book which shows 86 uses for lemons.

Send for The Beautiful FREE Book of Charming Orange Recipes

An unusually attractive book printed in colors, just out, will be mailed free to all who send the coupon below, and every housewife ought to have it. It contains the choice recipes for Orange and Lemon Dishes—all prepared by a famous domestic science expert—just the kind of dishes you want to serve all summer. This book is worth sending for—send for your copy now. You'll be glad that you did this when you get the book. It also includes full details of our unusual premium offer.

Why We Give Exquisite Silver Premiums for SUNKIST Wrappers

SUNKIST Oranges and Lemons are the most beautiful fruits of their kind that California offers and dealers are tempted to remove the tissue wrappers to better display the color. But these wrappers are for your convenience in identifying the genuine SUNKIST and, therefore, should remain on the fruit. This is the sole reason why we make this offer, which tends to produce the desired result.

Send 12 Wrappers
